GEHRIG TIES GAME IN NINTH

Starts Rally by Double, Scores on Pinch Hit by Paschal—Pennock Again Beats Sherdel.

41,000 SEE CARDINALS LOSE

By JAMES R. HARRISON.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 7.—As exclusively predicted by most of the assembled experts, the Yankees beat the Cardinals in the fifth game of the world's series, and the big show started back for New York tonight with the Hugmen strong favorites to put over the final punch at the stadium on Saturday.

The Yanks rallied and tied the score in the ninth today, and won out in the tenth 3 to 2. Herb Pennock again vanquished his rival left-hander, Wee Willie Sherdel, before a bigger crowd than either of the two preceding ones in Sportsman's Park.

Forty-one thousand sportsmen and sportswomen filed into the park and watched, many with breaking hearts and agonized eyes, as the Yanks came from behind to snatch victory away from the Cardinals in the closing minutes.

Yankee gameness and superb fielding, and the pitching of Herbert Pennock, are the three chief reasons why it looks as if the world's series is almost over. The Yanks outgamed and also outlucked the Cardinals when the championship was virtually at stake; their poise and confidence and dash were things not to be matched by the Cardinals, who again looked nervous as they tried to fight back the raging men from Manhattan.

Up to Alexander Saturday.

One more victory, and it will be all over. On the good right arm of Grover Cleveland Alexander rest all the hopes and ambitions of baseball-mad St. Louis, which after waiting thirty-eight years for a world's series found that the sweet had turned to bitter, and the Cards were up against a slightly better ball club.

Unless Alexander, thirty-nine years old himself, and in the Winter of his career, can turn back the Yanks on Saturday, as he turned them back last Sunday, the Cardinals will lose a series which was conceded to them until Babe Ruth went berserk yesterday, and began hitting home runs to all points of the compass.

The hero of today's game, to this observer, was Mark Koenig, 22 years old, brought up on the sidewalks not of New York but of San Francisco. Mark Koenig, whose single sent in one run in the sixth, whose single launched the winning rally in the tenth, whose fielding was hard, fast and sure when the Yanks sorely needed fielding of that variety.

Koenig, who was called the weak link in the Yankee chain, who it was freely predicted by the prophets, would crack under the strain of a world's series, has not cracked yet. True, he bent two or three times, but he had something inside himself which made him come back and carry on and fight.

For sheer nerve it was a wonderful exhibition, for Koenig is a self-made man. Nerve does not come naturally to him. He is of a nervous, easily discouraged temperament, and even this Summer was often a weak reed, but he has been through the school of experience and today he was the bravest man on a brave team as he patted Pennock on the back and cheered up the other veterans and roamed far and wide to play a beautiful game of shortstopping.

Credit for Gehrig Also.

But this is not entirely the story of Koenig. There was Lou Gehrig, whose two-bagger opened the rally in the ninth. There was also Paschal, pinch-hitter extraordinary, whose single tied the score, and Tony Lazzeri, also from San Francisco, who missed a homer with the bases full by inches in the sixth, but came back in the tenth to decide the game with a long sacrifice fly.

The 41,000 St. Louis fans were radiating cheer and good humor when the ninth inning opened. Had not the Cardinals beaten Pennock and taken the lead in the series? Was not Sherdel pitching very good ball and getting stronger every minute? The answers were yes in both cases, and so the crowd sat back to watch an enjoyable inning.

But Gehrig laid his bat against a Sherdel slow ball and raised it in the air back of third base. The same wind that had blown Lazzeri's homer back into the hands of Billy Southworth took hold of this ball also and swept it toward the foul line. Thevenow chased it frantically, covering ground like a Charley Paddock, but the ball fell short for a fluky double—one of several fluky New York hits.

Lazzeri bunted, and so adroitly that Lester Bell, nabbing the ball at his left, could not get his man at first. Gehrig took third, and jumping Joe Dugan, the pride of Scarsdale, went to the plate. Joe was swinging a pair of bats when Miller Huggins yelled from the dugout and waved his hands, telling Dugan to take himself out of there and let Ben Paschal bat.

Dugan was so annoyed by this man-

Prussian Government Looks To Kaiser's Ultimate Return

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Co.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 7.—The Prussian Government envisages the ultimate return of the ex-Kaiser to Germany, judging by the text of the settlement it has concluded with the Hohenzollerns which was submitted to the Prussian Diet today for ratification. One sentence of it reads:

"The State places at the disposal of the former reigning King William II, should he desire, the royal palace and park at Homburg von der Hoehe as a residence for himself and his wife during his lifetime."

No official explanation of this astonishing hospitality is forthcoming as yet. In other respects the concessions made to the ex-monarch and his relatives have been foreseen. The Hohenzollerns will be one of the wealthiest, if not the wealthiest, families in Germany. With twenty-five castles and palaces in their possession they certainly will be the biggest owners of real estate. The furniture in these residences is assessed at 10,000,000 marks and the works of art at 8,000,000.

CANADA LIQUOR PLAN DECLARED FAILURE

U. S. Methodist Investigators Assert Government Control Has Increased Crime.

AND HAS BRED CORRUPTION

Even 'Half Chance Prohibition' Here Gives Better Results, It Is Asserted.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP).—Describing the system of governmental control of liquor in Canada as a failure, the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Church asserts in a statement made public today that even "the half-chance prohibition" in the United States has produced far better results.

Because of the recurring suggestions that the so-called Quebec system of Government liquor control be substituted for prohibition in this country, the board undertook a survey of conditions in Canada through Ernest A. Grant, its Assistant Research Secretary.

Conclusions set out in the board's statement have been based, it was explained, upon this survey and upon Government documents, newspaper articles and "facts and figures of undoubted authenticity." From these the board concludes that:

Government control in Canada has meant increased consumption of liquor; greatly increased use of liquors by young people and women; increased vice and crime; a corruption hitherto unknown; an illicit trade as great as that under any prohibition law; a swollen liquor bill and a great economic loss.

Reviewing conditions in Quebec, British Columbia, Manitoba and other Provinces where there is Government control, the board holds that there exist "all of the evils of the illicit traffic in the United States, plus the evils of Government-protected traffic as vicious in principle and practice as was the saloon system in the United States."

The brewers come in for a general broadside from the board, which asserts:

"The brewers who are asking a monopoly of the intoxicating liquor trade in the United states, and who advertise their wares vigorously in Quebec, are as troublesome there and elsewhere as they are in the United States."

Declaring that "corruption has run riot since the Government control system has been in operation," the board points to the recent customs scandal in Canada.

"This customs scandal," the report adds, "is nothing less than the child of the unholy relation between a Government-protected liquor traffic in Canada and a lawless, criminal traffic in the United States."

"Another unfortunate result of the Canadian system has been the undoubted handicap upon prosperity," the statement continues.

"Prohibition at its worst in the United States, half-chance prohibition, has yielded billions in profits to the plain people. Business has been booming and development has been rapid.

"In Canada in recent years development has been slow and painful, business has lagged, wages are comparatively low and the Dominion is being drained of skilled labor by the lure of high wages and prosperity across the border."

STINNES INTERESTS TO BE TRANSFERRED TO UNITED STATES

All of Family's Properties Will Be Vested in Two American Holding Companies.

$25,000,000 LOAN ARRANGED

This Will Clear Off the Present Outstanding Obligations and Provide New Capital.

PUBLIC WILL PARTICIPATE

But Magnate's Heirs Will Continue in Control and in Direction of All Interests.

BERLIN, Oct. 7 (AP).—Hugo Stinnes, son of the late industrial magnate, announced today that negotiations had been completed between the Stinnes family and an American banking syndicate for a loan. It was the intention, he said, "to combine the whole interests of the Stinnes family in two holding companies in the United States."

"The companies," he added, "will float in the American money market two loans at 7 per cent. to a total amount of $25,000,000."

In the first company, it is explained, will be combined all the interests of the Stinnes family, which were the foundation for the development of the elder Stinnes's firm — coal - mining shares and all industrial plants connected with the mining industry and also its coal business with transportation facilities in Germany and foreign countries, including ships and river craft.

In the second company will be combined all the Stinnes family interests not connected with the main industrial firm.

"The intention is," Herr Stinnes's statement says, "to dispose partly of these interests during the coming years. The second company will be the owner of all the shares of the first company. The continuing interest will remain in the hands of the Stinnes family, who will also retain active management. The issues of the two companies will be taken over by an American banking syndicate.

"The obligations of the Stinnes firm to German banking interests will be paid off by this transaction, the surplus from over $20,000,000 will be used by the two companies as additional working capital."

The amount of these obligations has been given as approximately $20,000,000. The principal firms in the syndicate are Halsey, Stuart & Co., A. G. Becker & Co. and Newman, Saunders & Co., all of New York.

Wall Street Expected Loan.

Wall Street has heard rumors for several weeks that the Stinnes interests intended to float a $25,000,000 loan, and it was generally assumed that A. G. Becker & Co., a Chicago house with a local branch, would head the syndicate. Bankers have regarded the time as opportune for a German loan of this character, as several have recently been oversubscribed.

The super-trust built up by Hugo Stinnes was made possible by the World War. At the time of his death the Stinnes fortune was estimated at a billion dollars. His dream was to create with his vast shipping, mining, chemical, motor, newspaper and other interests an organization that could make the German Government its agent.

When he died, things began to go badly with his estate. Early there were rumors of quarrels and bickerings between the two sons who finally came to an open break. Maturing obligations fell due faster than they could be met, and a collapse of the entire Stinnes organization was averted only by the intervention of industrial and financial leaders who feared that a crash of such magnitude would cripple Germany in its domestic and foreign commerce.

Stinnes properties were turned over to the biggest banks in Germany, forming a receivership, and converting some of them into cash.

WHIM SAVES FERDINAND.

Rumania's King Leaves Motorboat Just Before Its Engine Explodes.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 7 (AP).—A sudden whim of King Ferdinand yesterday saved a whole boatload of royalty from possible serious injury or death.

With former King George of Greece, Prince Christopher of Greece and several of his nephews and a Princess of Hohenzollern King Ferdinand was motor boating at Braila, on the Danube. The King's entourage followed the royal boat in another craft.

Acting on the spur of the moment, King Ferdinand decided that he and the members of the royal party would take the boat occupied by his entourage. Barely had the change been made when the engine on the royal launch exploded, injuring several persons and forcing the others to dive into the water.

The King's party hurried to their aid and pulled the dripping servants to safety.

British and German Business Leaders To Seek Entente at Conference in England

LONDON, Oct. 7.—An important and unusual conference looking toward an industrial and financial rapprochement between English and German financiers and industrialists will take place, this week-end at an historic English country house. The host and hostess, it is said, occupy a distinguished position in social and political circles, and a former Chancellor of the Exchequer will preside over the conference, which, though unofficial, has the approval of the Prime Minister.

The Germans, who will arrive tomorrow, number eleven and are leading figures in German industry and finance. They will meet ten men holding corresponding positions in Britain. The object of the conference is said to be to create such an understanding between Britain and Germany that productive industry in both countries shall be conducted both as regards home and world markets so as to give the amplest opportunities of wage earning to the workers of both countries.

Negotiations to this end have been going on for two years between German and British financial and industrial leaders. There is no commitment of any definite kind, however, by either the British or German delegates to the present conference.

Philadelphia Exposition a Failure; Unpaid Bills Total More Than $3,000,000

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7 (AP).—The Sesquicentennial International Exposition is a financial failure, Mayor Kendrick said today.

Opened June 1 in celebration of the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, fewer than 5,000,000 persons have passed through the gates, leaving the city to shoulder a big deficit.

"The financial failure of the exposition," said the Mayor, "has been due not to the management, but to the failure of the people to go there. While we should have had 25,000,000 people in attendance, we have had fewer than 5,000,000."

Efforts on the part of concessionaires to have the exposition reopened next year met with little encouragement from the directors at a meeting last night. Mayor Kendrick said to do so would be "financially impossible."

E. L. Austin, Director General, told the directors that the Sesqui-was running behind between $35,000 and $40,000 a week in operating expenses alone. Unpaid claims of contractors for construction and other work aggregate more than $3,000,000.

QUEEN MARIE TO SEE SON CAROL IN PARIS

Reconciliation and Restoration of His Rights to the Throne Are Expected to Follow.

HE ARRIVES FOR MEETING

Her Daughter, Queen Marie of Yugoslavia, Reported to Have Acted as Peacemaker.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 7.—The first happy result of Queen Marie's approaching visit to the United States has been considerably to hasten a reconciliation with her eldest son, Crown Prince Carol, whose renunciation of the Rumanian throne caused a sensation earlier in the year.

It was learned today from a member of the royal party that Prince Carol has arrived quietly in Paris and will have a friendly meeting with his mother before she sails for New York next Tuesday. It is also probable that the Crown Prince will be among those to wish the Queen bon voyage when her train leaves the Gare St. Lazare.

While rumors of a reconciliation and the re-establishment of Carol's rights to the throne have been circulating in European court circles for several weeks, many believed the event would not occur for some time. But the Crown Prince did not like the idea of his mother going away for such a long, difficult journey across the sea without first settling the family quarrel which arose over Carol's renunciation of the throne. Reports tonight said that as soon as King Ferdinand completely recovers from his illness Carol's position as heir-apparent will be formally and officially reestablished, and this news coincides with the plans for the reconciliation.

Carol Staying in Paris.

Carol is staying in a Paris hotel, it is said, anxiously awaiting the moment when he can be received by his mother.

It is related by one close to the Rumanian Court that the Queen's daughter, Queen Marie of Yugoslavia, is the real peacemaker behind the throne. When the pretty, young Yugoslav Queen was at Biarritz this Summer with King Alexander she paid a brief visit to Paris for the purpose of seeing Carol. She pleaded with the young Crown Prince to forget family differences and become reconciled with the Queen of Rumania.

The Yugoslav Queen explained that Queen Marie was going to America for several months and it would be a source of unhappiness for her to travel thousands of miles away from home with the breach still unhealed. Carol was moved and agreed to the reconciliation.

Last Sunday the Yugoslav Queen met her mother's train at the Yugoslav border and traveled with it across her kingdom. During these many hours she was in closest conversation with her mother, and it is believed urged her to accept Carol once again into close family relationship. The same arguments—the forthcoming voyage to America, &c., were presented to the Queen Mother with the result that she also promised to forget past differences with her son.

Such is the account given by those in contact with court circles, and there is reason to think Rumania's problems will be bettered to this extent when the Queen boards the Leviathan.

Feverish Rush at Hotel.

Feverish preparations were under way at the Ritz today for next week's departure. More than thirty trunks will carry the Queen's American wardrobe, which continues to arrive each day from three famous Paris dressmakers.

All the Queen's dresses will be ten inches from the ground, with long sleeves, ample width of skirt and a molded waistline to characterize nearly every model. The morning costumes are simple, while the afternoon gowns are in bright rich colors, with fur the usual trimming. Velvet and velours are chiefly seen in her evening gowns. The conventional small hats, spare of trimming, will be worn by the Queen.

Princess Ileana, her 17-year-old daughter, will wear the simple one-piece costumes, customarily seen on young girls who have not yet made their debut.

Crowds Drive Queen to Rooms.

The keen interest in the Queen's visit to America is indicated by the fact that a quietly planned shopping tour had to be abandoned by the Rumanian sovereign today and she was obliged to return to her hotel and telephone for her dressmakers when a small army of photographers and movie cameramen blocked her passage through the Rue de la Paix. The Queen said she had no objection to being "snapped," but that such a large crowd of photographers attracted so many persons that it was impossible to continue. The dressmakers hurried to the royal suite and made the fittings in one of the Queen's salons.

The fondness of the Queen for American motion pictures was proved today when, accompanied by Princess Ileana, she dropped everything and spent several hours in a Boulevard

CARPENDER CHARGES HALL CASE PERJURY

He Also Says Simpson Severed Trials So Others Cannot Benefit by His Alibi.

CALLS EVIDENCE FAKED

Mrs. Gibson Said to Waver in Identification—Smith Rules Against De Martini.

Henry de la Bruyere Carpender issued a statement yesterday charging that two State witnesses had committed purjury and expressing fear that he would not be tried. Mr. Carpender is one of the four persons indicted for the murder of the Rev. Dr. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills four years ago. The others are Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, widow of the clergyman, and her brothers, Henry Stevens and Willie Stevens.

Assistant Attorney General Alexander Simpson, in charge of the prosecution, said that all the defendants would be tried. He declined to comment on other parts of Mr. Carpender's statement. The special prosecutor indicated that he was certain that Mrs. Jane Gibson, the State's star witness, had not erred in identifying Mr. Carpender as at the scene of the murder. Reports that Mrs. Gibson first had identified Henry Stevens then switched to Mr. Carpender, and was now back to Henry Stevens, followed.

Would Extradite De Martini.

A hearing on the effort to extradite Felix De Martini, at one time a defense private detective, was told by Governor Smith yesterday. He signed the extradition papers, but action against De Martini was withheld pending the outcome of a hearing at 2 P. M. today before Supreme Court Justice Charles Druhan in Brooklyn. Inspector John J. Underwood, at Somerville, N. J., announced that irrespective of the outcome of the hearing the Somerset Grand Jury would be asked to indict him. This step may be taken next Thursday.

Mr. Carpender's statement was issued through his attorney, Russell E. Watson of New Brunswick. It was as follows:

"When I read the statement which Senator Simpson and his investigators were said to have obtained from the ex-State Trooper Dickman, its wild recklessness did not surprise me for two reasons: In the first place, ever since Mrs. Gibson perjured herself at the Somerville hearing and made false identifications, I have believed that the prosecution would feel the need of manufacturing other evidence in an attempt to procure the convictions in this case.

"In the second place, Dickman is a deserter from the army, a self-confessed bootlegger and is now charged with crime in this State. With this record and with Senator Simpson offering Dickman protection from punishment by the State of New Jersey, it is not difficult for me to believe that Dickman would say anything to meet the prosecution's necessities.

Denies Bribery Story.

"I have never seen Dickman or the late Prosecutor Beekman. I never was in Mr. Beekman's office and I have never in my life paid or offered a bribe to any one for anything either for my own account or that of any other person. Neither has any one else ever bribed or offered to bribe any one on my account.

"Now that I have been indicted for these murders, I want to be tried, so that my acquittal will receive the same publicity that the charges against me have received.

"The time of the murders has been definitely fixed as being between 10:15 and 10:20 on Sept. 14. As is well known, at that time I was several miles from the Phillips farm—at the home of J. K. Rice Jr. It is my firm conviction that Senator Simpson has determined not to try me with my cousins for the sole reason of endeavoring to deprive them of the benefit of the proof that Mrs. Gibson committed perjury when she testified that she saw me at the scene of the murders.

"My cousins are entitled to the benefits of such proof, because Mrs. Gibson identified us all as in the Lane together. My situation is, of course, inconvenient, tiresome and expensive. My only fear, however, is that I will never be tried, because when Senator Simpson has to prove facts to a jury, instead of romancing to the newspapers, my cousins will inevitably be acquitted."

Senator Simpson said:

"Mr. Carpender will be tried regardless of what the verdict may be in the first case. In fairness to the Grand Jury in its work, if for no other reason, all defendants will be tried. I do not care to comment on the statements of a man who is being tried for

LABOR CHIEFS PLAN TO UNIONIZE MEN IN AUTO INDUSTRY

Federation Convention Decides to Begin an Aggressive War on the "Open Shop."

CHIEF FIGHT IN DETROIT

PLEA FOR SOVIET RESENTED

Delegates Stirred When Sherwood Eddy Urges Them to Send a Commission to Russia.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 7.—The American Federation of Labor decided today to attempt the organization into unions of the one million unorganized workmen in the automobile industry, the third largest industry in the United States and the citadel of the non-union employers of the nation. Plans for this campaign will be considered at a conference of leaders of national and international unions, to be called by President Green. Detroit, which gives employment to more automobile workers than any other city, probably will be chosen as the spearhead for the attack.

Aggressive warfare against the open shop and "the American plan" was decided upon by the convention of the federation, where speakers charged that the extraordinary specialization in the automobile plants had reduced workmen to mere automatons, sentenced for life to perform one operation as a machine.

Organization of the automobile workers will be the greatest task of unionism ever attempted by the American Federation of Labor. The campaign to organize the steel workers made its appeal to 400,000 workers, of whom approximately 200,000 joined the union.

All jurisdictional questions will be swept aside, according to Green, and the organized trade union movement, as presented by the federation, will sink intra-union disputes in order to further the unionization of the automobile workers.

Plea for Russia Resented.

Resentment against the circumstances under which Sherwood Eddy, Secretary for Asia of the Young Men's Christian Association, obtained the floor, where he made a plea for the sending of an official delegation from the federation to Russia, resulted this evening in a reaction among the leaders against the proposal. The resolution on Russia promises to be unsparing in its condemnation of Mr. Eddy's suggestion and in its admonition to American unionists to have nothing to do with such a commission, or with any movement to have Soviet Russia recognized by the United States.

According to Max Hayes of the International Typographical Union and Timothy Healy of the Stationary Firemen's Union, who obtained permission from President Green for Mr. Eddy to speak, the latter was to have made some remarks on the barring of Detroit pulpits to labor speakers on Sunday. It was asserted that Mr. Eddy promised not to refer to Russia.

Because of the reaction among business men and clergymen following the closing of local pulpits to labor speakers and the cancellation of the invitation extended last June by the Young Men's Christian Association to Mr. Green, and as a result of the efforts of Dr. Worth M. Tippy, Executive Secretary, and James Myers, Industrial and field secretary of the Commission on the Church and Social Service of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, seventeen speakers will discuss the labor movement in churches next Sunday. Some of them are delegates to the federation convention and others are social secretaries of the Federal Council.

At the request of Dr. Tippy and Mr. Myers, Mr. Green reconsidered his refusal to speak at the First Congregational Church and consented to make a few remarks in appreciation of the sympathetic attitude of the Federal Council toward the labor movement.

To Organize Southern Workers.

The convention adopted resolutions to promote the organization of Southern textile workers, and the matter was put into the hands of the Executive Council for further consideration.

In submitting a resolution for the convocation of all union officers interested in organizing the automobile workers the Committee on Organiza-

FINAL SHELLING IMMINENT

Garrison Refuse to Yield City to Cantonese—38,000 Saved by Red Cross.

HANKOW, Oct. 7 (AP).—Penned up more than a month by the Red Cantonese armies besieging the city, half a million Chinese people face death by starvation, cold and gunfire in Wuchang. Large numbers of dead lie in the streets. Those remaining have eaten dogs, cats and rats and are dropping in public places of dying miserably in shelters into which they have crawled.

The Northern troops of Marshal Wu Pei-fu, garrisoning the city, having been refused terms of surrender, are holding on desperately, hoping for the arrival of their ally, Sun Chuan-fang, to break through the Cantonese cordon.

Meanwhile, the relentless and walled Cantonese outside the walls rest patiently on their arms, having blockaded all exits from the city, and await the time when they shall enter. What will happen then is not known.

Only a few miles away are the troops of Sun Chuan-fang, ruler of the five provinces of Eastern China, trying to thrust aside the Cantonese who oppose their march to the relief of beleaguered Wuchang.

Red Cross vessels on the Yangtze have now rescued 38,000 emaciated, starving Chinese women and children from Wuchang and have brought them to Hankow.

The Red Cross is doing remarkable work in relieving and caring for the starving 500,000 natives here.

Appalling scenes are witnessed with every trip across the Yangtze of the rescue vessels.

Several hundred have been trampled to death in the fight for places on the boats at Wuchang.

When the gates of Wuchang are opened, hordes plunge through like animals, packing the vessels beyond their capacity. Many are thus pushed overboard and drowned on every trip.

The work of rescue, which was begun on Sunday, will be continued this week. Then, unless the city capitulates, by the terms of the Cantonese ultimatum, the gates will be closed and a general bombardment from the Hanyang arsenal and the Cantonese troops surrounding Wuchang will be rained upon the northern army, defenders of the city, and its famishing populace.

Hard Fighting Near Kiukiang.

LONDON, Oct. 8 (AP).—The Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Mail estimated that there have been 20,000 casualties in the Cantonese army and the forces of Sun Chuan-fang as a consequence of the "fiercest fighting of the whole war" near Kiukiang and around Foyang Lake.

No decisive result was achieved by this fighting, according to the correspondent, who adds that the British gunboat Grat has been ordered to Kiukiang, where there is panic, due to fear that the Cantonese will break through Sun's line and capture the city. Such a possibility as the Cantonese breaking through, however, he says, appears to be remote.

Cobham Has Narrow Escape From Death After Flying to Australia and Back

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Sir Alan Cobham flew 28,000 miles to Australia and back without engine trouble, but today, in trying to fly the comparatively short distance from London to Manchester, he had to make a forced landing in a field near Nuneaton and had a remarkable escape from a serious mishap. In descending, Cobham's plane just missed high-tension electric wires carrying 6,000 volts.

The trouble was due to a faulty spark plug and Cobham could have righted matters in a few minutes, but there was no spanner on the machine. He had to walk three miles before he could borrow one that would fit from a passing motorist.

In the meantime the Lord Mayor and Corporation of Manchester, with many notable persons, were waiting to give Sir Alan a civic luncheon, and when the airman arrived, four hours after his scheduled time, the people of Manchester gave him a great welcome.

Cobham explained the reasons for his delay to the Lord Mayor and said it was curious that he could go to Australia and back, through all sorts of things, without trouble, but was not able to fly even a few miles in his own country without coming a cropper.

NEW MILK CHARGES ARE MADE BY MILLS; CALLS SMITH TO ACT

He Declares Banton Ignored Evidence for Eight Months Before Trying Clougher.

FACTS IN CASES REVIEWED

Higher-Ups Not Prosecuted, He Asserts in Three Speeches In and Near Hudson.

KELBY DEFENDS SECRECY

Says He Can't Dump His Evidence in Street Like Coal—Denies He 'Sits on Lid' of Milk Scandal.

Special to The New York Times.

HUDSON, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Representative Ogden L. Mills today replied to Governor Smith's request for specific information regarding alleged milk graft in New York City with a list of more than 100 places where, he said, milk violations were found. He made further charges and restated previous ones, devoting three speeches here largely to his reply to the Governor.

The Republican candidate for Governor declared that the record of the milk situation was "absolutely damning and that the evidence was pigeonholed by the District Attorney of New York County until after the election, and as far as I know has never been even acted upon since the election." He asserted that the record "must have been known to the Governor ever since May, 1925."

At noon Mr. Mills spoke at an outdoor gathering of textile workers at Fishkill. In the afternoon he spoke before the Republican women of Columbia County at the Hotel Worth, where he said, regarding the milk question:

"The facts are not going to be suppressed. We will have an independent investigation. If we have no investigation before Nov. 2 we will have one soon after, and I tell you now and now that every crook involved in the milk scandal is going to jail before I get through."

This evening, before a large gathering in the City Hall auditorium, he declared that Governor Smith's statement, published today, was "a complete admission of the facts as I have stated them."

"He invites me to give additional evidence in regard to the milk scandal in New York City," Mr. Mills continued. "I will give him evidence that the entire milk supply of the City of New York was being tampered with in the Spring of 1925."

Says He Speaks as Party Leader.

In reply to Governor Smith's assertion that it was not customary for the Governor upon the request of a private citizen to call extraordinary sessions of the Grand Jury and set aside legally elected constitutional officers, Mr. Mills declared that he was not speaking as a private citizen.

"Speaking as a leader of the Republican Party in this State by virtue of the action of a great convention two weeks ago and not as a private individual, I demand a real investigation," he said.

Mr. Mills before entering upon his reply to Governor Smith endorsed his fellow-candidates, and when he mentioned the name of Senator Wadsworth it was greeted with an outburst of applause. Although, according to local leaders, there is a dry sentiment in the county, the city itself is said to be wet.

Mr. Mills, besides discussing the milk investigation for more than an hour while people unable to get seats stood in the galleries and around the hall, took up State finance. Before doing so he asked his audience if they were tired. Shouts of "No, go on!" came from all parts of the hall and he continued speaking for another half hour.

Says Complainants Were Abused.

In his textile mill speech, where he was well received by several hundred workers, Mr. Mills pointed to the increased State debt and taxation and attacked the Governor's borrowing policy. The evening meeting he devoted mostly to the milk question.

"The Governor admits that the Citizens' Union requested him to call for special grand juries and to put the Attorney General in charge of an independent investigation of the milk scandal," said Mr. Mills. "The Governor admits that the Citizens' Union called his attention to the facts that the undisputed evidence was that Clougher, Secretary to the Health Commissioner, sabotaged to have 90 per cent. of the graft because he had to divide with others.

"He does not mention the fact that the Citizens' Union based its request on the fact that the same District Attorneys who have this case in charge were in office last Spring and when this matter was laid before them they professed to be unable to do anything, but turned on the complainants and attacked them as if they were the offenders.

"The Governor having admitted the fact then, seems to excuse his failure to act on the ground of lack of evidence. What kind of evidence can the Governor want?"

Charges Evidence Was Ignored.

Mr. Mills reviewed the charges by Harold G. Aron, acting on behalf of the Republican Advisory Committee.

"For his services to the public in making the disclosures he was abused by the Mayor of the city and by the District Attorney of New York County," said Mr. Mills. "The District Attorney of Bronx County conducted a farcical investigation which lasted twenty-four hours and in which every attempt was made to browbeat Mr. Aron.

"But we were not to be deterred and we took our facts to the District Attorney of New York County, who resigned Mr. Pecora in the case. We gave Mr. Pecora detailed evidence, including the numbers of cars, numbers of trucks, cans taken from the milk cans showing places of shipment and the date of shipment.

"The committee gave to Mr. Pecora the name of Harry Daniger as the principal corruptionist.

"The committee gave to Mr. Pecora the name of Thomas J. Clougher. Daniger and Clougher were convicted during the early part of 1926, after the municipal election was over and the evidence of their guilt was submitted eight months before.

"The committee gave Mr. Banton and Mr. Pecora enough evidence and enough leads to have unearthed the entire filthy trail of graft in the Spring of 1925 and they pigeon-holed it all. They allowed the people of New York City to drink adulterated milk and cream for eight months longer."

Mr. Mills said Governor Smith "invites me to give him additional evidence. I will give him evidence that the entire milk supply of the City of New York was being tampered with in the Spring of 1925, and here it is:

"In June the Republican Committee through its agent, purchased 163 samples of milk from groceries, delicatessen stores, dairies and chain stores and other places in Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx. A list of which I am attaching to this statement. One hundred and sixty-three samples were taken to two laboratories, the Pease Laboratory, formerly the Lederle at 39 West Thirty-eighth Street, and the Research Laboratories, Inc., at 26 West Thirty-second Street, New York City. The analytical tests made by these laboratories showed that of the 163 samples, forty only were above or nearly above the minimum requirements of the sanitary code. Indicating that 80 per cent. of the supply of New York City was adulterated.

"The committee gave Mr. Pecora the tag taken from the cans of the Universal Milk Company on April 7, which showed that the milk was pasteurized on March 20, and a tag taken from a can of the Valley Company on April 10, showing that the cream was pasteurized on March 25.

The committee gave Mr. Pecora the name of the Doner Milk Company, and the name of Samuel Doner as those responsible for a carload of bootleg cream unloaded on April 10, from a Chicago & Southwestern Railroad car, and they gave Mr. Pecora the number of the truck that brought the cream from Jersey City to New York."

Demands Hunt for Higher Ups.

Continuing, Mr. Mills said that the Health Commissioner of New York City estimates that the graft amounts to from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 a year.

"To date the only inside men convicted have been one subordinate official of the Law Department of the City of New York," he declared. Does the Governor believe that with that amount of money available for graft purposes a secretary and an assistant corporation counsel were the only ones that got it all?

"I am not inaccurate. The Governor is misstating the facts. I quote from the letter of the Citizens Union addressed to Governor Smith, dated July 26, 1926, which reads in part as follows:

"'On July 8, about a week after our request was addressed to you, we again conferred with the Mayor and he then assured us that he still favored State action, but doubted your willingness to authorize it even upon his request. According to his position as then stated, the unwillingness was yours, and not his.'"

In conclusion Mr. Mills referred to the investigation under "Mr. Kelby, former Controller Craig's law partner without power of subpoena." He declared that "Mr. Kelby only began to map out the program thirty-seven days after he was appointed. What he has accomplished since he mapped out his program is known only to Mr. Kelby. The facts have been carefully withheld from the public.

"This is a matter which directly affects the health of 6,000,000 people. Is the Governor satisfied with an investigator who considers the matter of such little importance that he wastes thirty-seven days in getting started, and, as far as the public knows, has done nothing since he did get started?

"If the Governor is satisfied with that kind of activity, if the Governor thinks this display of zeal is adequate for the protection of the public health, I do not."

KELBY ANSWERS MILLS.

Says He's Not "Sitting on Lid" of Milk Graft for Political Ends.

Answering the criticism of Congressman Ogden L. Mills, Republican Gubernatorial candidate, of Governor Smith's refusal to comply with the request of the Citizen's Union for the appointment of the Attorney General to investigate through Special Grand Juries grafting in the Health Department, former Supreme Court Justice Charles H. Kelby, who was appointed by Mayor Walker to investigate the graft charges, declared yesterday that he had maintained secrecy in his inquiry because "I don't want to give the crooks involved an opportunity to intimidate important witnesses and equip themselves with alibis."

"When Mayor Walker asked me to accept the post of investigator of Health Commissioner Harris's allegations of grafting by officials and outsiders in the distribution of milk and other foodstuffs in this city," Mr. Kelby said, "it was definitely stipulated that I was to have a free hand and was to conduct the investigation along my own lines. Since then neither the Mayor nor anybody else has attempted to dictate how the investigation should be conducted, and I alone am responsible for the fact that my interrogation of witnesses has been conducted in secret.

Won't Be Swayed by Politics.

"I have not permitted politics to interfere in my investigation in any respect," continued the former jurist, who is a Republican. "My decision to hold secret hearings came about at the beginning of the investigation, following a conference with Health Commissioner Harris and Mr. Hemstreet in the commissioner's office. I realized then that it would be unwise immediately to make public what I might learn about the reported grafting, and the developments since then have amply justified my decision.

"The insinuation that I am sitting on the lid in the investigation for political purposes is absurd. I'm not in the least concerned with the political situation in either the Democratic or the Republican Party. I am intent on getting at the facts, and have found that the best way to get facts in an investigation of this kind is to prevent those involved from learning what we have uncovered until the evidence has been presented to the Grand Juries.

"We have been informed that money was paid to permit violations of the health laws in connection with the distribution of milk and butter. It would be absurd for me to reveal the nature of this evidence before it is in the hands of the Grand Juries. It would give those involved the opportunity to intimidate witnesses and arrange alibis to defeat justice.

"I don't know where Mr. Mills gets his information that the investigation of these charges is not being pursued vigorously or what prompted the insinuation that I or anybody else in the investigation is sitting on the lid as a means of protecting anybody. If anybody in or out of the Health Department is guilty of grafting in connection with food distribution in this city he'll have to stand the consequences.

Difficulties of Inquiry.

Mr. Mills's statements are not going to deter me in carrying out my determination to establish the guilt of those involved. This is particularly true of three men I've got in mind, and against whom we have been obtaining evidence. I've made public everything it would be advisable to reveal at the close of each of my hearings, but I have kept important admissions secret and have placed this evidence under lock and key.

"We have encountered much difficulty in obtaining the evidence we are after. Invariably witnesses subpoenaed by us have refused to talk and have gone off to consult with their lawyers. The lawyers then would call on us and ask me to grant immunity to their clients, but in every instance I have refused. Then the witnesses would come back, and it was like pulling teeth to get the evidence we are after from them.

"All of this evidence and other evidence we expect to get will be submitted to the Grand Juries for action at the proper time. I can't dump this evidence on the street like a load of coal. There are some features of this investigation which we may make public at the appropriate time, but I am not setting that time by any political pressure.

"Mr. Mills persists in making a misstatement which I have frequently denied. That is that I am the law partner of former Controller Charles L. Craig. Mr. Craig is not my law partner. It is true that he shares the same law offices with me, but there are three other lawyers in that office. All pay a proportionate share of the expenses of the office, but we have no business relationship of any character.

SAYS SMITH BLOCKED INQUIRY.

Hirshfield Declares He Made Effort to Uncover Milk Graft.

Governor Smith blocked an attempt to uncover milk graft in the City Health Department while Magistrate David Hirshfield was Commissioner of Accounts, before the present investigation was started, the Magistrate declared last night in an address before the Men's Club of the Congregation Shaare Torah, at 2,252 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn.

"I had good reason to believe there was graft in the Health Department, so I issued subpoenas in an effort to bring the affair to light," Magistrate Hirshfield said. "Then a bill was introduced in the State Legislature which robbed me of the power to issue subpoenas as Commissioner of Accounts." Governor Smith signed the bill in spite of the fact that he was informed of its significance, Magistrate Hirshfield asserted.

Since Mr. Hirshfield left his position as Commissioner under ex-Mayor John F. Hylan, the Commissioner of Accounts again has the subpoena power according to another bill signed by Smith, the Magistrate observed.

"The milk investigation on now is not on the level," Mr. Hirshfield complained. "If they are honest let them hold their hearings in public, where the people can learn what is going on."

ELLIOTT IS OPPOSED TO SEATING OF VARE

McAdoo Candidate for Senate Also Against F. L. Smith—Shortridge Keeps Open Mind.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 7.—John B. Elliott, Democratic nominee for the Senate backed by W. G. McAdoo, would oppose the seating of Representative Vare of Pennsylvania or Frank L. Smith of Illinois, Republicans, by the United States Senate because of the primary scandals if either is elected.

Senator Samuel W. Shortridge, Republican, seeking re-election, will not make a definite statement, declining to put himself in the position of having reached a decision before he has been given full opportunity to study and judge the evidence.

Outwardly, at least, there is complete harmony between Shortridge and Lieut. Gov. C. C. Young, Republican nominee for Governor, who is backed by Senator Hiram Johnson. In defiance of the regular Republican organization they will speak from the same platform on several occasions.

Senator Shortridge believes that prosperity under the Coolidge Administration and his own record will result in at least 300,000 majority for the Republican ticket. He will stress protective tariff not alone for Californian products but for the products of all sections of the country.

Efforts are being made by some Democratic leaders to patch up a temporary truce in the fight between Mr. McAdoo, the backer of Elliott, and the recognized Democratic organization leaders, at least to an extent which will avoid open expression of enmity.

The situation, aside from the bitterness over the McAdoo revolt against the old-time leadership, is difficult, as Elliott is running as an extreme dry and Justus S. Wardell, organization nominee for Governor, has declared for modification of the Volstead act with the approval of the old-time leaders.

NAME DONNELLY FOR BENCH

Democrats Pick Assistant Corporation Counsel for City Court.

Meeting at organization headquarters, 862 Tremont Avenue, last night, an Executive Committee of the Democratic organization designated James A. Donnelly of 3,769 Morris Avenue as nominee for City Court Justice. Donnelly has been connected with the Democratic Party for thirty years. His nomination follows Justice Joseph M. Callahan's withdrawal to accept a nomination as Supreme Court candidate.

In 1896 Donnelly represented the Fourth Assembly District of Manhattan in the State Assembly. He has held various positions and is now an assistant corporation counsel. When the City of New York was fighting the Dedmon Company, original builders of the subways, in court, Donnelly, as a city representative, is said to have saved the municipality $25,000,000.

The new nominee is married and has five children.

NAME WOMAN FOR CONGRESS

Democrats Designate Mrs. McNair of Paterson, N. J.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 7.—Mrs. Susan A. McNair of 601 Twenty-fifth Street, Paterson, has been designated as the Democratic candidate for Congress from the Seventh New Jersey District. She succeeds Walter H. Gardner, who withdrew last Saturday because of ill health. Notice of the substitution was filed today with the Secretary of State by James J. Murner, Chairman of the Passaic Democratic County Committee.

The selection of Mrs. McNair places two women on the Democratic slate for Congress. The other is Mrs. Mary T. Norton of Jersey City, the first woman to represent New Jersey at Washington and a candidate for re-election from the Twelfth District. Mrs. McNair is a member of the Paterson Park Commission.

COOLIDGE NEEDS HIM, SAYS WADSWORTH

Senator Emphasizes Need of Insuring Continuation of President's Policies.

STRESSES DRY LAW REPEAL

Speaks at Ogdensburg, Carthage and Gouverneur—Hears of Trend to "Smith and Wadsworth."

Special to The New York Times.

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., Oct. 7.—After drawing a crowd at Gouverneur from a newspaper bulletin board, where the score of the world series game was being posted, to hear him advocate the repeal of the prohibition amendment this afternoon, Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr. came here tonight to stress national issues at a campaign meeting in the Strand Theatre. He based his plea for re-election upon what he said was the importance of supporting President Coolidge with a Republican Congress.

A Democratic House, he declared, "means friction between the Chief Executive and that portion of the legislative branch." He continued:

"It means that all the revenue measures and supply bills will originate in an atmosphere controlled by those who are hostile to the policies of the President of the United States. So close is the Senate now in the matter of political divisions that the people of thirty-two States will decide on Nov. 2 whether the next Senate will be Democrat or Republican.

"Whether or not you take any interest in my political fortunes, the fact is that it is essential that both the Senate and the House remain Republican, unless we have reached that point in our consideration of the conditions in this country where we no longer want a continuation of the policies which have been in effect in Washington.

"I cannot conceive of the possibility that the people of this country will deliberately bring about a state of affairs under which the hands of Calvin Coolidge are to be tied during the next two years. Let us look back to remind ourselves of the conditions existing when we took over the Government from our Democratic friends in 1921."

Senator Wadsworth continued that 3,000,000 men were then out of work, according to the Department of Labor, that Liberty bonds, reflecting the credit of the Government, were quoted at 85 cents on the dollar and that the country was threatened with an immense influx of cheap goods coming from Europe and a heavy tide of immigration. The nation was carrying the heaviest tax burden ever carried by any people with the exception of Great Britain.

"Today you cannot find any unemployment worthy of the name," he continued. "The tax burden has been reduced by three successive revisions. They have accomplished a reduction which in the aggregate amounts to $3,000,000,000 a year. Liberty bonds have gone back to par, and above, so entrenched now is the credit of the Government. All but one of the foreign debts have been settled and approximately $10,000,000,000 has been paid back to those who lent it and who ought not to be asked to carry it.

"The tariff law has been passed to protect the people as they were climbing back on their feet after the war and getting to work again. The national debt has been reduced by $6,000,000,000 and the interest charge has been reduced by $250,000,000.

"And the fine thing about this administration is that we have had in the White House a man who knows where a dollar comes from. He knows something about the simple and yet sometimes grim problems of life, how men and women have to scramble to get along, who sometimes find it difficult to lay aside a dollar or two to save for the proverbial rainy day, or for their children to inherit and thus gain a better start in life than their parents had.

Senator Wadsworth also spoke to audiences at Carthage, were a slight flurry of snow greeted him, and at Canton. He discussed prohibition in the same terms he employed yesterday and was listened to with respectful attention and some applause. Much of the territory he passed through today is noted for the strength of its dry sentiment.

Harry F. Ingram, Chairman of the St. Lawrence County Republican Committee, met Senator Wadsworth's bus at Carthage, where he was greeted by H. E. Cook, former Dean of the State College of Agriculture at Canton. The Senator was told by Republican leaders that whatever antagonism his candidacy has aroused in this section through his desire for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment was likely to be more than overbalanced by the loyalty of the region to President Coolidge and Representative Snell of St. Lawrence County and by Democratic support which he would win from former Justice Wagner.

Senator Wadsworth was entertained at dinner by Chairman Ingram at the Century Club before tonight's meeting. He will hold meetings tomorrow at Massena, Malone, Chateauguay and at Plattsburg in the evening.

Talk of "Smith and Wadsworth."

WATERTOWN, Oct. 7 (AP).—To the complicated situation which has arisen in northwestern New York over prohibition were added today reports of Republican leaders to Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr., that there is a distinct trend in public sentiment here toward the "Smith and Wadsworth" combination.

This report the leaders, all influential in this locality, based on the attendance at Senator Wadsworth's meeting here last night of a large number of Democrats who said they intend to vote for Wadsworth, at the same time maintaining their allegiance to the Democratic cause by voting for Governor Smith.

DAVIS AT CLARKSBURG SHOW

Ex-Candidate for President Gets Ovation at Exposition Here.

The Clarksburg, W. Va., Industrial Exposition at the Waldorf suddenly developed into an old-time rally yesterday morning when John W. Davis, former Democratic candidate for President and a resident of Clarksburg, walked in unannounced.

Mr. Davis said that despite the years he has lived in New York, he calls it only his workshop, while Clarksburg, his childhood home, would always be his home. More than a hundred old friends met him and extended an enthusiastic greeting. Before leaving he said that he had learned more about Clarksburg at the exposition than while living there.

REGISTER OR YOU CANNOT VOTE!

If you do not register you cannot vote. There will be registration in New York city all this week. The registration places will be open from 5 to 10:30 P. M. the first five days and from 7 A. M. to 10 P. M. on Saturday.

Republicans Assail Cristman's Petition; Protest 'Independent Republican' Designation

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 7.—On the ground that the name "Independent Republican" used by the supporters of Franklin W. Cristman, dry candidate for the United States Senate, is an infringement on the name of the Republican party, the latter's State organization moved today to compel its alteration.

County Chairman Edward Easton filed with Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, Secretary of State, a protest signed by George K. Morris, State Chairman, against the use of the name by the Cristman followers. Mr. Easton said he had a letter from Lafayette B. Glenson, Secretary of the Republican State Committee, which pointed out that the organization hoped to bring about an amicable adjustment of the matter without going into court.

The objection by Mr. Morris was contained in a letter which read as follows:

"I, George K. Morris, Chairman of the Republican State Committee of the State of New York, certificate of which fact has been duly filed in the office of the Secretary of State, do hereby object to the receipt and filing of the certificate or certificates purporting to be certificates of nomination of Franklin W. Cristman for the office of United States Senator, upon the ground and for the reason that the name 'Independent Republican,' appearing on said certificate or certificates as the party name chosen by the signers thereto, is an infringement upon and wrongful use of the name of the Republican party, which said party is duly organized and existing in pursuance of the election law of the State of New York."

The Rev. S. E. Nicholson, Chairman of the Independent Republican Campaign Committee for Franklin W. Cristman, said yesterday that in negotiations with the Republicans the proposal to change the title of the committee had been thoroughly discussed and that the matter had been submitted by him to the members and had been turned down.

Mr. Nicholson said the committee was determined to take the matter into court if the protest filed with the Secretary of State shall prevail.

SMITH AND WAGNER OPEN FIGHT TONIGHT

CANDIDATE QUITS BENCH

Justice Wagner Now Plans a Hard Campaign and Will Begin Stumping on Monday.

Governor Alfred E. Smith and Robert F. Wagner, Democratic nominees for Governor and United States Senator, cleared decks yesterday for action in their campaign, which will begin tonight with the official notification ceremonies at the National Democratic Club.

In preparation for an active speaking campaign, which he will undertake with the Governor, beginning on Monday, Justice Wagner resigned from the bench. Mr. Wagner handed his resignation to the Governor in the latter's suite at the Biltmore at 6 o'clock, having signed his last judicial order a short time before. He was unable to resign earlier because of matters before him which required his attention and could not be transferred to another Justice without delay to litigants. He has devoted practically all his time since his nomination at the convention at Syracuse to clearing up his judicial work so that he might resign.

Justice Wagner's resignation was made quite a ceremony. There were several newspaper photographers present and a battery of Kleigl lights was installed so that a motion picture might be taken.

Smith Sees Loss to Bench.

When the ceremony was concluded, Governor Smith clapped Justice Wagner on the shoulder and said:

"This is not so good for the Supreme Court, but it's great for the United States Senate."

Mr. Wagner later expressed regret at leaving the bench and his colleagues, with whom he said it had been a great pleasure to be associated. "It has been interesting work," he said, "and it has been a privilege to work with the Judges and juries. My experience with jurors is that they invariably decided justly, even in involved cases and in cases where sympathy might have led to unfair verdicts. My last thought on leaving the bench is the importance of jury duty, for the jurors have really a more important function than the Judge. No citizen should endeavor to shirk jury duty."

The first heavy guns in the Smith-Wagner campaign undoubtedly will be fired tonight at the notification ceremonies. Governor Smith, who so far has confined himself to a reply to the milk charges of Representative Ogden L. Mills, his Republican opponent, will touch upon other issues tonight.

Governor Ready for Attack.

The Governor has been preparing his speech for several days and is reported to be provided with arguments, facts and figures to a greater extent than ever before. In a speech at a closed meeting of the Tammany Speakers' Bureau on Wednesday evening the Governor outlined the issues, as he saw them, for the use of the Tammany speakers. Those at the meeting said he had never been more convincing and took his speech as an indication of what might be expected in his acceptance of renomination tonight and when he takes the stump next week.

Governor Smith, it was said, was ready to reply to Mr. Mills's charges of extravagance, to explain his granting of pardons and commutation of sentence to convicts and to touch further on the milk situation, if Mr. Mills brought out anything new.

The Governor seems confident of success. Asked to reply in detail to statements and charges made by Mr. Mills, he said:

"I cannot keep commenting on such statements. I don't want to be making political speeches from a hotel room. If I were to do so, some one might get the idea that I was worried about this campaign. What's the use, anyhow? As I see it, I might as well go on a vacation from now until election."

There has been some talk that there was considerable resentment in Tammany against the Governor on account of Police Commissioner McLaughlin, for whose appointment the Governor is held responsible, particularly because of raids by the police on several Tammany clubs. The Governor was asked about this.

"I don't think there is anything to that," he replied.

City Chamberlain Edward J. Flynn, Democratic leader of the Bronx, will preside at the notification ceremonies, which will be broadcast from station WEAF. The candidates to be notified include, besides Governor Smith and Judge Wagner, State Chairman Edwin Corning of Albany, candidate for Lieutenant Governor; Morris S. Tremaine of Buffalo, candidate for Controller, and Benjamin Stolz of Syracuse, candidate for Attorney General.

Both to Campaign Up-State.

The Democratic campaign strategists have stuck to their plan of having Governor Smith and Judge Wagner campaign together up-State. The theory is that Judge Wagner, who from the viewpoint of the Democratic campaign managers, is more in need of votes than the Governor, will be helped by his association with the Governor to win the votes of a number of "wet" Democrats who are reported to be undecided whether to vote for him or Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr., his Republican opponent.

The up-State tour of the two candidates will last two weeks and the present plan is for both to return to New York City for the final week of the campaign. The itinerary follows:

Monday, Oct. 11, Oneonta; Tuesday, Oct. 12, Binghamton; Wednesday, Oct. 13, Elmira; Thursday, Oct. 14, Hornell; Friday, Oct. 15, Dunkirk; Saturday, Oct. 16, Buffalo.

Monday, Oct. 18, Rochester; Tuesday, Oct. 19, Syracuse; Wednesday, Oct. 20, Utica; Thursday, Oct. 21, Troy; Friday, Oct. 22, Schenectady; Saturday, Oct. 23, Albany.

It was said at Judge Wagner's headquarters in the Biltmore that some side trips might be arranged so that he might make speeches in the daytime in addition to those which he will make with the Governor at night.

SHEFFIELD PREDICTS REPUBLICAN VICTORY

Tells Women Mills Is Better Fitted for Governor Than Smith —Hits Tammany and Cristman.

The personalities of the Republican and Democratic candidates for Governor and United States Senator in New York this Fall were stressed yesterday by James R. Sheffield, American Ambassador to Mexico, who spoke at the Women's National Republican Club, 8 East Thirty-seventh Street, as warrant for Republican victory.

About 200 women applauded Mr. Sheffield as he portrayed the environment, education, traditions and wealth of the two Republican candidates. Of the election of Mr. Mills, he said:

"In these days, when wealth is as much a handicap as poverty is a stepping-stone to political preferment, it is a matter of vast importance to the Republic that we prove our proud boast of knowing neither rich nor poor in our political life.

"I honor the man who can rise from the sidewalks of New York to the Governorship. It is a triumph of true democracy. But it would be a sad refutation of our boasted free institutions if a different beginning in life, with resistance to all the temptations that a life of ease holds forth, barred for the same office an equally or even better-equipped American."

The Ambassador asserted that Mr. Mills was better equipped for the Governorship than Governor Smith. "He has positive qualifications which his opponent sadly lacks," he said. "He has knowledge of taxation and finance. Governor Smith has never shown any knowledge of taxation. His saddling the State with $100,000,000 borrowed debt is proof of the fact that he has no special knowledge of finance."

Turning to the campaign of Senator Wadsworth against Justice Robert F. Wagner, Mr. Sheffield characterized the Senator as "a courageous gentleman of birth, education and culture, into whose life from earliest childhood has gone refinement and culture, and into whose soul purity, truth, honor."

He criticised Cristman's backers strongly.

The Ambassador made an appeal for Wadsworth's election on the basis of supporting President Coolidge. He predicted a Republican victory in the State and urged his audience to get women voters registered.

Miss Alice Hill Chittenden presided at the meeting.

EDWARDS ATTACKS BORAH ON WADSWORTH

New Jersey Senator Charges Change of Front on Dry Stand to Save Republican Candidates.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Senator Edwards of New Jersey, one of the most zealous anti-prohibitionists in Congress, demanded today to know why Senator Borah had not raised a protesting voice against Senator Wadsworth's insistence on changing the liquor laws.

The New Jersey Senator recalled particularly the Borah charge of "nullification" against New York, added that, according to Borah logic, Wadsworth was the "Grand Kleagle" of nullificationists and charged that Mr. Borah was permitting himself to be swayed by party necessity.

But Mr. Borah would only say that he had written to Representative John Q. Tilson a letter on the matter and that Mr. Tilson could give out what part of the letter he wanted in New York. Yesterday Mr. Tilson telephoned, asking Senator Borah to come to New York to help Mr. Wadsworth, and Mr. Borah replied today.

In his statement today, Senator Edwards reviewed Senator Borah's stand against dry referendums, and continued:

"But then such able warriors as Wadsworth, Butler, Smith of Illinois and Vare must be saved. If prohibition must sink to further degrading depths in the operation, well and good. The Grand Old Party must be kept in power even if corruption—official and public—is to be tolerated."

COMMUNISTS NAME TICKET.

Workers' Party Files Slate at Albany With Gitlow for Governor.

The Workers' Party, the political organization of the Communists, announced yesterday that it had filed nominations for a full State ticket with the Secretary of State at Albany. Benjamin Gitlow was named for Governor, Franklin P. Brill for Lieutenant-Governor, Juliet Stuart Poynts, for Controller, Arthur S. Leeds for Attorney General, and William F. Dunne for United States Senator.

A ratification meeting will be held at Hunt's Point Palace, Southern Boulevard and East 163d Street, the Bronx, on Oct. 22.

RELIGIOUS ISSUE RAISED IN OKLAHOMA

Democrats Fear Statement of State Committee Chairman Will Cause Split.

KLAN IS ALSO A FACTOR

Republicans Concede Senator Harreld Is in Desperate Plight—State Contest Bitter.

From a Staff Correspondent.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 7.—The bitterness of the campaign for Federal and State offices now being waged in Oklahoma has been increased by a statement issued by George D. Key, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, in which he charges that Republican activities are "peculiarly calculated to produce a religious war in Oklahoma."

In the opinion of scores of prominent Democrats, the statement is one which may produce a serious division in their ranks, so far as the battle for control of the State Government is concerned, and may even endanger the chances of some of their candidates for Congress whose election, up to the present moment, has been conceded, even in the Republican camp.

The election of State officers has a National importance, for the complexion of Oklahoma's delegation to the next Democratic National Convention to a certain degree rests on the success or failure of the party's candidate for Governor, Henry Johnston. He has been accused of being, and does not deny, that he is still an active member of the Ku Klux Klan. The favorite son of the Klan, so far as the Democratic Presidential nomination of 1926 is concerned, is, as in 1924, William Gibbs McAdoo. Practically to a man, the forces that led McAdoo's fight in Oklahoma four years ago are today lined up behind Johnston.

Religious and Klan Issues.

Whether or not the religious issue of the State campaign will be reflected in the contest for Federal offices only time can tell. So far most of the bitterness seems confined to the Governorship rivalry, in which the candidates of both parties are charged with Klan membership.

Omer K. Benedick, the Republican nominee, admits that he was a member five years ago, but insists that since then he has been outside the sheet. Mr. Johnston, in the face of the charges hurled at him, remains as silent as an oyster. Such Democrats as Governor M. E. Trapp, declare the situation may produce a surprise on Nov. 2 and give to Oklahoma her first Republican Governor.

Mr. Key's blast was principally directed at a group of prominent Republicans, chief among them being Mr. Benedick and James J. McGraw, the Tulsa banker, who is a former Republican National Committeeman, and was in 1920 one of General Leonard Wood's managers in his contest for the Republican Presidential nomination.

Mr. McGraw, one of the prominent Catholics of the State, was referred to as a "fourth degree Knight of Columbus" and was denounced as an enemy of the Masonic order, as a man who looked on the public school system as a nuisance and a curse to American childhood." The statement bristles with epithets such as "thugs and rounders" and "liars."

Pessimistic Democrats, however, do not believe the statement and the feeling it has aroused will have any serious results, so far as the contest for the United States Senate is concerned, and the consensus continues that, as matters now stand, Elmer Thomas, the Democratic nominee, should win by a majority of substantial proportion over his rival, Senator Harreld.

Shift to Tariff Defense.

With the Republican leaders privately admitting that the position of Senator Harreld is a desperate one and that the advantage now appears to be with Mr. Thomas, those who are directing the Senator's campaign are changing their original plan of battle and are beginning to emphasize the importance of national issues, mainly the tariff. Also they are calling attention to the fact that Administration control of the Senate in the Seventieth Congress is imperiled and are urging Republicans to support Senator Harreld, and by so doing make President Coolidge's position stronger before the country and in the next Congress.

Mr. Thomas is hewing close to the Democratic program of revision downward, which he argues is one way to bring real relief to the farmers and consumers generally. As to farm relief both parties are on record as favoring legislation like the McNary-Haugen bill.

The World Court does not seem to be influencing the trend of opinion to any appreciable extent. In the beginning of the campaign the Republicans sought to make it one of the big issues, and they made it plank No. 1 in their platform. They denounced the Administration policy as a step in the direction of League of Nations membership and pledged Senator Harreld to vote the United States out of the Court if ever he had the chance.

The assault on the World Court is understood to have been the main reason for the action of the Republican convention in failing to endorse the Coolidge Administration or even so much as mention, directly or indirectly, the name of the President.

New Deplore Platform.

It is hard to find a Republican of standing who will not declare that if the August convention could be recalled and a new platform written, it would bristle with laudatory references to the President and his Administration. Nothing they admit has so embarrassed the Republicans in their fight for the re-election of Senator Harreld, and he voted for the platform, as has the treatment accorded Mr. Coolidge by the Republicans who drafted and adopted the platform.

A candidate on the Republican State ticket stated today that since Mr. Thomas was steering clear of the State ticket mess, there was little hope that the Republicans, even with the aid of the Administration, could save Senator Harreld. While thousands of Democrats would vote for the Republican candidate for Governor there was no sign of any serious divisions in the Democratic ranks in the contest for the United States Senate, and without Democratic votes Senator Harreld could not win.

A few days before the primary election Mr. McAdoo arrived in Oklahoma City and had a conference with Hubert Bolen, his 1924 manager in Oklahoma, and Mr. Johnston. A week later Mr. Johnston won the nomination and shortly thereafter Mr. Bolen is said to have gone to Los Angeles, where he had further conferences with Mr. McAdoo. This indicates how important to the McAdoo fortunes is the election of Johnston. At the same time it indicates why a great many anti-McAdoo Democrats are reported lined up behind Mr. Benedick.

As fro Governor Smith of New York there seems to be no considerable sentiment for him in Oklahoma. This is due mainly to his position on the prohibition issue.

REPUBLICANS RALLY FOR BIG FIGHT IN EAST

OPTIMISTIC, SAYS TILSON

Finds Only Six Districts in 17 States Where Changes Appear Likely —Sees Gains in New York.

While expressing confidence regarding the outcome of the Senatorial and Congressional fights in the Eastern States, Representative John Q. Tilson of Connecticut, Eastern Director of the Republican Congressional Committee, made public yesterday a list of speakers for that territory, which would indicate that the Republicans have been preparing for one of the greatest political battles in the history of their party.

So great is the number of Republican orators to be mustered for the campaign in the East that it exceeds even that of two years ago when a President was elected. Six and possibly seven members of President Coolidge Cabinet will take the stump in the East, and of these four or five will address meetings in this State.

Scores of under secretaries and other officials have been enlisted for the mighty battle in the East, and in addition approximately 100 United States Senators or former United States Senators, Representatives or ex-Representatives have been enrolled.

Give Services Without Pay.

Representative Tilson explained yesterday that all who had been listed were givnig their services without pay. The old plan under which paid speakers were sent out has been abandoned under a decision reached by the Senatorial and Congressional Committees early in the Summer, according to Mr. Tilson, who said the new plan was working well and had resulted in a campaign force of much greater effectiveness than was afforded under the old system.

The six Cabinet members who have consented to speak are Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, Secretary of the Interior Hubert Work, Postmaster General Harry S. New, Curtis D. Wilbur, Secretary of the Navy; Frank B. Kellogg, Secretary of State, and Attorney General John G. Sargent. Of these, Secretaries Davis, Wilbur, and possibly Kellogg, with Postmaster General New, will speak in this State. There is a strong probability that Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover also will address at least one big meeting in this city. The other Cabinet members will speak elsewhere in Mr. Tilson's territory, Secretary Work in West Virginia and Attorney General Sargent in Massachusetts and possibly other Eastern States.

Among speakers who will be heard in this State before the campaign ends are Charles Evans Hughes, First Assistant Postmaster General John H. Bartlett, Assistant Attorneys General William J. Donovan and Ira L. Letts, Assistant Secretary of War Trubee F. Davison and former Assistant Secretary of War J. Mayhew Wainwright, now a member of Congress; Assistant Secretary of War Hanford McNider, Assistant Secretary of Commerce James H. MacLafferty, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Douglas Robinson, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. Douglas Robinson, a sister of the late Theodore Roosevelt, and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University.

Others on Speakers' List.

There are a host of others scheduled to speak in the Eastern States, some of whom probably will make a flying visit to this State. Among the number are Frank W. Mondell of Wyoming, former leader of the House of Representatives and Permanent Chairman of the Republican National Convention two years ago; Edward C. Stokes, former Governor of New Jersey; William A. Prendergast, Chairman of the Public Service Commission; John Barrett, ex-Minister and Director General of the Pan American Union; United States Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio, Senators David A. Reed of Pennsylvania and Walter E. Edge of New Jersey, J. Hampton Moore, former United States Representative and former Mayor of Philadelphia; Major Frank Knox of New Hampshire, who was leader of the Rough Riders under the late Theodore Roosevelt; James M. Beck, former Solicitor General of the United States; C. Bascom Slemp, former Secretary to the President; Rheta Childe Dorr, novelist; Judge Theodore G. Risley, Solicitor in the Department of Labor; Elliott Wadsworth, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and William N. Doak, Vice President of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Mr. Tilson said he was well pleased with the outlook in the East.

"I have made a pretty careful survey of the seventeen States which are within the Eastern territory," Mr. Tilson said. "I am not given to being unduly optimistic, but I fail to find any indication of more than six districts in which there might be a change, and the changes run both ways."

Mr. Tilson said he expected the Republicans would make some gains in this State, sufficient to make a Republican majority in the New York delegation to the House of Representatives. At present the Democrats have a majority of one in the delegation with twenty-two seats, to twenty-one held by Republicans.

Texas House Demands Ma Quit, But Senate Kills Resolution

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 7 (AP).—The Texas House of Representatives demanded the resignation of Governor Miriam A. Ferguson today in a concurrent resolution calling for her to resign in accordance with her primary promise to Attorney General Dan Moody. The resolution was passed by a vote of 56 to 47 after prolonged and heated debate.

The resolution then went to the Senate, where it was killed late today, when Senator John H. Bally raised the point of order that the subject was not included in Governor Ferguson's call under which the special session of the Legislature was convened.

AUSTRALIA HEARS CONCERT OVER KDKA

Fiji Islands and New Zealand Also Receive Test Broadcast by Pittsburgh Station.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SYDNEY, Australia, Oct. 7.—The inhabitants of Sydney for a short time last night were treated to a concert by radio broadcast by the Westinghouse Electric Company's station at East Pittsburgh, Pa. This transmission was effected on a short wave length, and rebroadcasting by Station 2BL at Sydney, owned by the Australian Broadcast Company, a Federal institution, enabled listeners-in there to hear the program as though it were local.

This was the climax of a series of three nightly tests from 8 to 9 o'clock Sydney time, on high power by the East Pittsburgh station in an effort to reach half way around the globe.

On the first night, Monday, KDKA, having completed arrangements through two Australian newspapers, The Melbourne Herald and The Sydney Sun, to give publicity to their tests, reached through with extremely good success, over a dozen experimental receiving stations on short wave lengths getting them successfully.

KDKA then promised to have Henry Ford speak to the Antipodes, but the next night a rainstorm came up, and atmospherics became so heavy that satisfactory reception was impossible.

However, the next night, Wednesday, the final program was picked up very clearly and for a short length of time rebroadcast by the five-kilowatt local station at Sydney.

Stations in the Fiji Islands and in New Zealand report reception of these broadcasts, but did not attempt to rebroadcast any of them. Better conditions are hoped for during other tests.

THE NEW YORK TIMES Radio Station picked up this message, which was sent by Philip Nolan, Australian Amateur 2YI, of Bellevue Road, Double Bog, Sydney, Australia.

BROWNING IN COURT; NO WORD FROM BRIDE

Realtor Is Sued on Alleged Contract to Make a Lake on His Wantagh Estate.

Edward W. Browning, realtor, was in the Supreme Court yesterday instead of waiting in his West Seventy-second Street office for word of his runaway bride, "Peaches" Heenan Browning, who left his Kew Gardens home six days ago and whose whereabouts are still a mystery.

Browning appeared before Judge Nathan Bijur and a jury in answer to a suit brought against him by William P. Summerville, a contractor, for $21,949 for breach of contract. The case was adjourned until today, when it is very probable that Browning will take the witness stand.

The suit hinges on Browning's estate at Wantagh, where his sixteen-year-old bride expected to occupy her "castle of dreams" some day.

According to the allegations in the suit, Summerville contracted on July 7, 1921, with Browning to construct a concrete dam on the estate to form an artificial lake. He says he has received $5,000 in partial payment of the claim. Browning entered a counter-claim for $4,600 which he says he paid in labor charges while the contract was in force.

As Browning left the court late in the afternoon he refused to comment on his wife's reported desertion. He was not at his office at any time during the day, and his secretary, J. P. Gorman, told all inquirers that no word had been received from Mrs. Browning, who is evidently in seclusion with her mother, Mrs. Catherine Heenan.

Strict vigilance has been maintained at the office telephone ever since Mrs. Browning took all her belongings and went away, in case, it was said, she is left to her own inclination and decides to return. She has her own private code for calling the ofice, it was learned. She will not say "This is Peaches," but something like "X.Y.Z."

Fords and Couzens to Settle Trade Disputes In Detroit, Taking Burden From Courts

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Oct. 7.—Henry Ford, Edsel Ford and Senator James Couzens have consented to serve on a board to settle commercial disputes without court action. Charles E. Boyd, Secretary of the Board of Commerce Governmental Committee, announced today.

Approval of the plan was voted at the last meeting of the Board of Directors, Mr. Boyd said, and it has the approval of several Wayne circuit judges, who believe that the board can settle many commercial disputes out of court.

If both parties to a dispute submit their problems to the board and agree to abide by its decision, no appeal to a court can be taken if either party is dissatisfied with the result.

Detroit attorneys have welcomed the move, according to Mr. Boyd, because they will get the opportunity to argue cases involving business disputes before an unprejudiced group of business men and they will obtain an immediate decision from which there will be no appeal.

The work of the courts will be lightened and prospective litigants will not be forced to wait for slow legal machinery to function.

"It is estimated," Mr. Boyd said, "that millions of dollars annually will be saved the business interests of the city and weeks of court delay will be averted.

"The majority of disputes we will handle probably will be between contracting parties. As part of our educational campaign we will try to get contracting parties to stipulate in contracts that if disputes arise they will be taken before the Arbitration Board."

FIRESTONE TO FIGURE IN RUBBER OUTPUT

Liberian Plantations to Become a Factor in World's Market by 1930, Says President.

Special to The New York Times.

AKRON, Ohio, Oct. 7.—By 1930, Firestone Plantation, Inc., the Liberian rubber-growing project of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, will be an important factor in the world's rubber production. By 1935 it will be a factor to be reckoned with in the world's rubber market.

These declarations weree made yesterday by Harvey S. Firestone, President of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, in discussing a London news cable expressing British opinions that the Liberian project is to be "considered as a serious proposition."

"Seven months ago," Mr. Firestone said, "the future of our Liberian plantation was in doubt. Governmental difficulties had arisen which left the success of the project largely in the hands of fate.

"Since that time an agreement suitable to the Liberian administration and the Firestone Plantations has been worked out, and there are now no further bars toward development of the 1,000,000 acres which the company owns in the negro republic."

Mr. Firestone said that he expected a report from his son, Harvey Jr., managing director of Firestone Plantations, now in Liberia, which will show a large number of trees planted this year.

HUSBAND HOME LATE; WIFE BURNS HIS AUTO

He Has Her Arrested—Court Holds Her Sane—Hearing on Arson Charge Up Today.

When Frederick Senese returned to his home at 330 East 120th Street at 4 o'clock yesterday morning, from a pleasure motor trip according to the police, he was greeted, not in a friendly manner, by his wife, Lena. She remonstrated with him, it was said, the automobile and pleasure trips having been the bone of contention in the Senese household for some time.

At 7:45 Mrs. Senese, the police said, declared she was going to get rid of the machine. This followed an announcement by the husband that he was going out again tonight in the car. A few minutes later the automobile, which was parked in front of the Senese home, was a mass of flames. The husband saw it from a window. He dashed out and turned in an alarm of fire. On his way out, he told the police, he saw his wife standing on the stoop, a smile lighting her face.

Then came the firemen and apparatus. Nothing remained of the automobile but a twisted and warped metal chassis. At this juncture Patrolman Dominick Marino came along, and Senese ordered him to arrest his wife on a charge of arson.

Mrs. Senese, mother of two children, admitted the charge, according to the police, who said she told them she had sprinkled gasoline on the motor car and applied a lighted match because she had the right to do so. She declared it was her automobile because she had paid the last note.

Mrs. Senese, the police said, declared her husband had taken another woman out in the car. This happened often, she complained, and she had determined to break up that practice.

When Mrs. Senese was arraigned before Magistrate Harry A. Gordon in Harlem court, her husband told the Court he believed her to be of unsound mind, and declared she had threatened him and had been acting peculiarly. He asked that a charge of insanity be entertained. The Magistrate directed that this complaint be drawn up.

Arraigned on this complaint, Mrs. Senese convinced the Magistrate of her sanity. She said her husband was attempting to get rid of her by this means, because of his infatuation for another woman. The Magistrate dismissed this complaint and adjourned the hearing on the arson complaint until today, fixing bail at $1,000.

BELLEGAMBE PAINTING HERE FROM MONASTERY

'The Conversion of St. Paul,' Four Centuries Old, Comes to Kleinberger Galleries.

"The Conversion of St. Paul," a painting by Jean Bellegambe (1470-1540), arrived here yesterday on the liner Paris, for the F. Kleinberger Galleries, 725 Fifth Avenue, thus adding to American collections a work of art long hidden from the eyes of all but a group of Catholic monks living in the seclusion of a monastery at Vergier, France, near the Belgian border. The crumbling of this old monastery of St. Martin, and the departure of the monks for Belgium, resulted in the transfer of one of the most valuable of French primitives. The painting is held at $75,000.

The work is believed to be more than four centuries old. The scene is laid on a road, behind which are hills, a lake and a chateau. In the foreground is depicted St. Paul astride a white horse which has collapsed. He is gazing upward, viewing the celestial "sign" in the sun rays. Soldiers in armor, on horseback and afoot, surround him, their faces reflecting their horror at the miracle. In the transparent coloring that marks the picture, red, white and yellow predominate. The panel is 40 by 47 inches.

Other works by Bellegambe in America are a triptych in the M. Friedsam collection, and a panel in the John G. Johnson collection, in Philadelphia.

ASK ST. PAUL CASE APPEAL.

Counsel for Jameson Committee Act to Reach Higher Court.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—First steps to remove the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway bankruptcy case from the jurisdiction of the lower courts to that of the Appellate body were taken today by counsel for the Jameson Committee of Bondholders when a motion was filed with Judge James H. Wilkerson asking leave to appeal from his recent order denying a petition for intervention to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for this district.

The motion was filed by Attorney Weymouth Kirkland, Chicago counsel for the committee, who pointed out that it was not aimed against that part of the order, which designated Nov. 22 as the date for the sale of the railroad by public auction at Butte, Mont.

Attorney Horace K. Tenney, who is representing the trustees, immediately objected to the motion, both on technical grounds and because, he says, the granting of leave to appeal would seriously interfere with, if not preclude, the carrying out of Judge Wilkerson's order for the sale of the railroad.

Window Advertisers End Meeting.

The Window Display Advertising Association closed its three-day convention at the Hotel Pennsylvania yesterday. At the morning session the speakers were Carl V. Haesher of the Burke Hardware Company, Waukegan, Ill., on "What I Would Do if I Were in the Manufacture of Shoes", W. B. Benton of the George Batten Company, on "Business From an Agent's Standpoint," and Paul B. West of the National Cashbox Company, Inc.

INDIANA CHARGES ROUSE PROSECUTORS

Attorney General Promises Grand Jury Inquiry if Evidence Is Credible.

COUNTY CALLS FOR PROOF

Leader of Investigating Editors Calls Conference on Alleged Corruption Under Klan Rule.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 7.—County Prosecutor Will H. Remy late today called for evidence with which to conduct a Grand Jury investigation into charges that Indiana has been governed by corrupt politicians and Ku Klux Klansmen.

Remy, who prosecuted D. C. Stephenson and sent the former Grand Dragon, at the time the greatest political power in the State, to prison for the murder of Madge Oberhalter, indicated that he might call the former Klan leader from behind prison walls to tell a Grand Jury what he has sent out in letters through secret channels.

"Let us," Remy said in a written statement tonight, "approach this investigation—if there is to be one—not as partisans, but as citizens."

But Thomas W. Adams, head of the Indiana Republican Editorial Association Committee, which has made the charges as the result of its investigations, does not want a Grand Jury investigation now.

"I want this bagful of evidence to go to the people first," he said.

He has called for tomorrow another meeting of the six members of the editors' committee and the six State Senators who have expressed themselves as in favor of a legislative investigation. He has plans to descend with the committee on the penitentiary at Michigan City and demand that bodies of public and quasipublic servants be allowed to see Stephenson. This privilege has so far been denied by Governor Jackson, the Prison Board and Warden Daly.

A former Judge stopped Mr. Adams on the street today and told him to demand a writ of mandamus against the Governor. He said any honest Judge would have to grant the petition. This is among the possibilities Mr. Adams is considering.

The committee leader made public another document today from the mass of evidence he says he has collected. This was a letter alleged to have been written by Mayor J. L. Duvall of Indianapolis to Stephenson when the latter was still at the height of his power. It refers to the primary campaign of Governor Jackson and is on the letterhead of the Klan.

Governor Jackson, asked about this letter, did not deny he was a Klansman. He said, however, he knew nothing about the letter, and if it was written in his behalf it was no fault of his. Mayor Duvall spent most of the day denying the authenticity of the alleged contract given out by Mr. Adams yesterday, in which Mayor Duvall was made to appear to have promised to consult Stephenson concerning appointments in return for Stephenson's pre-election support.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 7 (AP).—Arthur L. Gilliom, Attorney General of Indiana, today took cognizance of the charges of political corruption and Klan rule in the State made by Thomas H. Adams, Vincennes publisher, and mailed a letter to the leader of the investigation conducted by State editors in which he declared that if "credible evidence" is submitted, the Attorney General's office would see that it receives attention from a Grand Jury.

The Attorney General's letter said he had "taken note of statements and innuendoes appearing in the public press concerning alleged improper conduct in the affairs of the Government of the State of Indiana." The charges, he said, presented "a challenge to honor and decency that cannot be overlooked by this office."

FEISUL IS IMPRESSED IN FLIGHT OVER LONDON

'Ajaib!' Exclaims Viceroy of Mecca as the Great City Lies Like a Map Beneath Him.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—"Ajaib!" exclaimed Prince Feisul, Viceroy of Mecca, yesterday when he was taken for a flight and saw London flattened out beneath him like a map.

"That is what he keeps saying all the time," said a member of his suite to a reporter. "It means marvelous. The immensity of the city has astonished him. He was tremendously thrilled by a motor racing at the Brooklands track, though he knows nothing about automobiles. He is a fine judge of horseflesh, however, and spotted three winners at Newmarket, though he doesn't bet."

It is declared that no bustling American tourist ever did the sights of London more rapidly and thoroughly than Prince Feisul. Since he came a fortnight ago he has seen the Tower of London, the House of Lords, the House of Commons, Sir Alan Cobham's return from Australia, a football match, six theatres, has paid two visits to the zoo, has gone on a series of shopping tours, has flown over London and has had a look at all the usual other points of interest.

TALLEY OUTDRAWS EDERLE.

$9,000 Paid to Hear Singer in Des Moines, $400 to See Swimmer.

Special to The New York Times.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Oct. 7.—W. E. Robb, a former preacher, who while sheriff was known as the "hanging parson," sought to enlarge the profits of his Summer resort at Lake Avon, on the outskirts of Des Moines, by having Miss Gertrude Ederle appear there in swimming exhibitions yesterday afternoon and evening. A swimming contest for women and a barbecue for the spectators were also on the program.

But he made the mistake of booking Miss Ederle for the same date that Miss Marion Talley, Metropolitan Opera prima donna, appeared in concert at the Coliseum here. Some 5,300 persons paid $9,000 to hear Miss Talley sing last night. Approximately 700 cash customers contributed only $400 toward defraying Robb's expenses of $1,000, of which the swimmer's manager got $750.

Daily Style Hint For Well-Dressed New Yorkers

NEW YORK, October 8—When one goes to the play in the evening the matter of disposing of one's top coat is, frequently, a bit of annoyance. Not if it's a top coat of pure camel hair. Though you stuff it under your seat, a brisk shake rolls out the wrinkles. Shower-proof, too, when you step out into an unexpected drizzle.

Camel hair evening top coats come in two smart colors approved by the best-turned-out men. They are midnight blue and dark Oxford gray. Exclusive, but not expensive.

TRADE IS FAVORABLE SAY MANUFACTURERS

ASSOCIATION ENDS MEETING

Urges Tax Relief, Extension of Federal Reserve System and Higher Pay for Judges.

Adoption of resolution on taxation, increased pay for Federal Judges, reorganization of Government departments, commercial arbitration, the Federal Reserve System, the open shop, the United State Patent Office, railroad transportation, junior education and employment; a luncheon for the discussion of industrial preparedness, another inaugurating the Women's Bureau and a trade survey covering 5,000 manufacturers compiled since Sept. 15, concluded the annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers at the Waldorf yesterday.

The survey was presented by D. M. Edwards. It showed the consensus as to present trade to be 92 per cent. favorable, 19 per cent. reporting it as excellent, 73 per cent. good to fair, and 8 per cent. pronouncing it poor. Prospects for the Winter were viewed as excellent by 16 per cent., good to fair by 83 per cent., and poor by 1 per cent.

An increase in employment since last Fall was reported by 68 per cent. of whom 8 per cent. noted a large increase while 32 per cent. noted a decrease. An adequate supply of labor of all classes was reported by most of the answers, but 10 per cent. reported a shortage of skilled labor and 4 per cent. a shortage of unskilled labor.

Better business than in 1925 was reported by 50 per cent. of the answers and wages were reported higher than last Fall. The survey covers sixteen basic groups.

Cost of Labor Disputes.

O. D. Frost, Chairman of the Employment Relations Committee, told the convention that during the years 1916 to 1925 inclusive the cost to this country of industrial disputes was $12,982,048,000; to employers it was $496,187,000, to workers $1,804,316,000 and to the public it was $10,681,545,000.

Charging that tax relief is not as yet an accomplished fact, James A. Emery, counsel to the association, declared that we save at Washington and waste in the State capitals. He added that the Government not only is taking one-seventh or one-eighth of the national income but is absorbing half of the national surplus. He recommended the repeal of the additional 1 per cent. tax burden placed on corporations, the reorganization of Federal departments, boards and commissions with a view to economy, the adoption of a pay-as-go policy and the halting of extravagant expenditure and adoption or enforcement of rigid debt limits.

As Chairman of the Committee on Patents and Trade-Marks, Calvin Townley told the convention that Federal Judges "can only live by the greatest economy—almost penury—on their present salaries, and it is actually impossible for them to send their children to college on these salaries. A considerable number of the Judges have resigned in recent years and months because of this situation."

Commends Detroit Churches.

Detroit churches were commended by Mgr. John L. Belford, rector of the Roman Catholic Church of the Nativity in Brooklyn, for their attitude in not permitting spokesmen of the American Federation of Labor to use their pulpits.

"I take my hat off to the ministers of Detroit who said 'No, we won't have any of this thing at all,'" said Mgr. Belford. "The American Federation of Labor is all right in its way, but if they want to talk to the people let them go and hire a hall."

Father Belford asserted that the church is not the place for a labor leader to talk, or anybody else, except a duly accredited minister of the Gospel.

The convention adopted a resolution urging the repeal of the 2 per cent. corporate tax; that the Federal Government abandon the field of estate taxation to the States and re-enter it only during national emergencies; and that the special excise taxes upon manufacturers recognized as war measures be repealed or reduced.

The widest use of commercial arbitration as exemplified in recent Federal legislation was urged in a resolution.

The association went on record as approving the extension of the Federal Reserve System for a ninety-nine year term; it reaffirmed its stand in favor of the open shop; it asked that new housing be provided at once for the United States Patent Office; it opposed the attempt to amend the Constitution of the United States to give Congress supreme power to limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under eighteen years of age, and it approved the movement known as a "Better Understanding Between Industry and Agriculture."

GARY PRAISES COOLIDGE.

Receives President's Congratulation on Eve of 80th Birthday.

"President Coolidge is behind and in support of all the good movements of the country that come within his authority and jurisdiction," said Judge Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the Board of the United States Steel Corporation, at a luncheon arranged by the National Association of Manufacturers at the Waldorf yesterday for the discussion of industrial preparedness.

Hanford MacNider, Assistant Secretary of War, another of the speakers, said that he had a letter from President Coolidge to Mr. Gary and read it to those assembled. The letter follows:

My dear Judge Gary:

I understand you are to preside at an industrial preparedness luncheon in New York on Thursday and I wish at that time to express my appreciation of what you have done and are doing in this work.

The occasion coming a day before your eightieth birthday serves to call attention more strikingly to the unusual character of your service. That you still retain your active interest in public matters is worthy of high commendation.

My hearty congratulations on your birthday and best wishes for continued health, happiness and opportunities for usefulness.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

"It was very kind of the President," said Mr. Gary, "to write that letter of a personal character, which has been read to you. He is always doing great things and fine things. I should say one of the best things he is behind is this safety movement, this protective movement. He is to be congratulated that he has such a fine lot of men in his Cabinet, in his Presidential family, to assist in this great work. I think the next best thing he is supporting is prosperity.

"But what would prosperity in this country be worth or how long would it last unless peace was assured; if another great World War should be forced upon us at the present time? It would go to pieces almost in the twinkling of an eye. And, therefore, the President of the United States sees, as you and I see, that while of all things in the world, this country desires peace, it is necessary to be prepared to maintain and to compel it whatever may be precipitated."

"Our industrial preparedness is a frank declaration to the world that we not only want peace but that we intend to have it," said Secretary MacNider.

Major Gen. C. C. William, Chief of Ordnance, told the delegates that the industrial preparedness plan is the most important in the War Department in the event that this country again become involved in war.

Colonel James J. Walsh said that it is within the power of the manufacturers of this country to save themselves—as taxpayers—$1,000,000,000 for every forty days saved in meeting the emergency of another war.

At a luncheon inaugurating the Women's Bureau Judge Gary said that the women have come into their own in industry. He said that in many respects he thought that the women are as good, successful and competent as men in industry.

"In morals, persistent endeavor, honesty and determination the women have always been better than the men," he said.

Judge Gary said that while he believed in the most generous treatment of workers he also believed in the open shop.

The will was admitted to probate yesterday by Judge Stephen L. Bedford.

POLAR BEARS COWED AS SHIP CREW SINGS

Captain Bob and Baffin Belle, Shocked, Stop Fighting and Walk Into Cage.

BEWILDERED BY AUTO HORNS

Animals Leased in Arctic Are Safely Transferred to the Zoo From Expedition's Schooner.

The two young polar bears leased by a cowboy member of George Palmer Putnam's recent Arctic exploration party were transferred yesterday from the expedition's schooner Effie M. Morrissey to the Bronx Zoo. Captain Bob and Baffin Belle, as the two balls of white fur were named, were bearish in temperament and thoroughly bewildered by their transit through the city.

The swift motion of the motor truck was unlike any berg or floating cake they ever traveled on. The toot, screech and grunt of miscellaneous automobile horns was weirder than any Eskimo political convention they ever listened to. And the glimpse they got of the crowds convinced them they were in strange surroundings.

So when Captain Bob and Baffin Belle reached their quarters next to the cages which house Governor Smith's black bear cubs both polar bears put their heads wearily on their shaggy paws. Peter Romanoff, head keeper of the bears at the Zoo, was understood to have heard the Captain say to Belle—his first civil utterance of the day, by the way—something to the effect that "New York is all right to visit once in a while, but I'd never want to live here."

A big cage was backed against the permanent coop on the schooner's deck and the doors were opened. Captain Bob shot through the opening into the new cage, but whirled to prevent Baffin Belle coming in. He growled dreadfully and tried to, as the crew said, "shoot" the young lady bear. Dunrud and Romanoff banged on the cages and the crew tried to sing. Captain Bob paid scant attention to the banging, but he seemed to be paralyzed by the song. While he was spellbound his mate rushed into the cage.

Then the Captain started to claw the bars and to bite them. He skinned his nose and cut his paws in this pastime. Baffin Belle, thankful that her temperamental companion had transferred his attentions from her to the cage, joined in an effort to eat her way out. While the Captain was engaged in taking a good bite at one of the bars, his roving eye spotted Belle. This irritated him and he rushed at her. They were staging a good fight, with plenty of growls but no damage, when the crew sang again. Stark fear gripped both bears and they slunk to their corners.

Upon arrival at the Zoo and after they had recovered from the excitement of the trip, the bears began to inspect the Governor's bear cubs. Romanoff predicted that a warm friendship would develop.

LABOR PLANS UNION IN AUTO INDUSTRY

tion, headed by Vice President Frank Duffy of the federation and Sarah Conboy as Secretary, urged the suspension of jurisdictional questions among all unions so as to reach the goal successfully.

James O'Connell, President of the Metal Trades Department, pointed out that there were more than 1,000,000 workers in the automobile plants, exclusive of those employed in maintenance and distribution. He said the industry had been without union organization since it began and had grown by leaps and bounds until it was the dominant factor in the non-union and "American plan" movement.

Declares Men Are Dissatisfied.

Declaring that the automobile industry is the most highly specialized industry in existence and "its employes are specialized into mere atoms of a vast industry," Mr. O'Connell added:

"Notwithstanding what their employers and the press may say, these men are not satisfied. They are disgusted with their lot, but fear that if they lose their jobs they may not get another place where they will get the same kind of a nut to work on.

"No task confronting us in organization is equal to the task of organizing the automobile industry, and if we get the cooperation of the officers of the unions interested in this work we may soon report progress on plans that may bring hope for happiness to millions in this industry."

T. A. McCullough of the Omaha Typographical Union differed with Judge Elbert H. Gary's recent criticism of the possibility for the wholesale introduction of the five-day week, and remarked that Judge Gary was no more cognizant of the trend of industry than was the head of the Detroit Chamber of Commerce, who ascribed this city's prosperity to the American plan.

Andrew Furuseth of the International Seamen's Union also spoke in favor of the resolution for the organization of the automobile workers, which was adopted unanimously.

Eddy Speaks on Russia.

In his address this afternoon Mr. Eddy made no reference to the controversy aroused by the Y. M. C. A.'s cancellation of the invitation to Mr. Green. Explaining that he was speaking only for himself, not for his association, Mr. Eddy told of the recent visit to Russia of his group and said that they found three evils in Russia—a severe abridgment of liberty with little liberty of the press, dogmatic material atheism professed by all members of the Communist Party and the policy of the Third International for world revolution by violence.

The visitors also found three things to admire, Mr. Eddy said. These were: Leaders of a nation of 140,000,000 people who put public service above private profit, working for the most enduring government in Europe, "as no other government in Europe is so stable"; the most colossal social experiment in history, and a nation ready to challenge the rest of the world wherever imperialism exploited the poor and helpless.

"Why don't you go to see for yourselves and learn if what I say is true?" he demanded. "Why not do as every other nation has done, and send a delegation to Russia to see what's there? Why run on second-hand propaganda, Red and White? Instead of suspicion and hostility, why not get down to bedrock facts? Why not see what's good and bad, to see if we cannot bring this great labor Government into the economic heart of the world?

"Thank God for the American Federation of Labor! You are conservative but you are moving. I hope you'll move a little faster."

Green Answers Eddy.

"Mr. Eddy told us what we believe, that the Communist Party is ruling in Russia with an iron hand and has established an autocracy there little less than the Czar exercised in his way," said Mr. Green, after the address. "He complained because the people of Russia were not free, because the Red International was attempting to establish a world revolution through violence. That is a fact. We knew that."

"If proof were needed that we should keep out of Russia Mr. Eddy supplied it," was the comment of Daniel Tobin, a Vice President of the Federation and President of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

Matthew Woll, another Vice President, said the delegates were "seething with resentment" over the incident.

"It makes no difference how ideal or how rotten conditions are in Russia," said Mr. Woll. "We do not have to go to Russia to find out how the Russian Communists are trying to destroy our form of government and, as a means to that end, wreck the American labor movement. Mr. Eddy pleaded the case of the capitalists of the United States who have obtained concessions in Russia and who are now seeking to exploit the Russian workers by having the United States recognize Soviet Russia."

A telegram of greetings was received from John R. McQuigg, National Commander of the American Legion, in convention in Philadelphia.

The delegates will visit the Ford automobile works tomorrow afternoon.

MERGER APPROVED BY LUTHERAN SYNOD

Second of Three Jurisdictions Votes for Union—Action by Ministerium Awaited.

FUNDS ALLEGED DIVERTED

Charges of Misappropriation of Synod Money by Churches Sent to Executive Committee.

The Lutheran Synod of New York voted yesterday, the closing day of its ninety-seventh annual convention in St. James's Church, to merge with the New York Lutheran Ministerium and the Lutheran Synod of New York and New England. The last named body already has acted favorably and decision to unite now rests with the Ministerium, which has awaited word that both the other bodies would accept seventeen amendments required by the Ministerium. This the Synod of New York did yesterday.

The merger report was presented by the Rev. Dr. Arthur S. Hardy and adopted on motion of the Rev. Dr. George L. Kieffer.

A request of the Ministerium that its name be the name of the merged synod was rejected. The name that has been approved by a joint commission is the United Lutheran Synod of New York.

There were a few minutes of excitement in the afternoon when a memorial was presented by the Southern Conference of the synod. This instructed the officers of the synod "to secure the names of pastors and members of the church councils who are diverting the funds belonging to the United Lutheran Church and the synod into their church treasuries; that the Secretary of the synod be instructed to inform them that such action is a misappropriation of trust funds."

The Rev. Dr. Paul M. Young of Emmanuel Church, the Bronx, argued for the memorial, saying:

"As President of the Southern Conference I make this recommendation. Some of the congregations are diverting the funds over the heads of their pastors or with their pastors' consent. If they did that in public life, they would go to Sing Sing. Such men should be notified of their status according to the laws of man and God. I say such men should be known. They are no less than thieves."

The Rev. Dr. W. H. Stutts of Epiphany Church, Brooklyn, said that if a minister and congregation were not honest, a resolution would not make them so.

The Rev. Dr. E. A Dietz of the Church of Our Saviour, Manhattan, moved that the memorial be sent to the Executive Committee. No names of pastors or churches were mentioned. It was explained after the session that this method seemed wiser than taking the cases into the courts.

The Rev. Dr. Charles W. Leitzell of Albany was re-elected unanimously as President for a second term of five years.

The Rev. Arthur J. Traver refused renomination as Secretary because he has resigned as pastor of St. Thomas's Church, in the Bronx, to become Secretary of the Luther League of America, with headquarters in Philadelphia. Mrs. Boomhower, wife of the Rev. W. G. Boomhower, was nominated. She has been official stenographer of the synod several years. The constitution specifies, however, that the Secretary must be an ordained minister, so the synod elected her husband as Secretary. He is pastor of a church at Cobleskill, N. Y., and Statistical Secretary of the synod.

The Rev. A. L. Billenbeck of Lockport, N. Y., was elected Statistical Secretary. Fred Wefer of 115 Liberty Street, Manhattan, was re-elected Treasurer. The Rev. E. von Hahman of Trinity Church, Amsterdam, N. Y., was re-elected German Secretary.

70-MILE SWIM FOR WOMAN.

Lotty Moore Schoemmell Plans to Make That Distance Sunday.

Lotty Moore Schoemmell, New York's only girl life guard, who recently swam forty-four and one-half miles around Manhattan Island in 14 hours 11 minutes, announced yesterday that she would go to Albany tomorrow morning for her 160-mile swim from Albany to New York.

Starting under the Albany bridge about 6:30 A. M. on Sunday, she will attempt to swim seventy miles the first day. Swimming during the day and sleeping aboard a launch at night, she expects to make the entire distance in four days, arriving in New York on Wednesday night. Mille Gade Corson's time for the same swim was six days.

Lotty Moore Schoemmell made a record of 5 hours and 57 minutes for the twenty-one-mile swim from the Battery to Sandy Hook, against the record of 7 hours and 11 minutes held by Gertrude Ederle. She said yesterday that her open challenge to any swimmer for an endurance swim of twenty-five miles or more had not been accepted yet.

REGISTER TODAY!

Registration is necessary for a vote in the general election on Nov. 2. Registration in New York City will be held all this week. The registration places will be open from 5 to 10:30 P. M. the first five days and from 7 A. M. to 10 P. M. on Saturday.

FRENCH CHATEAU BEING MOVED HERE

Wealthy New Yorker Is Taking Courcelles Stone by Stone for Rebuilding on L. I.

COST HIM 7,000,000 FRANCS

One Piece of Gothic Furniture Alone in Famous Mansion Is Valued at 200,000 Francs.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 7.—When New Yorkers motor out on Long Island next Spring they will have the unique pleasure of seeing a famous French chateau with colorfully historic background, for a wealthy man, known for his interest in art, has just purchased the Chateau de Courcelles and is transplanting it, stone by stone, to his American estate.

The name of the New Yorker is being withheld by H. S. de Souhami, through whom the transaction was made, but the beautiful old building is now being torn down and the first shipment will go on the French liner Paris on Wednesday. M. de Souhami is also going to New York on the Paris and will take charge of the reconstruction of the chateau.

The chateau, with its magnificent decorations and furniture, cost the American about 7,000,000 francs, a price regarded here as not excessive, especially when it is considered that one piece of Gothic furniture alone was valued at 200,000 francs.

The story of how the American came to purchase the chateau is characteristic of the manner in which wealthy American art connoisseurs make purchases abroad. This American came to Europe early in the Summer with the idea of buying only a few pieces of furniture for a new home, the plans for which had just been completed.

He consulted his agent, M. de Souhami, who casually informed him that there was a famous chateau for sale with its furnishings. The American said he would like to see it. A few days later they visited the chateau together and in less than a week the deal was arranged.

The chateau is situated on the Route du Mans at La Fleche. It was built in 1640, during the reign of Louis XIII, by Francois Mansart, and two large fortunes were expended on it before it was completed and furnished.

Louis de Champlais, the original owner, died a ruined man, because of his disastrous efforts to finish the chateau, and his wife, known as Mme. de Courcelles, likewise became bankrupt in a similar effort.

The woodwork of the chateau is regarded as among the most beautiful in Europe. It is also being taken to America. One of the most beautiful features of the chateau is the chapel and its religious figures of carved stone.

The chateau has long been abandoned, and several French art critics, while regretting that the building must leave France, believe it will be excellent propaganda for classic French art in America.

WORCESTER HEARS MUSIC NOVELTIES

MONTEVERDE'S OLD SONATA

Performance Does Justice to Nature of Work Composed in 1610—Gardner's Violin Concerto.

By OLIN DOWNES.

Special to The New York Times.

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 7.—A salutary tendency to freshen the programs of the Worcester Music Festival was evident in the two concerts arranged and directed this afternoon and evening by Albert Stoessel. It has not always been customary in these parts for a single such occasion to offer the audience three novelties within the space of an hour and a half, these novelties ranging chronologically and esthetically from Monteverde's "Sonata Sopra Sancta Maria," performed for the first time in America, to Emerson Whithorne's "Saturday's Child," after the poem by Countee Cullen and a revised version of the violin concerto of Samuel Gardner, with the composer as interpreter-writer.

The evening concert consisted of short choral works, of significant beauty, fortunately placed on the program. There was the chorus of Bach, "Breit Forth! O Beauteous Heavenly Light," from the Christmas oratorio; Brahms's "Schicksalied," Bach's peasant cantata; the Alleluia and Resurrection from Liszt's "Christus Oratorio," Debussy's "Blessed Damozel," and the coronation scene from "Boris Godunoff." Young blood and progressive ideas have made themselves felt in the Worcester programs.

Monteverde's "Sonata" (so called) to the Virgin, for women's voices and instrumental accompaniment arranged by the young and modern-minded Italian, Vittorio Rieti, had been anticipated in New York, which was to have assisted at the first American presentation, as well as in Worcester. Alfredo Casella announced this work for production under his baton with the State Symphony Orchestra last season, but that orchestra, suddenly passing out of existence, foiled him.

Florid Instrumental Passage.

The "Sonata" is ushered in by a long instrumental passage, rather florid in style, after which the voices with an effect which is today charmingly archaic, in tone the next, "Sancta Maria ora pro Nobis." Their entrances are interspersed with extended Ritornelli. The confusion of musical terminology in the early seventeenth century—this work was composed in 1610—is well known. The reason why the word "sonata" usually, though not always employed for an instrumental piece of that period, is used in place of "cantata," as another word denoting a vocal composition, may be found in the fact that Monteverde has actually written an elaborate instrumental piece in which the voices are used in a manner almost incidental to the general pattern of the orchestral fabric. The music in its quality is the opposite pole from that of Monteverde, the revolutionist and pioneer of music drama, or the prophetic harmonist of certain of the Madrigals. This work makes it doubly evident that these were contemporaries and predecessors of Monteverde who wrote bolder counterpoint, as such, than he.

The interest and distinction of the "Sonata" be in a stylistic blend of that which is stiff and archaic, like paintings of the primitives, and that which is florid, lyric, and in this sense romantic in feeling. Apropos of style it may be asked, at the risk of tumbling into an archaeological pitfall, whether Rieti's instrumental version, with its Bach-like solo trumpet contesting with the strings, is the most suitable garb for Monteverde's ideas. Rieti's instrumental scheme, in certain details might be an example of orchestral procedure that was common a century later. These questions aside, the performance, which had not the acme of technical finish, did justice to the nature of the music, and was distinguished by a delightful tone quality from the female voice. The music is well worth the hearing, even though it is not the expression of those qualities which enable Monteverde to anticipate the modern musical period.

Whithorne's "Saturday's Child."

When Mr. Whithorne's "Saturday's Child" was performed for the first time last Winter in New York it was discussed at some length by THE TIMES. The performance this afternoon confirmed the previous impression, that this is, on the whole, one of the most serious and interesting of the recent scores of Mr. Whithorne, one in which he has treated a really fine poem with equal intelligence and self-abrogation. The truthful musical investure of the text is before him all the time, and is not far an instant. Some places move reluctantly and suggest effort; for the greater part the music is of real substance and orchestral imagination.

Mr. Gardner's violin concerto, composed in 1920, was revised by him in 1925. It is an extremely conscientious work—far too much so. The musician girds up his loins for a properly imposing first movement. But why need a first concerto by a young American be so plaguedly imposing? It is a movement of tense, tight writing, giving the effect of artistic inhibition. Substantial, yes, and sincerely, solidly wrought; and for these things worthy of praise. We do not belittle such qualities. Occasionally a passage that communicates the sense of breadth and vista—such vistas as Mr. Gardner may well have watched while he composed and sojourned in 1923 in the Rockies—occasionally such a passage shows out, but only to draw the attention of the listeners to the need of freer breathing and less self-consciousness in expression. The middle movement of the work is more melodic, poetic; but it is only at the last, which is frankly gay and unconstrained, with ingeniously manipulated material, that you feel as if you were talking with a man and not an official of the tonal world.

The orchestral pieces at this concert were the bacchanale from "Tannhäuser," and the exhilarating "Espana" of one Emanuel Chabrier, who had ideas and did not trouble to be "high hat" about them. There was a large audience, appreciatively disposed, which recalled the young composers and gave due approval to the intelligent interpretation and the fine consideration of text shown by Wendell Hart, tenor, and Mina Hager, mezzo-soprano, in the performance of "Saturday's Child." Still more pronounced was the applause for Mr. Gardner's admirable performance of his concerto.

Choral Music in Evening.

This evening's concert showed what a reasonable degree of curiosity and enterprise can accomplish in the direction of program making. The occasion followed custom and tradition of the festival in that it was devoted to choral music. In place of a long and conventional oratorio, there was heard a succession of short works happily contrasted, and in two instances new to the Worcester audiences. Under this latter head came the works already mentioned by Bach, Liszt, Debussy and Moussorgsky.

The frolicsome "Peasant Cantata" of Bach was a foil to the serenity and the tragic depth of Brahms's "Song of Fate." The audience laughed with the composer, not only at the contagious humor of the text, but also at the unintentionally topical character of certain allusions, as when Fraser Gange, the officiating baritone, remarked, with an unction and distinctness appreciated by all, "'Tis thirsty work this singing," and Ethyl Hayden replied, "Who thirsty is, come follow. I know an inn close by where good wine is supplied for drinking." To which the baritone promptly replied, "Lead on, I follow." The humor of the music is obvious too, but Bach is capable of being obvious without being commonplace. He composes for the most part in the burlesque style with fragments of folk song combined, onodlibet" fashion. He also supplies the soprano with a lovely air, as lovely as any verse of Ben Jonson, "Spring comes laughing o'er the hill." It is a pity that the chorus has not a larger part in this cantata, and that the final number was sung as a duet; but there is enough that is delightful and amusing, and of real value, and the laughter, the peasant patois that Bach adopts as fortunately as Shakespeare made his clowns articulate.

The Singing of High Quality.

The performances of the evening, on the part of soloists and chorus, were of a prevailingly high quality, particularly on the part of the chorus. The enthusiasm of the audience was marked and spontaneous. Of the less familiar compositions interpreted, the excerpts from Liszt's "Christus" were the most unconvincing. There is better music in that score than was heard on this occasion. Liszt, giving place to Debussy, revealed an immature but most beautiful and poetic expression in the "Blessed Damozel," which, if the style savors of Messenet, has an emotional essence and savor that only a true poet of tone could have conveyed.

The music from "Boris" was heard in the original version of the composer—a version which materially augments the splendor and powerful crudeness of the passage—and not as sandpapered in the edition of Rimsky-Korsakoff. In this performance Wendell Hart and Fraser Gange were the soloists. In the Liszt music the singers were Messrs. Hart and Gange, Miss Hayden and Doris Doe.

Final Concerts Today.

The final concerts of the sixty-seventh Worcester Music Festival take place this afternoon and evening. In the afternoon the soloist will be Ernest Hutcheson, who will play the Tschaikovsky piano concerto. The soloists for the evening, "Artists' Night," are Sophie Breslau and Charles Hackett, with choral and orchestra performances for contrast and background.

The Worcester festival management is gratified by a public attendance and enthusiasm which have palpably increased very considerably in the last two seasons. The signs point to continued future gains and increasing public support. It is felt that a large part of this is due to the efforts of Mr. Stoessel. Certainly progress has been made from the low ebb of the festival of several seasons ago. The change is felt from the stage and in the audience. This festival, one of the oldest of America, is in the way of recovering former prestige and public favor.

WASHINGTON AGAIN HAS MUSIC FESTIVAL

Mrs. E. S. Coolidge's Concert Opened by Orchestra Directed by Ernest Bloch.

BACH WORK IS HEARD

Third Brandenburg Concerto Given With Abundance of the Spirit of the Composition.

By RICHARD ALDRICH.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—For the second time the transplanted music festival that was started in Pittsfield, Mass., seven years ago by Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge is being held in its new home in Washington. That zealous and public-spirited patroness of music appears only in the smallest type on the programs of the festival, but everybody knows that she knocked a hole in the wall of the Library of Congress as an entrance to a chaste and beautiful little hall which she built in an inner court of the great building and then got Congress graciously to accept it as a gift to the nation; and that thereby the nation is more or less officially involved in the patronage of music.

Then, having done this, she plans and supports the festival herself. No doubt what she sought was primarily not governmental auspices for the festival so much as an assurance of its permanency, and this she has gained by the interest and participation in an ex-officio capacity of the Librarian of Congress and the head of the Music Division of the Library.

There are various problems still to be solved in the matter of these festivals, one of which is their date. This year the date is put a couple of weeks earlier than last, when it was a whole month later than it used to be at Pittsfield. The matter is of interest because upon it depends the possibility of the attendance of many professional musicians and teachers. And the early date is out of the question because in September Washington is likely to be hot.

Five Concerts This Year.

However, there was a large gathering of musicians and musical amateurs from Washington and from further away at the opening concert held this evening. The festival is to continue four days, a day longer than heretofore, and will offer five concerts.

Mrs. Coolidge has always secured the presence of some foreign quartet of excellence. This year it is the Pro Arte String Quartette of Brussels, four young men of good reputation, who from their youth and nationality are naturally largely interested in the newer music of the Belgian school. In addition, the Flonzaley Quartet will have a concert to themselves over the "Stringwood Ensemble" of New York, whose name sufficiently indicates its composition and purposes. The opening concert tonight was given by a small orchestra, a "Chamber Orchestra," as it might properly be called, under the direction of Mr. Ernest Bloch.

A feature that has always attracted interest to these chamber music festivals is the prize, at first offered every year, now every other year, by Mrs. Coolidge, its place being taken in the alternate year by the order of a new work from some designated composer. This year is the prize year, and the prize, offered for a sonata for violin and piano, has gone to a young Belgian, Albert Huybrechts. It will be played by the Pro Arte quartet tomorrow for the first time.

The festival had a suitable opening this evening with a performance of Bach's Third Brandenburg Concerto for string orchestra. It is one of those six comparatively youthful works in which the composer's overflowing wealth of ideas and his endless resource in shaping them are most engagingly displayed; a work of wonderful spirit and vital muscularity. The performance had an abundance of the spirit of the composition and an abundance of careful modeling, under Mr. Ernest Bloch's direction, though not all the finesse in the matter of tone and precision that a more permanent body would have given it.

The eighteenth century was further represented by a "Serenata Notturna" by Mozart. Three movements were played, though Mozart in this kind of composition rarely "let go" in less than half a dozen. But the three were enough to impart to the occasion the charm, the urbane gaiety of the master, scrupulously enough needed to strengthen the listeners for what was to follow. It is written for two small string orchestras with kettle drum, the orchestras being unequally divided as to their composition, one lacking the cellos and double basses of the other.

New Wine in An Old Bottle.

In nomenclature at least the rest of the program followed the eighteenth century spirit. There was a "Ricercare," by Malipiero, for eleven instruments that was, except for its name, as far as it was possible to get from the eighteenth century spirit, and a "Concerto Grosso," by Mr. Bloch himself, for string orchestra and piano that was a putting of new wine into an old bottle.

Malipiero is one of the most uncompromising of the younger Italian modernists, and in his piece, which was played for the first time in America, he spares his listeners none of the pains of modern music. A ricercare in the old sense was a piece written with all the most recondite resources of contrapuntal art. In this case it is a brilliant example of the art that conceals art.

It was, in fact, a fine exposition of some of the most characteristic and poverty-stricken ugliness of what calls itself "modern." Mr. Bloch secured what appeared to be a complete realization of the composer's difficult purposes. It must have been this fact that the audience commended by several hearty recalls for him.

Bloch Composition Wins Applause.

Mr. Bloch's own piece is a very different aspect of modern style. It is a richly scored and full-throated utterance of ideas in themselves pregnant, though almost throughout of the sombre cast that is now recognized as belonging to his music. There is a vehement prelude of a sullen splendor; a dirge heavy and oppressive in its representation of grief, a pastoral with tactile dance that lighten the atmosphere somewhat but not much—the dances would not require a light fantastic toe in the dancing—and a final figure, a fine modern specimen of the form with characteristic and strongly marked subjects developed with a master's skill.

The piano in this work is treated not as a solo instrument but as a member of the orchestra; and though there is little trace of the "concertino" that so frequently formed a part of the old concerto grosso, the piece quite corresponds to many specimens of that form. It is one of the most successful of Mr. Bloch's compositions, though it is said to have been written especially for the benefit of his pupils and perhaps does not embody all the qualities and characteristics which he now regards as essential to his maturer style. But it gave a real pleasure and called forth much applause.

Sun Chuan-fang against the invading Cantonese was broken by a telegram to Sun's headquarters here.

His plan had been to advance from Northern Kiangsi direct to Hankow in conjunction with Chen Tiao-yuan, commanding the Anhwei troops. The latter was unable to keep to the timetable, and this enabled the Cantonese to capture Tehan, in Sun's rear, temporarily cutting his railway communications in Kiangsi.

At the same time General Chang Kai-shek, the Cantonese commander, advanced against Nanchang.

Quickly detaching his Fifth and Eighth mixed brigades, Sun drove the Cantonese from Tehan and compelled Chang to retire.

What threatened to be a serious defeat for Sun thus turned out to be an expensive reverse for the South.

In all the United States—

there are only nine hotels which are acknowledged by hoteldom itself as symbolical of the elegance and luxury of modern times.

WHEN comparisons are made these nine hotels are always in mind, and rightly so because they represent the highest achievement in providing distinguished guests with service and luxury to which they are accustomed.

In New York City, on account of its greatness and the necessity of supplying these accommodations to a large number of guests, there are two such hotels—The St. Regis and one other. They have shared this high honor for years.

And now, a new freshness is being added to the sumptuous atmosphere of the St. Regis—a newness as elaborate as its original furnishings and quite in keeping with its splendid traditions. Under the new management it is being refurnished and redecorated throughout. Suites of any size can be arranged.

DAUGHERTY HOUNDED STEUER TELLS JURY

Defense Ends Its Summing Up In Trial of Daugherty and Miller for Conspiracy.

EXPLAINS BURNED RECORDS

ADMITS SMITH GOT BONDS

Attorney Denies, However, That They Reached His Client—Buckner to Make Address Today.

An explanation of the burning by Harry M. Daugherty, formerly Attorney General, of records of his bank account which the Government prosecutors have said they needed was offered yesterday by Max D. Steuer, his counsel, at the twenty-second day of the trial of Mr. Daugherty and Colonel Thomas W. Miller, formerly Alien Property Custodian, in the Federal court on charges of conspiracy.

Mr. Steuer completed his closing address to the jury in Mr. Daugherty's behalf at 6 o'clock last night. Colonel William Rand had said the last word for Colonel Miller at about noon. United States Attorney Buckner will sum up for the Government today. Judge Julian W. Mack is not expected to deliver his charge to the jury before tomorrow morning at the earliest.

The bank records in question comprised important ledger sheets of the private accounts of Mr. Daugherty, Mal S. Daugherty, his brother, and the late Jess Smith, his friend and campaign collector, in the Midland National Bank of Washington Court House, Ohio, of which Mal Daugherty is President. The Government had said the missing records caused a break in the "chain of circumstantial evidence" by which it sought to link Mr. Daugherty, in particular, with the $391,000 in bonds which Richard Merton, German capitalist, paid to the late John T. King in the $7,000,000 American Metal Company alien property transfer in 1921.

Burning of the Records.

"It was in some mad, lone moment that Harry Daugherty destroyed those sheets," Mr. Steuer told the tensely attentive jury. "They had been produced before the Todd Grand Jury here in October. The prosecutor had said he didn't want to see them. They went back to Ohio. What happened? Harry Daugherty took them to that little 'shack' of his and his brother's outside Washington Court House! Harry Daugherty—yesterday, sought after by all the land; today, hounded; a broken old man; his life spent; his best friend, the President, dead; his close friend, Jess Smith, gone, a suicide; his wife gone; his political career over. He went to the 'shack'—and those whom the gods would destroy they first make mad. So this lonesome old man, alone with those records, destroyed them. He thought of the hounds who wanted to know—to know of the American Metal transfer? No! No, they were the barking dogs, the yelpers, who wanted to know how the funds were used in the 1919-1920 campaign of President Harding. He said to himself: 'They will never see them! They will never see them!' And he destroyed the sheets they wanted.

"Now you are asked to draw the inference that because they were destroyed he was the one who received those various checks from John T. King. Had Mal Daugherty destroyed them, or Jess Smith destroyed them, the inference would have been the same. By such an inference you are asked now to believe that Harry Daugherty so cheaply sold a life of achievement and of attainment of high ambition."

Mr. Steuer offered his own conviction of who had received the much debated bonds.

"I have no more doubt than that I am standing here," he said, "that the bonds in question were given by King to Jess Smith."

Jess Smith committed suicide on May 30, 1923, in a hotel suite in Washington which he had shared with Mr. Daugherty. A few days previously, under long-standing pressure, Smith finally had told Mal Daugherty, the latter testified, that he was "short" more than $60,000 in campaign funds which he had been collecting for Harry Daugherty since 1919. Smith made restitution of some $57,000, and this payment included $50,000 of the bonds which, the Government showed, Merton had given to King.

Government's Theory Attacked.

Mr. Steuer took up each one of the bond sales and coupon payments of $22,163.81, $4,143.75 and $2,125 which the Government sought to trace circumstantially to the former Attorney General. If these payments had taken such a course as the Government alleged, Mr. Steuer said, they would have successively reduced the alleged principal to a point which completely contradicted the Government's charge that Mr. Daugherty had had these bonds at his command, en bloc, throughout.

Mr. Steuer further alleged that Mr. Daugherty was being made the victim of "powerful political interests" which he had antagonized and which, through his efforts, had been required to pay $1,500,000 more for the American Metal Company alien property than they had expected to pay.

At one point Mr. Steuer bitterly assailed John Foster Dulles of New York, an attorney, for what he charged was unprofessional conduct in legal advice, which it was alleged he had given to the Swiss.

Mr. Steuer took marked issue with Colonel Rand in the latter's earlier assertion that final responsibility in approving the claim had rested, not upon Colonel Miller, but upon Mr. Daugherty. Mr. Steuer held it was the reverse.

At the morning session Colonel Rand admitted that Colonel Miller had been a guest of Richard Merton at a champagne dinner in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel on Sept. 30, 1921, and that there his client personally had turned over checks to Mr. Merton for some $6,500,000 of the claim money. Colonel Rand regarded it as a praiseworthy courtesy.

Colonel Rand advanced the theory that the Government could not assume that Colonel Miller had received from King or Smith $50,000 in Merton-King bonds, as the Government alleged, so long as there was "any other reasonable explanation," such as the overwhelming likelihood that these bonds had reached him after going through many hands in the channels of commerce.

NEW CANTON TAXES OCT. 11.

Powers Were Not Consulted—Salt Payments to Cease.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PEKING, Oct. 7.—It is reported here that the Canton Government has issued a mandate imposing internal taxes, to go into force on Oct. 11. No consent having been obtained from the interested powers, any attempt to collect these taxes will be regarded by many as a deliberate violation of treaty stipulations.

Certain foreigners assert that irreparable consequences will inevitably follow.

The Salt Administration has been officially informed that, owing to the financial demands due to the state of war prevailing, remittances of salt collections under the control of Sun Chuan-fang will be discontinued as of Oct. 1.

Inasmuch as virtually all of the country is financially involved in the present war, it is expected that all other local potentates will follow suit, regardless of all diplomatic arrangements to the contrary.

In August China notified the Belgian Government that the Chinese-Belgian Treaty of 1865 will be abrogated on Oct. 29, the anniversary of its ratification. This treaty is unilateral and thus does not give China the right of denunciation.

Belgium has replied that both nations should await the reports of the Tariff Conference and Extraterritorial Commission.

Foreigners here who oppose the Chinese course think it will be astonishing if other powers fail to stand by Belgium in a matter they consider vital to all foreign interests.

Some observers here feel that the Belgian Government, which contains a large Socialist element, may agree with China.

It has been suggested that a solution would be for Belgium to agree to revise her treaty so as to correspond with any revised treaty negotiated in the future by any large power.

ACCUSED OF PRE-WAR PLOTS

German Prince's Son Was Spy, It Is Said at London Hearing.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—A story of anti-British plots, framed by an alleged German spy before the outbreak of the great war, was told at yesterday's sitting in London of the Anglo-German mixed arbitral tribunal. A claim was brought by a British subject for the recovery of a pre-war debt against Dr. Charles Herman Liebbrand, who was interned in England on the outbreak of the war. Dr. Liebbrand, who contended that he is no longer a German subject and that, therefore, the tribunal had no jurisdiction, was said to be the author of books on international peace.

According to the solicitor for the creditor, Dr. Liebbrand was the son of a Prince of Thurn and Taxis. It is alleged that he went to Felixstowe about the year 1913 and endeavored to obtain control of electrical undertakings, planned the construction of a light railway linking up towns on the Suffolk coast, made frequent motor trips along the coast, took soundings at sea, placed powerful lights on cliffs and kept a close watch on British naval movements.

Dr. Lesmann, who appeared for the German Government, strongly contested the assertion that Dr. Liebbrand had been in the German Secret Service.

theatre looking at the latest Douglas Fairbanks offering. Several other new American feature pictures are being shown in Paris now and the Queen hopes to see them before sailing, because she fears she won't have time when she reaches the United States.

Stories that Princess Ileana had learned the Charleston in anticipation of her American visit were called slightly exaggerated today. Like nearly every other young girl, she has amused herself by trying Charleston steps, but the dance is not popular in the courts of Europe.

Beatrice Explains Canceling of Trip.

PARIS, Oct. 7 (AP).—Infanta Beatrice, Queen Marie's sister, arrived from England this evening to tell Queen Marie of her decision to abandon the idea of accompanying her to the United States. Princess Beatrice said that she had decided to cancel her passage because she felt that she could not remain away from her children for so long a time as the American trip would take. The Princess has three sons, the youngest of whom is thirteen years old.

There were ten covers at the luncheon which Queen Marie gave in her hotel suite at midday. Colonel T. Bentley Mott, military attaché at the American Embassy and Mrs. Donald Malcom, wife of the American banker, who is now in Paris, were among the guests.

Tonight the Queen went to her third theatrical performance in as many nights, attending the operetta "Ciboulette," which tells the story of the Second Empire. She attended the performance as the guest of the authors, Robert de Flers and Francis de Croisset.

Princess Ileana was her mother's constant companion throughout the day but young Prince Nicholas, who is popularly known as "Nicky," showed his fondness for automobiles by joining Paris society in attending the opening of the Autumn Automobile Show in the Grand Palais.

BUSINESS MEN TO SEE MARIE.

Queen Will Visit Chamber of Commerce Building on Oct. 21.

One of the first public appearances by Queen Marie of Rumania after her arrival here Oct. 18 will be before the New York State Chamber of Commerce.

William L. De Bost, President of the chamber, told several hundred members attending the annual meeting that Queen Marie had announced she would be present at a special meeting of the chamber at noon on Oct. 21, in the Great Hall of the Chamber of Commerce Building on Liberty Street.

Another feature of the meeting was the acceptance by Mr. De Bost of a portrait of William Poultney Bigelow, a former member of the chamber and owner of The New York Evening Post with William Cullen Bryant from 1849 to 1860. Feodor Encke painted the portrait from life in 1901. Grace Bigelow and Major John Bigelow, daughter and son of Mr. Bigelow, presented the portrait.

Marble Bust for Queen Marie.

A marble bust which is to be presented to the Queen of Rumania by the League for Fostering Genius will be unveiled on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 15, in the Zeitlin Studios, 41 Gramercy Park, by Dr. Francis Snow, first President of the league. The bust is the work of Alexander Zeitlin.

GERMANY LEADS AS BORROWER HERE

Floats $102,052,000 of the $311,803,900 in Foreign Securities in Last Quarter.

1926 TOTAL $890,000,000

World Figures for the First Nine Months Are 70 Per Cent. of Those for All of 1925.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Germany is the biggest single borrower of money in the United States, exceeding the rest of Europe, as well as Latin America, in the value of securities, both Government and corporate, floated in this country in the July-August-September quarter of this year, according to figures made public today by the Finance and Investment Division of the Department of Commerce.

In that quarter foreign securities to a total of $311,803,900 were publicly offered for sale in the United States, and $102,052,000 of this sum represented German offerings.

The quarterly total of $311,803,900 brought the aggregate of such offerings for the first nine months of 1926 to about $890,000,000, or 70 per cent. of the total par value of our foreign capital flotations for the entire calendar year of 1925.

The nine-month ratio of new capital, or net nominal capital (par value minus refunding), was also 70 per cent., the department's figures show.

Foreign Flotations Since 1924.

Foreign securities offered in this country in recent years were given today as follows:

Period.	Nominal Capital.	Refunding.
1924, first half	$379,700,000	$153,800,000
1924, second half	630,100,900	178,000,000
1925, second half	723,376,000	129,435,000
1926, first half	678,853,000	149,195,000
1926, July	135,940,900	10,500,000
1926, August	71,088,900
1926, September	103,825,000	3,000,000

The outstanding features of America's activities as an underwriting nation during this third quarter were given by the department today as follows:

1. The unusual preparation of large blocks of securities. Of a total of forty-three issues underwritten, no less than fifteen were for $10,000,000 or above. In the first half year there were only sixteen issues of this class in a total of 109.

2. The unusual proportion of new capital. The sums to be devoted to refunding were only 4.3 per cent. of the total par value of the issues. In the first half year this ratio was 25.8 per cent.

3. The very large volume of new capital. If this volume were sustained throughout twelve months a new high record would be established.

Distribution of the Securities.

Of the total foreign securities floated during the quarter under review, about two-thirds were issued by private corporations and one-third by governmental bodies. Europe was the largest borrower, with Germany by all odds the largest single borrower in the world. Latin America took less than a third of the total issues, and Canada took about a seventh.

The distribution of foreign issues in this country in the third quarter of 1926 shows that Germany offered a total of $102,052,500; the rest of Europe, $62,000,000; Canada, $45,650,000; Latin America, $91,090,000, and the Far East, $11,011,400.

Of the total of $311,803,900 offered in the three months, $200,153,900 were corporate issues, and $111,650,000 were Government issues, or issues guaranteed by Governments. Of the total of forty-three issues thirty-one were Government and twelve corporate issues. From the total issues, the division stated, the sum of $13,500,000 must be deducted on account of refunding.

American Investments Abroad.

"It is observed that many persons use these statistics of foreign capital securities publicly offered in the United States as if they were a complete register of all American investments abroad," the department said. "Caution against this error is never out of place.

"Among numerous cases of American investments of the quarter not included in the compilation are:

"1. The founding by the Commercial Investment Trust Corporation in July of a subsidiary at Berlin capitalized at 5,000,000 marks.

"2. The reported private loan of $6,000,000 to the Hamburg-American Line.

"3. The reported private refunding loan of $8,000,000 by the Anglo-American Oil Company, Ltd., and

"4. The $20,000,000 of Argentine six months' Treasury bills placed privately by two New York houses."

JEWELERS START FUND FOR RODACK'S FAMILY

Several Hundred Dollars Given for Kin of Dealer Slain by Hold-Up Men in July.

Members of the jewelry trade started a fund yesterday for the relief of the family of Aaron Rodack, the Washington Heights jeweler who was shot to death resisting a hold-up of his store at 3,680 Broadway on July 22.

Jerome Katz of the jewelry firm of L. and J. Katz of 20 West Forty-seventh Street, said that contributions totaling several hundred dollars had already been received. The Jeweler's Circular, a weekly trade organ, printed an appeal in its issue yesterday to which a large response is expected. Mr. Rodack left a wife and two children, who are understood to be in poor circumstances.

Mrs. Rodack felt that after the death of her husband she was unable to carry on his business and it was said yesterday that the business would soon be liquidated.

MELLON DISREGARDS DEBT RESERVATIONS

As Head of Our Commission, He Declares No French Strings Would Bind America.

REICH BONDS NOT BROACHED

Administration Expects Bankers to Consult Washington Before Action on Rail Securities.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Further evidence that the United States Government is determined to adhere to the Franco-American debt agreement in the form in which it pends before the French Parliament was given today when Secretary Mellon, spokesman and Chairman of the Debt Commission, declared that any reservations, oral or otherwise, covering contingencies such as the failure of German reparations, that might be attached by official authority in Paris, would not be binding upon the Washington Government.

In other words, Mr. Mellon and his associates on the Debt Commission expect the French Government to ratify the Mellon-Berenger funding agreement as it stands, ratified by the House and awaiting action in the Senate pending approval in Paris.

Treasury officials appear to be confident that France will ratify the debt agreement in the near future. Their belief is that the strength of the Poincaré Government, on this point, is steadily growing as the idea spreads among the French people that confidence must be restored before credit can be obtained upon which to rebuild the French financial structure.

Inquiry at the Treasury disclosed that this Government so far has not been sounded by American bankers on a proposal to float German railway bonds in this country. While bankers who might be interested would in the first instance take up such a question with the Secretary of State, the matter would at once be communicated to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Early in the Harding Administration, the President addressed an appeal to representative American bankers urging them not to undertake the flotation of foreign Government securities without advising with the Secretary of State. This suggestion has been adhered to by international bankers in this country.

The present Administration therefore expects that if Germany proceeds with any plan to sell railway bonds as a means of enlarging immediate revenues, the proposed flotation here would be preceded by a conference of bankers with the Washington authorities.

BERLIN, Oct. 7.—Emil Jannings, foremost German screen star, left here today for Hamburg, whence he will sail for New York to carry out a six months' engagement with Famous Players at Hollywood. Just before his departure the actor was received by Foreign Minister Stresemann, who gave him "pointers" on how to promote German-American relations. Burgomaster Boess, Berlin's Mayor, had given Herr Jannings a little earlier a cordial message to Mayor Walker of New York.

The German movie world and hundreds of film fans assembled at the railroad station to see the star of "Last Laugh" and "Variety" off. Jannings and his wife were fairly buried under flowers and other gifts. They will sail tomorrow aboard the Hamburg-American liner Albert Ballin.

Spanish Singer Appears Sad as She Leaves France to Make Home Here.

HAVRE, France, Oct. 7 (AP).—Raquel Meller, the Spanish singer, appeared sad when she boarded the steamer France last night, bound for New York. Some of those at the quay remarked that her apparent sadness may have been due to regrets at leaving France or to reproaches of ingratitude made against her by French playgoers, whom she is leaving to make her home in the United States.

The face of the singer, however, lighted up when she saw a huge trunk filled with new dresses made especially for her. She declared she looked forward with joy to reaching America, where everybody treated her like a Queen on her recent visit.

MOTOR ACCIDENTS TAKE THREE LIVES

Child Killed in Brooklyn and One Man in Manhattan and Another in Yonkers.

SEVERAL PERSONS INJURED

Woman Run Down by Stolen Car Which Rams Wagon and Second Car in Its Flight.

Frances Marks, 4 years old, of 406 Sheffield Avenue, Brooklyn, became impatient yesterday afternoon when a motor truck blocked her path as she started to cross the street near her home, and when she darted from behind the truck she was struck and killed by a light delivery truck, operated by John Koberend of 126-11 Liberty Avenue, Richmond Hill, Queens. Witnesses told the police that the driver was not responsible for the accident and he was not held.

An unidentified man, about 50 years old, medium sized and with gray hair and brown eyes and dressed in a gray cap, gray suit, blue shirt and black shoes, was killed instantly early in the day when a backing taxicab knocked him down at the Bowery and Delancey Street. The chauffeur, Patro Ambulo of 167 Elizabeth Street, was arrested by Patrolman Hanson on a technical homicide charge.

William Geyer, 35 years old, of 718 North Broadway, Yonkers, was struck by an automobile at Warburton Avenue and Point Street, Yonkers, in the forenoon and died in St. John's Hospital. Andrew Niznick of 16 Cedar Street, Yonkers, driver of the car, was released in $1,000 bail after Dr. Amos O. Squire, Medical Examiner, had ordered his arrest on a technical charge of homicide.

The chauffeur of a motor bus and the motorman and nine passengers in a trolley car were injured last evening when the car rammed the bus at Ninety-fifth Street and Burnside Avenue, Elmhurst Manor, Queens. The chauffeur, Michael Cimelluca of 130-32 Fifty-ninth Street, Flushing, was thrown from his vehicle. In St. John's Hospital, Long Island City, it was found that he had internal injuries and several scalp wounds. The motorman and the passengers were attended by two ambulance surgeons from Flushing and St. John's Hospital and went to their homes.

Mrs. Anna Parsons, 50 years old, of 442 Amsterdam Avenue, suffered bruises and cuts on head and body in the forenoon when she was struck by a speeding automobile at Park Avenue and Sixty-fifth Street. She was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital.

Two negroes were in the automobile, which had been stolen on the previous night from Dr. George Lockwood of 56 East 126th Street. After striking the woman the driver of the car increased his speed. He was pursued by Patrolman DeCosta of the East Sixty-seventh Street Station. The negro drove the car into a horse-drawn wagon at Eighty-seventh Street and rammed a parked automobile fifty feet further on and then jumped and ran. He escaped, but his companion, Roland Thomas of 65 West 140th Street, was caught. He was held in $5,000 bail on an assault charge by Magistrate Harry A. Gordon in the Harlem Court.

Will Ask Change in Dower Laws.

UTICA, N. Y., Oct. 7 (AP).—The New York Legislature will be asked at its next session to abolish certain dower and courtesy rights, Henry J. Davenport, President of the New York State Title Association, told the members of the New York State Association of Real Estate Boards attending the annual convention here today. Amendment of existing statutes will be sought so that relatives will not inherit all the property of a wife who dies without a will.

his life. Naturally he would say anything.

"The thing that interests me is the fight about De Martini. If this fight centres around innocent people, why all the squabble about bringing De Martini into New Jersey?

"The decision of Governor Smith today that De Martini should be extradicted was quite what I expected from such an able and incorruptible Governor. The specious plea that the law forbids De Martini to tell the facts he ascertained when he began the investigation of the murder four years ago when he lived at the house of Mrs. Hall, is met by the fact that even if his position is correct, which I deny, the law still allows him to tell the truth by permission of his employers. Some of the persons indicted employed him and he worked for them.

"He says he will tell all the facts if he can do so legally. He can do so legally if they tell him to do so. Why any one should wish to conceal the facts, I do not know. I am not asking him for facts against any particular persons. I am asking him to reveal what facts he has, as he was the first man on the scene of the murder, outside of the authorities, worked himself and had working under him other detectives for a considerable period of time."

The hearing by Governor Smith was held in his suite in the Hotel Biltmore. Senator Simpson appeared for New Jersey. De Martini's attorney was John McKeim Minton Jr. of Brooklyn, who was reinforced by two of the Hall-Carpender-Stevens legal staff, Augustus C. Studer of Newark and Nathaniel J. Palzer of 120 Broadway. Mr. Palzer is an associate of Timothy N. Pfeiffer, also of defense counsel.

Mr. Minton contended that all the proceedings so far in connection with De Martini were null and void and did not warrant Governor Smith's granting the application of the Governor of New Jersey. The attorney then recited the arrest of De Martini and his release in $10,000 bail last Sunday for today's hearing. He emphasized that the proceedings had been undertaken on "information and belief," and charged that the only reason New Jersey wished De Martini returned was so that he could be subjected to a thorough examination.

"In addition," said Mr. Minton, "there is no specific date stated in the affidavit, and one of the very questions which is before your Honor and on which the defendant has a right to traverse the writ on a hearing of this kind, and which the Court says is the one question of fact before the Governor, is the date on which he was in the demanding State.

Doubts Action Is in Good Faith.

"In the second place, I do not believe, Governor, that this application is made in good faith for the purpose of attempting to try this man for any crime alleged to have been committed by him in New Jersey. The real reason why they are asking you to send this citizen of New York back into the State of New Jersey is so that he can be questioned, not by a Grand Jury, not by a court under subpoena, but by police officials."

Governor Smith interrupted to say:

"On that point—the reason you allege for their wanting to bring this man back—I cannot pay any attention to that in view of the fact that there is before me an affidavit from the Prosecutor of the Pleas that the purpose of the Prosecutor is to try him and for no other purpose. That is sworn to and is part of the papers. He says in it that the fugitive De Martini is charged with the crime of a high misdemeanor, as defined in the Crimes act, revision of 1898, and so on and so on. And in that affidavit he says:

"'I certify that the requisition for his extradition is made in good faith, with the sole intent to prosecute him for the said crime, and not to secure return to this State to afford opportunity to serve him with civil process, nor for any other purpose.' Now, I have to be guided by that."

"You have to be guided," said Mr. Minton, "by the statement of the Governor of New Jersey. I am questioning the good faith of others, but not the good faith of the Governor of New Jersey. However, on the legal proposition, I think my argument is perfectly sound on that and I will be perfectly willing to rest on the legal proposition."

Governor Smith indicated that inasmuch as Governor Moore, over his signature, had attested to the good faith of the effort to get De Martini back, it was good enough for him.

New Court Move Today.

After further argument, it was mutually agreed that the warrant and extradition papers, signed by Governor Smith, would be held in abeyance until the conclusion to today's hearing. The papers were served on Police Commissioner McLaughlin who turned them over to Deputy Inspector Arthur Carey at headquarters. It is expected that service this afternoon will be followed by the suing out of another writ of habeas corpus by the defense counsel.

Robert H. Neilson of New Brunswick, a defense attorney took notice last night of the prosecution's contention that De Martini was at the scene of the crime early. He said that Mr. Pfeiffer was retained by Mrs. Hall on Sept. 26, 1922 and that he in turn engaged De Martini some time later. He declared that De Martini could not possibly have visited the scene of the crime until about a month after its commission. By that time, the scene had been completely altered by the tramping of thousands of persons.

Inspector Underwood at Somerville reported the death of another State's witness. Investigators who went out to find Mrs. Emma Voorhees, one of the witnesses who heard shots and angry voices on the night of the murder, learned that she had died last Spring. Mrs. Voorhees's evidence was not essential to the State's case.

RATTLESNAKES IN ZOO AID CAUSE OF MEDICINE

Curator and Brazilian Expert Spend Day Extracting Venom for American-Made Serum.

The rattlesnakes at the Bronx Zoological Park were a comparatively tame lot last night, following a day of venom extracting by Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of reptiles, and Dr. Afranio do Amaral, one of Brazil's foremost experts on anti-snake serum.

Nine rattlers and a large number of moccasin snakes were used yesterday to help produce American-made anti-snake serum, an enterprise on which Dr. Amaral is working at the Mulford Company laboratories at Glenolden, Pa. The importation of anti-snake serum from Brazil is forbidden, according to a regulation of the United States Public Health Service, and Dr. Amaral is working in cooperation with Dr. Thomas Barbour of Harvard, the United Fruit Company and the Mulford laboratories to produce an American supply. In about four months, said Dr. Ditmars yesterday, there should be an American supply sufficient for all emergencies.

Yesterday afternoon the snakes were brought in heavy ashcans into a room where Dr. Ditmars and Dr. Amaral had prepared a simple extracting apparatus. A rubber diaphragm was stretched across the top of a small vial, and the whole apparatus screwed to a table. The snakes were allowed to plunge their fangs into the rubber and the venom was caught in the vial. At the end of the day enough deadly poison had been collected to kill a score of people.

Wife Asks Enoch Arden Decree.

James Asa Pratt Jr. left his wife at their home, 52 Sixtieth Street, Flushing, L. I., on the morning of May 23, 1913, to go to his work as usual. According to Mrs. Hazel Palmer Pratt, he has not returned and she has not heard from him since, so she applied to Justice Carswell yesterday in the Supreme Court, Queens, for an Enoch Arden decree of annulment. Justice Carswell reserved judgment.

Consider The Camel

The camel's peculiarities are not limited to his ability to go a long time between drinks. He has developed a type of overcoat that is unique in nature.

The camel lives and does his work in the desert where days are blazing hot and nights are shivering cold. To meet this condition the versatile camel grows hair that unites the maximum of warmth with a minimum of weight.

When you slip on one of our smart new camel's hair models, you will agree that D'Andrea Brothers and the camel, between, them, have worked out the ideal combination of aristocratic style and weightless warmth in a top-coat. Obtainable in either the natural browns or rich dark colors.

VON SEECKT VICTIM OF PLOT BY CECILIE

Ex-Crown Princess Got Her Son in Army Unknown to German Generalissimo.

HIS ACQUIESCENCE FORCED

Disavowal of Acts of High Officers Would Have Caused Upheaval —Cabinet Backs Gessler.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 7.—General von Seeckt fell a victim to the machinations of an aristocratic camarilla organized on her eldest son's behalf by former Crown Princess Cecilie when, against his own better judgment, the German Generalissimo approved the illegal participation of young Prince William of Prussia in the recent manoeuvres of the Republican Reichswehr and thereby precipitated a political scandal leading yesterday to his own resignation from the army.

This became known this evening following another day's deliberations between President von Hindenburg and his Cabinet Ministers. Chancellor Marx called on the Field Marshal this afternoon soon after his return to Berlin and remained with him for more than an hour. The President also conferred separately with Defense Minister Gessler and General von Seeckt himself.

Cabinet Backs Gessler's Stand.

While there has been no further meeting of the Cabinet, it is indicated at Wilhelmstrasse that the Chancellor and his associates are solidly behind Herr Gessler in his resolve that the Reichswehr chief's retirement must be final if Gessler is to remain civilian head of the army. Von Seeckt's failure to produce any adequate reason for keeping the Hohenzollern Prinzeling's "temporary enrollment" secret from the Defense Minister led the latter to exclaim: "I absolutely refuse to be a puppet in the hands of my officers any longer." Hence while President von Hindenburg's acceptance of Von Seeckt's resignation last night has not yet been promulgated officially a reversal of his initial decision on the President's part probably would cause a Cabinet crisis.

Both the ex-Crown Prince and his wife, it would appear, have been determined for a long time to get their son the regular military training that is deemed an essential feature of a Prussian Prince's education. Months ago at a social gathering the ex-Crown Princess broached the subject to General von Seechkt, who, however, merely gazed silently at her through his celebrated monocle. Thereupon the ambitious mother sought out officers more susceptible to royal influences than their commander. For months she pulled every social string at her disposal—and even in the German Republic a potential Empress has many such strings.

Scores of high Reichswehr officers are scions of noble families still devoted to the ousted dynasty, and the feudal heads of these aristocratic clans brought every possible pressure to bear upon their military relatives. The upshot was that one day von Seeckt was asked to approve an order by which young William Hohenzollern already had had a grave effect on opinion in France and strengthened the hands of the Nationalists in their opposition to the Thoiry program. Now M. Briand can point to von Seeckt's resignation as direct evidence of the strength of the Republican regime as opposed to the crimes of the Nationalists.

Young Wilhelm Hohenzollern's attempt to follow in his father's and grandfather's footsteps as an officer of the Guards has had another curious consequence. Under the Treaty of Versailles he must have engaged to serve for twelve years therein or else the treaty has been broken in making him an exception to this rule. That is a matter for the Conference of Ambassadors to rule on at their next meeting. If he was enrolled for a shorter term than twelve years then there has been flagrant contravention of the terms of the Peace Treaty which is grave because of the personality and antecedents of this young man and also because it opens the question whether or not other short-term enrollments are not being indulged in with the result that more men and officers are being trained than is legally permitted.

Even von Seeckt's resignation is not likely to give entire satisfaction to the Ambassadors and when they meet again in two weeks' time it is expected that a solemn request will be made for an explanation of the whole affair.

PARIS IS GLAD SEECKT GOES.

His Retirement Is Seen as Important for German Republic.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 7.—As one and possibly the most important result of young Wilhelm Hohenzollern's military parade, Aristide Briand has become master of the Paris political situation. Nothing more fortunate for the chances of development of the policy of the Entente laid down at Thoiry could have happened, from the French Foreign Minister's viewpoint, than the resignation of General von Seeckt as head of the Reichswehr.

Even the Temps, which has never been an enthusiastic believer in any change of heart in Germany which could permit the establishment of friendly relations with France on a solid basis, writes this evening:

"Von Seeckt's retirement marks in every way a turning point in the history of the German Republic."

General von Seeckt has always been regarded here as the chief representative in power of the old Imperial Germany and his resistance to the allied will as expressed in numerous more or less veiled demands of the Conference of Ambassador's for his dismissal has been so strong that his resignation now is hailed as a victory for the democratic and pacific forces, not only in Germany but here.

EX-CONVICT ON TRIAL IN POLICEMAN'S DEATH

State to Try to Prove Heslin With Two Pistols Shot Patrolman After Attempted Hold-Up.

Peter Heslin, an ex-convict, was placed on trial yesterday in Judge Nott's part of General Sessions on a first-degree murder indictment accusing him of shooting and killing Patrolman Charles Reilly of the East 104th Street Station in an attempt to hold up five men in East 105th Street, near First Avenue, on the night of April 5. Heslin is alleged to have used two pistols.

Assistant District Attorney James E. McDonald told the jury that the State would prove that Heslin shot the patrolman three times after Reilly had attempted to disarm Heslin and had struck him on the head with his nightstick. As Reilly dropped, the prosecutor went on, the patrolman fired a shot at Heslin, which struck him in the left leg.

After the killing patrolmen traced a blood trail to an apartment around the corner at 2,042 First Avenue. Although Heslin contended that he had received his wound in a fight three days before, Mr. McDonald said, the police found two pistols in the apartment, which were believed to have been used in the killing of the patrolman. Additional evidence against Heslin, the Assistant District Attorney continued, was uncovered in rubber heels on the defendant's shoes. The imprint of an arrow on one heel, he said, was found in the blood on a stone along the trail. This stone will be produced in court, Mr. McDonald promised.

Ledoro Corsini of 249 East Sixty-first Street, testifying for the State, said that he and four other men had left the North Italian Club in East 106th Street shortly before midnight when a man threatened them with two pistols in an attempted hold-up. Corsini will resume the stand today.

BYRD PLANE HERE ON TOUR OF NATION

Commander Guides Polar Craft Part of Way From Capital to Mitchel Field.

FIVE PILOTS ARE ABOARD

Take Turns at Controls—Josephine Ford Leaves Today With Bennett in Charge for Rest of Trip.

The Josephine Ford, the Fokker three-motored plane in which Commander Richard E. Byrd and Pilot Floyd Bennett flew to the North Pole and back to Spitsbergen, dropped in on Mitchel Field yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock after a flight from Washington. It was the first leg of a 7,000-mile flight around the United States, and the plane will leave this morning for Albany.

Commander Byrd piloted the plane for part of the flight, although today he will turn over charge of the plane to Floyd Bennett for the remainder of the trip. There were five pilots among the eleven persons on the plane yesterday, including Lieutenant Bernt Balchen, the Norwegian flier who helped Byrd at Spitzbergen, and who will be navigator and relief pilot during the trip.

Pilots Take Turns.

All the pilots took turns at the controls, one of them being Harry F. Guggenheim, donor of the Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics. The Guggenheim Fund financed the trip to aid the development of commercial aviation.

Others aboard the plane were Donald E. Keyhoe of the Department of Commerce, W. P. MacCracken Jr., Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aviation; Edward P. Warner, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aviation; Bryce Goldsborough of the Pioneer Instrument Corporation; Porter Adams, C. F. Kunkel and James McPhail. Mr. Goldsborough made the trip from the Fokker factory at Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., to check the instruments.

The use of instruments in navigation was shown by a comparison of the courses on the way to Washington and back. On the down trip the plane was navigated by instruments only, no attention being paid to landmarks. The course brought the plane to within 150 feet of Bolling Field. On the return trip yesterday the plane was steered by landmarks, the usual method of cross-country navigation, and missed Mitchel Field by a mile.

After leaving Albany the plane will go west to Mohawk Valley cities, Buffalo, along the lakes to Chicago, and then through the Central West to the Coast and back by way of the South.

Tells Aim of Trip.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Commenting on the purpose of the flight of Commander Byrd's plane, Assistant Secretary William F. MacCracken of the Department of Commerce said that the ease with which multimotored transport planes can maintain regular schedules in the transportation of mail, express, passengers and freight was not generally recognized in this country, although in Europe aerial travel was common.

"The tour now begun," he continued, "should awaken the people of the United States to the possibilities of commercial aeronautics. Once this realization is attained and business men of the country are convinced that aerial navigation is no longer an extravagant and dangerous plaything, this new industry will make rapid strides."

CENTRAL PARK GROUP TO TELL PLANS SUNDAY

Artists' Gate Committee of the Association to Give Dinner at Hotel Pennsylvania.

The Central Park Association will announce its Fall program at a dinner to be given by the Artists' Gate Committee of the association at the Hotel Pennsylvania on Sunday night. Members of the stage will entertain as an expression of their support of the work of the association. The entertainment will be directed by a committee including Joseph Freedlander, Chairman; Miss Marie Dressler, John Emerson, Lansing C. Holden, Clarence Fowler, Herbert Adams, Kenneth M. Murchison, Theodore A. Meyer, Edwin H. Blashfield, Otis Skinner and Julius Tannen.

"It should be recalled that at the time Central Park was laid out one of the chief gates of the park was named in honor of this same profession, the Artists, because of the importance of that element of society and of their unending contribution to the amusement and elevation of society," says an announcement of the association.

E. M. Statler, who has donated the use of the Pennsylvania grill room and banquet service at cost, and George Olsen's jazz band will furnish the music for the evening. Daniel Frohman, President of the Actors' Fund of America, has recruited stage talent for the occasion.

"Petite" Grand

The "Petite" Grand case is a beautiful contrast of two-tone woods.

THE SMALLEST HIGH-GRADE GRAND PIANO

WHEN the George Steck builders planned the "Petite" Grand, they provided for an even greater degree of the painstaking attention to detail that has always been the watchword in the Steck factories. Because expert piano craftsmen, like fine watchmakers, know that the secret of small instruments is increased—not diminished—care in construction. Only by this means could the seeming miracle they proposed be realized—a grand piano of diminutive size, with the sonority, resonant tone quality and responsive action of much larger instruments.

The "Petite" Grand is the resulting masterpiece. Four feet, six inches in length, and full-voiced and clear. The ideal piano for modern life because it conserves space, without sacrifice of the feature that gives long life to an instrument—quality.

OUR CARS NUMEROUS AT SALON IN PARIS

BUT THEIR COST IS HIGH

High Exchange Operates to Reduce the Sales of Machines in France.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 7.—The French automobile salon which opened today reflected the great effort being made by American manufacturers to reach European markets on an extensive scale.

Two years ago when the salon was held the few exhibits from the United States were not very attractive. Today it seemed that one car in four bore an American name. Led by General Motors, the manufacturers from across the Atlantic really made a strong bid for attention. With more than a dozen separate stands, American cars are the centre of a good deal of attraction.

The American exhibits lack the flash of the French and Italian makers, due largely to the fact that with the exception of the expensive cars the American makes have ordinary bodies, whereas, with the exception of the smallest and cheapest makes, the French cars usually have individually made custom bodies, which naturally make them more attractive to the eye. But a good deal has been seen of American cars in Europe, and there is no lack of visitors to the American stands. I am told that automobile makers and dealers have paid more attention to the United States exhibits than has the general public. This is because our cars, while they lack flashiness, have many features which are attracting the attention of the French manufacturers. A great deal of study has been put on the problem of how to give the light, fast-turning European motors the hill-climbing ability of the heavier American motors, and the American suspension arrangements have been largely copied.

Of course, with the present exchange rates and mutually hampering customs duties, sales of American cars over here run up against the fact that our cars cost more than a European car of the same class. And so, many Continental makers say they are not fearing American competition. But there is every evidence that when the exchange situation rights itself American cars will make an enormous bid for French favor, especially if our exporters will turn to the sale of chassis, leaving the French buyer to order the body which suits his fancy. The more American cars are sold in Europe the faster will be removed the obstacle of the difficulty of replacing worn or broken parts.

The general note of the salon is one of conservatism. Rather remarkable is the absence of freaks, although Peugeot has exhibited an amphibious machine, which is really a motor boat mounted on wheels, ready to take to the water by a simple shifting of the gear from the rear wheel transmission to the propellors sticking out under the spare tire carrier. There are many fewer smaller cars than two years ago, and, on the other hand, there is a marked drift from the number of enormous locomotive-like chassis. A leaf is taken from the American book in the turning out of six-cylinder motors from 12 to 16 horsepower, European measurement. Up to this year, the French stuck to four cylinders for the medium-size cars, but this year there is a marked move toward six cylinders for moderate horsepower, which has been the American standard for some years.

One also notices a reflection of the effort to get away from one effect of France's paved roads which, after 10,000 miles, will make almost any car body rattle. This is met by the wide use of flexible bodies covered with leather and imitation leather. These bodies look very slick in a salon, but experts have shown that they do not wear as well as steel and wood bodies.

American experts pointed also to the increased number of closed bodies. This they took as an acceptance of the American principle. However, the movement has gone by no means so far as in the States. This is because, except for very small cars, the automobile is still regarded in France as a luxury, which means that one generally has a chauffeur, and since the owner pays less attention to sheltering the chauffeur than himself as the driver, one sees more cabriolets and sedans in France than in America.

Of course there is a general advance in prices since the previous salon, but if one figures on a gold basis one sees French cars cheaper now than two years ago. Their prices, however, still remain considerably above American levels. On the other hand there is little doubt that the average French car will outlive the American car of the corresponding class. It is intended by the buyer, and therefore by the maker, to do so.

BANKERS ADJOURN, TURN TO PLEASURE

WILL START EAST TONIGHT

Discussions on Branch Banking Foreshadow Fight to Alter Federal Reserve Law.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 7.—The fifty-second annual convention of the American Bankers' Association closed at noon today after one of the stormiest meetings in the history of the organization, the membership having been sharply divided over the question of branch banking. In point of attendance it was the second largest convention ever held, the number of delegates having been exceeded only at a meeting in New York.

It is the consensus of opinion here, especially on the part of bankers who favor branch banking, that most of their influence will hereafter be brought to bear on State Legislatures in those States which now prevent branch banking. Relief for national bankers who feel that State banks are giving them unfair competition will have to come from Congress, through amendments to the Banking law, whether by the McFadden bill or other measures.

The opinion is widely held that the Federal Reserve System and the Treasury Department have accomplished an admirable and scientific financial service to the country, especially since the end of the war, and that a large part of the present prosperity is to be attributed to their skillful management.

The regret is heard on every hand here that the Federal Reserve System should be the subject of national and banking politics, and it now seems certain that there will be an attempt made to drag it further into politics when the proposal comes up to recharter the institution, probably at the December session of Congress. Western bankers will lead in the assault on the present Federal Reserve law, and already, behind closed doors, the ranks of bankers are lining up on one side or another, just as in the problem of branch banking.

Hits Bureaucracy and Blocs.

Wigginton E. Creed, President of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, was the final speaker today and descried the fact that business should depend so much on the whims of Congress.

"It is to me a terrifying thing that great business leaders must say that the prosperity of the American people depends upon what Congress does," he said. "There is a profound relation between Government and social and economic progress; no one need deny or question the fact. But if we keep our Government geared to American institutions we need not suffer the terror that chills us when legislators meet.

"It was to me an equally terrifying thing that the Mellon tax program, meeting the wishes of the public mind and backed by the whole force of the executive branch of an Administration selected overwhelmingly by the people, was yet held up an unconscionable time by the legislative methods we have allowed to grow up at Washington. In California one must go in some way before twelve different commissions, boards and officers, fully to organize an irrigation project. Bureaucracy and bloc legislation menace our free institutions."

Just before the adjournment, sine die, Oscar Wells, retiring President of the association and Mrs. Wells, were the recipients of a silver service. Each piece of which was more than 200 years old. The visiting bankers were entertained this afternoon at Hollywood by Louis B. Mayer of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation and by a number of picture stars.

They watched the making of several scenes in a picture and then saw a rodeo given by cowboy and Indian riders. Later in the day they enjoyed a barbecue at the Hollywood Bowl, and tonight the delegates attended a ball.

Tomorrow the visitors will have an all day outing at Catalina Island, while those who play golf will engage in a tournament at the Los Angeles Country Club. Most of the Eastern bankers will start for the Atlantic coast tomorrow night in their special trains.

Jean Arnot Reid, head of the women's department of the Bankers Trust Company of New York has been selected to head the Association of Bank Women for the coming year. Nina Y. Carter of Chicago was named Vice President, Louella H. Ensworth of Chicago Treasurer; Mina M. Bruere of New York, Recording Secretary, and Mrs. Elizabeth S. Robinson of New York, Corresponding Secretary.

Regional Vice Presidents for the women's organization were named as follows:

New England, Martha L. Scally of Boston.

Southern Division, J. Spencer Knapp of Atlanta.

Atlantic Division, Marjorie Allison of Allentown, Pa.

Lake Division, Lillian E. Oakley of Cleveland.

Midwestern, Lena B. Sulzer of St. Louis.

Southwestern, Beulah Moore of Oklahoma City.

Western, Grace Stoermer of Los Angeles.

TO CONTINUE BANK FIGHT.

Committee of One Hundred Will Ask Congress for Hull Amendments.

The Committee of One Hundred, which led the nation-wide fight to have the American Bankers' Association re-endorse the Hull amendments to the McFadden Banking bill, will carry its battle to the short session of Congress, which convenes in December. Commenting on the future plans of the committee, R. N. Baty, its secretary, said yesterday:

"We congratulate the opposition on their victory in preventing the American Bankers' Association from endorsing the Hull amendments. They have won the opening skirmish. We propose to win the real battle, which we shall wage during the short session of Congress.

"We are not at all discouraged by the vote against the Hull amendments. We take some consolation, however, from the fact that the total number of bankers voting for the resolution, which was equivalent to eliminating the Hull amendments, is only slightly more than 1 per cent. of the bankers of the country. That 1 per cent. has spoken, giving a decisive majority over the other 99 per cent. But that other 99 per cent. will speak in no uncertain terms between now and March 4, demanding that our independent banking system be protected as only the Hull amendments can protect it.

"The Committee of One Hundred accepts the challenge and its best efforts will be continued with renewed vigor."

Banking Paper Says It Has Record on Air Mail Bundle for Los Angeles

Close on the heels of an announcement that a Philadelphia firm had set a record with $150 in postage on an air mail parcel, The American Banker, a daily banking publication, set what it asserts, is a new record with $172.15 in stamps plastered on a package bound for Los Angeles.

The parcel was a bundle of copies of The American Banker destined for the American Bankers' Association convention in Los Angeles. It contained 200 copies of a 32-page special convention number and left New York by airplane on Monday morning, arriving in Los Angeles early on Wednesday. The postage on each copy of the publication was thus eighty-six cents and a fraction.

HARDING VISIT TO POLAND.

Is in His Private Capacity, Says the Polish Legation Here.

The report in a Washington dispatch printed in Wednesday's TIMES that W. P. G. Harding, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, was about to visit Poland on the invitation of the Bank of National Economics of Warsaw, "the State bank of Poland," and that his work there would consist largely in putting into application the recommendations of the Kemmerer mission, drew from the Polish Legation yesterday the statement that Governor Harding's projected visit to Poland is in a purely private capacity; that the Bank of National Economics has nothing in common with the Bank of Poland, the central bank of issue, nor has the visit of Governor Harding anything in common with the recent work of the American Financial Mission headed by Professor Kemmerer.

GARMENT WORKERS' STRIKE LASTING AND GROWS

Union Announces That They Can Stay Out Indefinitely—Sixty Paraders Arrested.

Funds to enable the 40,000 garment workers now on strike to stay out indefinitely have been subscribed, it was announced at the headquarters of their union last night. A strike benefit of $7 for single workers and $10 for married workers is being paid. Workers now employed voluntarily increased the assessment on themselves last night from 15 to 20 per cent. of their weekly wages. A day's pay has been voted by 10,000 cloakmakers and an equal number of dressmakers, and from this the union expects to realize $150,000.

Disorders continued in the garment district yesterday. The most serious one was at 3 P. M., when 200 strikers paraded through West Thirty-eighth Street. At Seventh Avenue they were ordered by the police to disband, and when they failed to do so twenty-two were arrested. Forty others were arrested on similar charges in the course of the day. In Jefferson Market Court, later Magistrate Jesse Silberman sentenced twenty-five of them to five days in jail or $25 fine. Seventeen strikers were discharged and fourteen were held in $100 bail each for hearing on Oct. 11.

The strikers appealed yesterday to Frank Gillmore, Executive Secretary of the Actors' Equity Association, to obtain the cooperation of Equity in their struggle. He said that as theatrical costumes were furnished by the managers, he did not believe Equity could assist them.

Deny Sale of Manganese Mines.

Denial was made yesterday at the offices of W. A. Harriman of a report from Paris that the American manganese concessions in Russia, now held by that financier and his associates, are to be sold to thenewly organized European iron and steel combination.

DRAW FOR SHOW POSITIONS.

Auto Men Meet to Prepare for Grand Central Palace Exhibits.

Motor car manufacturers and representatives met yesterday in the rooms of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce to draw for exhibition positions at the National Automobile Show beginning Jan. 8, 1927, in the Grand Central Palace. This annual conference is regarded as an important forerunner of the show and indicates the number and type of cars to be exhibited.

Forty-five different makes of passenger automobiles will be displayed, all in various open and closed models. Interest in the decision of the National Chamber to set apart a section for light delivery cars and trucks was shown in the drawing for nineteen different makes of trucks. Four types of taxicabs will also be shown.

Practically the same exhibitions of passenger cars and trucks will be seen in the Western National Show opening Jan. 29 in Chicago.

It is sometimes difficult for the unpracticed eye to discriminate between the false and true.

But the years themselves will strip away the sham and true worth will prevail!

Experience teaches us to place our faith in the house of best repute when we come to the selection of gems, furniture or floor coverings. Bigelow-Hartford is such an house.

That name is ingrained in the American tradition. Weavers for a full century, our reputation is woven indelibly into the warp and woof of fabrics from our looms.

The tradesman who has your welfare most at heart can scarce repress his pride when he displays for you his collection of Bigelow-Hartford rugs and carpets.

He knows that every time he sells you one of our floor coverings he forges another link in the silver chain that binds your patronage securely to his house. He knows you cannot buy Bigelow-Hartford quality at less than Bigelow-Hartford prices.

He knows that sturdily throughout the years, beneath the ceaseless tread of feet, it will serve you honestly and truly.

Bigelow-Hartford is the oldest manufacturer of floor coverings in America. That name on a rug or carpet is a medal of honor, a pledge of honest worth from a house that has not violated its trust these hundred years. Look for the name woven in the back of our fabrics as a guarantee of quality.

Servians, "Hartford-Saxony," Wiltons or Axminsters—whatever your needs or purpose you will find a Bigelow-Hartford product best suited to that service.

GIVES MUSSOLINI SECRET RADIO SET

TEST NEAR ROME PLANNED

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Oct. 7.—Premier Mussolini today received John Hays Hammond Jr. who presented to him a five-kilowatt broadcasting outfit of the selective wave or "narrowcasting" type. This apparatus, which will be set up in the vicinity of Rome, will be used for experimental purposes and, if found successful may become the nucleus of the new radio service for Government purposes which it is proposed to install in Italy.

The Premier thanked Mr. Hammond for the gift and also expressed his gratefulness for the time and effort Mr. Hammond had expended in working out the details of the proposed Government radio service, on which task the American has been engaged for a considerable time in collaboration with Italian engineers.

The plan is to have every Government office, including the police stations throughout the country, connected with central Government headquarters by means of the radio. It is regarded as necessary, however, that the system should be secret so that nobody except the offices to which the communications are addressed can listen in.

System Believed Suitable.

Mr. Hammond's "narrowcasting" system is believed to be especially fitted to achieve this purpose. This system employs a sending station emitting a low frequency carrier wave modulated with superaudible waves.

Nobody who does not know beforehand the frequency of both the carrier wave and the modulating waves can listen in, the inventor says, and the possible combinations of these two frequencies are so great that there is practically no likelihood of hitting upon them by chance. By changing the two frequencies often it is possible to make the system absolutely secret, it is said.

Speaking to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent after his interview with Premier Mussolini, Mr. Hammond said that the experiment which Italy proposed to try would be of great interest and should be watched carefully by other countries where broadcasting had already attained considerable development.

"In America," he continued, "the broadcasting situation is absolutely chaotic. We started in wrong and there is no hope of our ever bringing broadcasting back to a sound scientific basis because the people have grown accustomed to believing that the air belongs to the public.

"Italy, on the other hand, is starting with a clean slate and has an unparalleled opportunity of laying out her broadcasting system along truly scientific lines. It will be an experiment which America will watch with the greatest interest."

Flourishing Industry Seen.

If the experiments with the "narrowcasting" system were successful, Mr. Hammond said, he believed that a flourishing radio industry would surely be possible in Italy. The high exchange and high cost of labor in the United States would make the price of radio apparatus constructed in America prohibitive for Italian purses, Mr. Hammond thought.

He hinted that he himself would not be averse to taking a hand in founding a radio industry in Italy to exploit the apparatus on which he holds the patents.

Mr. Hammond said that the Premier was quick to appreciate the advantages which the "narrowcasting" system would confer on the Government. As an illustration he said that while in Italy today there were close to 150,000 receiving sets, only about 22,000 people paid the tax which the Government imposed on radio fans, the remaining sets operating clandestinely. Such a state of affairs would be impossible with the "narrowcasting" system, Mr. Hammond declared.

Another point, the value of which the Premier readily appreciated, the American concluded, was the advantage Italy would have over other nations in case of war if she developed in peacetime a broadcasting system which was not only secret but free from interference by enemy stations.

BUILDINGS AS FIRE CAUSE.

Faulty Construction and Carelessness Blamed for Heavy Losses.

Faulty construction and carelessness were blamed for the tremendous fire losses in the United States by Major J. H. Howland, engineer of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, at the luncheon of the New York Rotary Club in the Hotel McAlpin yesterday. Nowhere are there better fire-fighting facilities than in this country, he said.

"The answer is that 1 per cent. of the total number of fires is responsible for 66 per cent. of our total losses," he declared. "It is the faulty construction, more common to our older buildings in mercantile and industrial districts, that is the primary cause of our heaviest losses; unprotected elevators, open stairways, and large airshafts are the most serious hazards."

Yanks Tie Score in Ninth, Win in Tenth, 3 to 2, and Now Lead Cards in Series

agerial move that he flung his bat to the ground, walked out through the St. Louis bench and turned his back on the inning that probably decided the world's series of 1926.

The Cardinal infield came in, and the outfielders were far back, which left an excellent target for Paschal. His was not a hard hit, but there was no fielder near it when it dropped to the sod in short left-centre. Gehrig scored, Lazzeri checked in at second and the game was again tied up.

No more runs in this inning, though nobody was out. Severeid's attempted bunt was caught up by O'Farrell—a great catcher—and whipped to third to beat Lazzeri by a step. Pennock in turn forced Severeid, Thevenow temporarily saving the game with an amazing stop near second. The ball was bouncing erratically and going fairly fast, but Thevenow gripped it somehow and tossed to Hornsby. Combs grounded out.

Pennock the Master.

Pennock of the poker face was the old master in the ninth, and set down Bottomley, Bell and Hafey in order. At the start of the tenth Koenig, with two strikes against him, ripped a liner to left and the panic was on. Ruth now up. He bunted foul and the experts wondered what Huggins was thinking about. Ball one and then a second bunt, also foul. Babe was in a hole, but Sherdel let go with a wild pitch and Koenig skipped to second. Ball three, ball four and Ruth walked.

Meusel's sacrifice bunt to Bell was a gem and the runners moved up. Lazzeri sailed into the first ball, got a solid toehold and flied to deep left. After the catch Koenig scored, pulled up.

In the St. Louis half, Poker-Face Penock shuffled the Cards. If anybody hoped this pitcher was going to let this game get away from him, he was entitled to another guess. O'Farrell, a dangerous hitter, was troublesome, but at three balls and two strikes Pennock roped him with an easy foul to Mike Gazella, subbing for Dugan. Thevenow drilled a single to right, hitting the first ball.

Jakie Flowers batted for Sherdel, and also tried conclusions with the first ball. Pennock, wise old-timer, was not to be fooled by these tactics. He saw to it that the ball was not a good one and Flowers lunged a weak fly to Gehrig on the foul line. Holm looked over two bad ones, then came a called strike, a foul and a grounder, which Gazella snapped up in front of Koenig and tossed to first. The game was over.

Thanks to a marvelous exhibition of sardining by the business managers, another record-breaking crowd was inserted into the seats, aisles and runways of Sportsman's Park. The paid admissions were 39,552 and the total receipts $168,380, bringing the total "gate" for the series up to $898,381.

The series is certain to pass the million dollar mark on Saturday, and if there should be a seventh game in New York Sunday the receipts may set a new record. The two clubs are now assured of a sizable piece of the financial melon, and the players will draw down a record-breaking sum as their share.

Scientists had considered it impossible to get more persons into the local park than were present yesterday, but the technique of the impresarios had improved with practice, and almost a thousand more were accommodated—all of them standees, who perched in the rear stretches of the stand and bleachers.

Cards Have Poor Luck.

Hard luck dogged the footsteps of the Cardinals all day. Taylor Douthit, their centre fielder, hurt his right shoulder in the collision with Hafey yesterday. For the moment Hafey seemed the chief sufferer, but when Douthit awoke this morning he found himself with a stiff shoulder, and Hornsby refused to take a chance on playing him.

This was the first melancholy episode for St. Louis. Another occurred when Hafey slipped and let Pennock's easy fly get away for a two-bagger, starting the Yanks toward a run in the sixth after the Cards had scored one in the fourth.

Gehrig and Paschal hit short, fluky flies in the ninth, and the Cardinals tonight were shouting, "Horseshoes!" There is no getting away from the fact that the Yanks were lucky. They got all the breaks, even to the near-crippling of Mr. Sherdel with a thrown ball in the sixth. New York flies fell safe, screaming St. Louis line drives were bagged by Ruth and Combs, who played sensationally.

Still, there is something to be said on both sides. Morally the Yanks did not earn any of their three runs, but in the sixth they were robbed of four runs by an unfavorable and highly civic wind.

With the bases full, Lazzeri smashed a fly that was heading rapidly for the roof of the grandstand. Southworth ran back, but conceded the homer until he suddenly realized that the wind was drifting the ball back toward the field. Billy backed up against the wall and made the catch.

So a gust of wind robbed Tony Lazzeri of the honor of being the second player in world's series history to hit a homer with the bases full.

The Cardinals were irritated by their misfortunes and were nervous, and they complained vigorously that Umpire Dinneen was giving them the worst of it on balls and strikes. The Cardinal sniping was frequent, and the fans "rode" Dinneen constantly. But the biggest flare-up came when that umpire called a ball on Severeid, and then reversed himself on hearing St. Louis protests.

Huggins rushed out from the bench and shook his fingers in Dinneen's face while he poured out a torrent of words in three languages. His team then being behind, Huggins was not in an amiable frame of mind.

Support Saves Pennock.

Pennock's game was not up to his Saturday's exhibition. The Cards hit him only seven times, but brilliant support saved Herbie, as it did not do in the first game of the series. Combs in the sixth inning broke the Cardinals' hearts by going back and over for Hornsby's sharp liner—a masterly play by the swift Yankee gardener.

But the finest play of the game—and the finest play of the series—was turned in by Babe Ruth, who risked painful injury when he dashed against the left-field stand for Hafey's foul in the fourth. Inside the foul line there is a wooden stand with a low fence. The ball was right at the edge of the enclosure. Ruth sped over from left, went straight for the fence, swerved slightly, put up his glove and as he bounced from the railing caught the ball.

It took nerve of the rarest sort to make a play like this, but it was less entertaining to the local customers than his strike-out in the sixth. With nobody out and Yanks on first and second, Sherdel whiffed the big fellow with a straight ball over the plate. The subsequent din paled anything else in the series to an insignificant whisper.

The Yankees were null and void in the first inning and the Cardinals were practically so, although an error by Dugan let Southworth get to first with one gone. Billy stole second, giving Hornsby a chance to drive the run in, but the Cardinal manager was helpless, as he had been since the series began, against the Yankee pitchers. He rolled a sickly grounder to Pennock and Southworth went to third, only to pine while Bottomley skidded a grounder to Lazzeri.

A base-running mistake by Lazzeri cost the Yanks a run in the second. Meusel—not much of a hitter in this series—was out to the third baseman, but Gehrig singled to centre because Sherdel, in the three-and-two hole, threw what passes for his fast ball. Lazzeri singled to right and Gehrig took third, then Dugan grounded on the base line to Hornsby.

The only chance for a double play was to touch Lazzeri, and Tony's only way to beat it was to stop and make Hornsby throw to first, then let himself be run down after Gehrig had scored. The Italian, however, was going pretty fast and ran right into Hornsby and extinction.

Nothing happened in the third. Ruth came up in the fourth with one out and Sherdel refused to toy with the "Big Boy, getting over a curve strike but tossing four slow balls. Meusel flied to left and Gehrig fanned—also on the slow teasers of Mr. Sherdel.

Cardinals Score in Fourth.

The Cardinals bobbed up with a run in the same fourth. Hornsby again grounded weakly to Pennock, but Bottomley hit a liner to left, and Ruth, fearing in fast to take a desperate chance, just broke the ball down. It rolled through him for a double.

L. Bell looked easy for Pennock, who drooped two strikes past him, but the youngster hit the next pitch to centre for a base. Bottomley, of course, scored, and the biggest crowd that ever saw a ball game in St. Louis let loose with the first real outburst of the day.

O'Farrell opened the fifth with a single too slow for Koenig, and went to second while the shortstop was disposing of Thevenow. But Pennock still looked as fresh as a daisy, and fanned Sherdel, after which Koenig got in front of Holm's grounder.

The Yankee sixth was a nerve-wrecker for all hands. It opened with Pennock's fluke double to left. This was an easy fly, but Hafey's spikes failed to take hold and he slipped flat on his back. On scrambling to his feet, he had lost the ball and made a hasty jab at it as it sailed to his left.

Combs came up and feinted a bunt. O'Farrell threw to second, where Pennock was slow getting back, and found his way blocked by Thevenow, who half-hugged the Yankee as he touched him. In the fervor of the embrace the ball bounced out of Thevenow's glove. Umpire Hildebrand, who had called Pennock out, reversed his decision and Thevenow was charged with an error.

Now Combs drew a base on balls. Koenig came up with orders to bunt one and if that were foul to swing. Bait one, then Mark bunted foul behind the catcher. The Cardinal infield was all out of position now, Bottomley playing in, Hornsby edging over to cover first, Thevenow keeping Pennock glued to second and Lester Bell playing in for the expected bunt.

It was an ideal situation for Koenig to hit and he ripped into Sherdel's semi-fast ball for a single that plowed past the surprised Bell before he knew it. Pennock scored standing up and Combs went to second.

Ruth Strikes Out.

With Ruth up, Sherdel was in a terrible hole. He didn't dare walk the slugger, for that would have meant the bases full with nobody out. Hornsby and Bottomley came in to comfort and console Mr. Sherdel, who looked as if he would need it. Billy was cautious and pitched one ball to George, then curved over a called strike, while the crowd yelled. The next was a ball, and Sherdel was so annoyed by Dinneen's decision that he walked in to point out that Bill's eyesight was slightly foggy.

Now strike two, and the next one was a straight ball, slightly high, over the heart of the plate. If there was ever a Ball that Ruth should have hit it was this one. It was squarely in his groove, yet when he swung he missed, and the most deafening clamor that this chronicler has ever heard on a baseball field came out to assault the eardrums.

The tumult that greeted Mr. Ruth's three homers yesterday was a golden silence compared to the demonstration following his one strike-out today.

With Meusel at bat, one of O'Farrell's return throws hit Sherdel on the first finger of his pitching hand, and the crowd groaned. Some strange and cruel fate was pursuing the Red Birds. Jess Haines, now warming up, redoubled his activities as Sherdel ran to the bench for treatment. In another minute he was back, and tried a few satisfactory tentative tosses to the catcher.

Meusel hit a sacrifice fly to Southworth, sending Combs to third, and Gehrig walked. The Cardinals kicked furiously on two of Dinneen's decisions. Sherdel came in and Hornsby followed him, but Dinneen said the last throw was low and won the argument, as umpires have been winning them for fifty years.

Lazzeri Robbed of Homer.

The bases were full and Hornsby went into another deep conference with Sherdel. Lazzeri, home run hitter of the Pacific Coast, was up, casting a covetous eye at the right field bleachers. But Sherdel threw a called strike and then another slow one, which Tony missed. Sherdel failed to follow up his advantage and the next pair were not over the plate.

The fifth pitch was slow and outside. Lazzeri, gauging it carefully, rammed a long and high fly toward the right field bleachers, but the wind, blowing it back, dropped it into Southworth's glove as his back scraped the concrete wall.

In their half of the inning, the Cards drew a blank, but they took the lead in the seventh, which L. Bell opened by smacking the first ball down the third base border for two bases. Hafey's fly fell to Ruth, but O'Farrell singled over Koenig's head, the shortstop barely touching the ball. Bell scored.

The Yankee eighth started with Combs singling out of Hornsby's reach. After Koenig's fly-out Sherdel slow-balled Ruth to death, and the mighty monarch grounded to Wee Willie, whose throw forced Combs at second. Meusel was easy for Bell and Bottomley.

And what happened in the ninth and joyous tenth has already been described.

The rest of it is up to Grover Cleveland Alexander. Even then the Cardinals must make a clean sweep to win. On their own grounds they lost two out of three. In New York they must win with two straight. And there is comfort in the fact that not since 1917 has the visiting team taken the seventh game of the world's series.

Opposing Pitchers in World's Series Duel in St. Louis Yesterday.

STORY OF THE GAME TOLD PLAY BY PLAY

Stirring Rallies That Threaten to Break Up Pitchers' Battle Mark Fifth Game.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 7.—The play-by-play account of the fifth world's series game follows:

First Inning.

NEW YORK—After all the fuss and band playing that initiated the start of the fifth battle, Combs walked up to the plate, swinging his bat over his shoulder, and faced Sherdel. The St. Louis southpaw whizzed over a strike on his first delivery and the next one was called. Combs was looking them over and the next was a ball. Then Combs swung and lifted the ball out where Hafey caught it easily. Koenig hit the first ball and drove to Thevenow, who tossed him out. This brought up Ruth and the St. Louis fans gave the Bambino a good hand. Sherdel served a ball and then came a called strike. The Babe was looking for one in the right spot. Then came ball two and the Babe still waited, but he slashed the next one down to Hornsby, who made the throw to Bottomley with much to spare. The Yanks hadn't found Sherdel very generous in the first. No runs, no hits, no errors.

ST. LOUIS—Of course there was plenty of cheering for Holm, who had replaced the shaken-up Douthit in the St. Louis outfield. Holm wasted no time, but swung at Pennock's first pitch and bounded to Koenig, who threw to Gehrig for the out. Southworth came to the plate with the fans cheering and his tap to Koenig was fumbled by the Yankee shortstop and Southworth was safe on the error. Hornsby came up, grim, as usual, paying no attention to the cheers. Southworth's shoe came untied and time was called while he fastened the knot. Pennock threw a low ball and Southworth stole second while Severeid was digging the ball out of the dirt. With one strike on Hornsby, Severeid got a passed ball when he dropped the pitch and then Hornsby hit to Pennock, who tossed him out as the fleet Southworth raced to third. Pennock was in a hole, but seemed cool and collected. Bottomley got a strike and a ball, and then Herb put over a strike that fooled Jim. The next two were called balls and Pennock kicked about the last one, but to no avail, and Bottomley hit to Lazzeri, who tossed him out and saved Pennock some trouble. No runs, no hits, one error.

Second Inning.

NEW YORK—Meusel went to bat and with the count one strike and two balls Bob hit a wicked smash to Bell, who knocked down the ball and got his man at first. With three balls and two strikes on him, Gehrig singled over second, a nice tap. Lazzeri fouled the first pitch and the next was a ball, and then he whisked a single into right and Gehrig tore around to third. It looked like a fine opening for the Yanks with only one down, but Dugan was not equal to the occasion. His effort was a smash at Hornsby, who took the ball, tagged Lazzeri and then made a lightning fast toss to Bottomley that caught Dugan to complete the double killing. No runs, two hits, no errors.

ST. LOUIS—Bell hit three fouls and then struck out. Pennock was going nicely. Hafey made five foul drives and then hit to Dugan, who made a wide throw that pulled Gehrig off the bag. However, Gehrig got the toss and tagged Hafey before he could touch first. O'Farrell was hard to pitch to and drew three balls before he singled off Pennock's glove. Koenig got the ball, but it was too late for him to make a play. Thevenow ended the inning with a drifting fly to Combs. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Third Inning.

NEW YORK—When Severeid came to bat the sky was turning gray. Severeid lifted the first pitch high into the air and Holm camped under it. Pennock took his turn at the plate. With the count two and three Pennock shot a screaming liner at Sherdel, who made a great catch with his gloved hand. The fans gave the Cardinal Southpaw a rousing cheer for his catch. Combs had two strikes and three balls on him when he rolled in front of the plate and made a mad dash for first. O'Farrell, however, retrieved the ball and made a neat heave to get his man. No runs, no hits, no errors.

ST. LOUIS—With a ball and a strike on him, Sherdel rolled to Koenig and was out at first. Holm looked over Pennock's pitching a little too long and let a third strike whiz by him. Southworth got a ball and then fouled one and then another ball before he shot a high fly into left, where Ruth was planted nicely to make the catch. Pennock was working like a machine. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Fourth Inning.

NEW YORK—Koenig hit the third pitch into Hafey's outstretched hands. Ruth came up with a smile on his face. The first pitch was a called strike and the next was a low slow ball at which the Babe refused to bite. The next two were slow curves that were called balls and the next a wide one that gave Ruth a base on balls. Sherdel was taking no chances on the King of Swat. Meusel hit the second pitch to Hafey and Ruth dashed back to first as Hafey made a play for him. While Sherdel was trying to pick Babe off first, Gehrig was having some trouble with Sherdel's pitching and finally swung late at a third strike. No runs, no hits, no errors.

ST. LOUIS—Hornsby looked over one ball and then rolled weakly to the box and was an easy victim for Pennock and Gehrig. Bottomley worked Pennock for three balls, and the count was two and three when he drove into left for a double that Ruth just missed nailing after a fine run. Bell had two strikes on him when he singled over Lazzeri's head and brought Bottomley home with a run. Hafey hit the third pitch into left. The ball was foul and came dropping down over the left-field boxes. Ruth dashed over, leaned into the box and nailed the ball with his gloved hands. The bleacheritas had jeered Babe as he took the field in that inning; now they cheered him. O'Farrell was at bat when Severeid caught Bell stealing and nailed him with the aid of Koenig. One run, two hits, no errors.

Fifth Inning.

NEW YORK—Lazzeri was first up. He tried to bunt and failed and with two strikes on him he rolled to Bell and was out at first. Dugan's effort was a pop fly to Bottomley. Sherdel was going like a house on fire and was having little trouble halting the Yankee batters. His next victim was Severeid, who looked over one ball and then bit at the next and lofted it to Hafey. No runs, no hits, no errors.

ST. LOUIS—O'Farrell, who has given the Yankee hurlers plenty of trouble in the series, took a foul, fouled one and then shot a liner off Koenig's bare hand for a single. It didn't do any good, however, for Thevenow hit the first offering to Koenig and was tossed out and Sherdel struck on three pitched balls. Then Holm, after taking a strike and a called ball, rolled weakly to Koenig, who made a nice toss to Gehrig. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Sixth Inning.

NEW YORK—Hafey lost Pennock's fly in the sun and it rolled to the wall for a two-bagger. Pennock was trapped off second when O'Farrell threw down, but Thevenow dropped the ball and was credited with an error, O'Farrell getting an assist on the play. Combs walked. Koenig lined a single to left, Pennock scoring and Combs advanced to second. With Ruth up, Sherdel was in a trying situation, but he elected to pitch to the home run king. His first effort was a ball. Ruth swung and missed a slow curve for a strike. The next one looked to be in the heart of the plate but was called ball two. Sherdel registered his disgust by walking out of the box. Ruth missed the next pitch and the count was two and two. A slow curve fooled the Babe again and he went down swinging, while the fans rose and cheered lustily. After getting the first strike over on Meusel, Sherdel caught O'Farrell's return throw on the end of his finger and hopped around in pain. A conference was held to determine whether it would be advisable to let him keep on pitching and Jess Haines started warming up in the bull pen. Sherdel had hurt the index finger of his left hand, but after receiving first aid treatment in the dugout he returned to his task. Meusel hit a long fly to right, which Southworth backed up against the wall to catch. It went for a sacrifice as Combs reached third after the putout. Gehrig walked, filling the bases. Sherdel and Hornsby protested the fourth called ball violently, but it didn't get them anywhere. Sherdel bent the first pitch to Lazzeri for a called strike. Lazzeri swung and missed the next one by a foot. The next two were balls. And then Lazzeri hit a high fly to right field which looked as if it would drop into the bleachers, but it fell just short and Southworth caught it for the third out. One run, two hits, one error.

ST. LOUIS—Southworth walked up to the plate as the Cards swung into the sixth. He took a good hold on the old ash and then whaled away at the first pitched ball. The result was a roller to Gehrig, who stepped on first for the putout. This brought up Hornsby and the crowd beseeched him to do something, but the best the Cardinal manager could do was to make a long, looping drive into centre and Combs came galloping in to make a pretty catch. Combs had to make quite a run, but he was up nicely and though the fans at first thought they were going to witness a hit and were disappointed, they had a few cheers for Big Jim Bottomley when he ambled up to the plate. Jim hit at the first ball and fouled it and then took a strike, a ball, another strike, at which he swung with all his might and then came a ball. Pennock tightened up and sent the next one winging in and Bottomley's swing was way late. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Seventh Inning.

NEW YORK—Jumping Joe Dugan was the first batter, and after having two strikes called on him Joe hit under the next one and lifted it gently into the air. Lester Bell caught it. Severeid swung at the first pitch and missed, but he came back at the next one and connected, driving an easy roller to Thevenow, who tossed to first for the out. The field was a bit slippery and Thevenow had trouble keeping his footing as he fielded the ball, but he recovered in time to make the play and the groans from the fans turned into applause. Pennock took a cut at the first ball and dribbled it to the box and was tossed out. No runs, no hits, no errors.

ST. LOUIS—The Cards and Yanks both were hitting the first ball. Lester Bell whanged out a wicked one that shot into left. Bell raced madly around first and tore into second, but stopped there when he saw Ruth had the ball. The Cards weren't taking any liberties with Babe's throwing. This served to excite the crowd and they began a concerted stamping and cheering as Hafey faced Pennock. Hafey lifted a high fly under which Ruth camped and Bell once more refused to test Ruth's throwing arm. Bob O'Farrell drew a ball and then there was a called strike. Then came two balls. Pennock was working hard on Bob, but O'Farrell was trying to wait him out. The batter fouled off the next one and then he sent a single over Koenig's head and Bell dashed from second and scored on the hit and the St. Louis fans went wild, for the tie was broken and there was only one down. Thevenow, however, flied to Lazzeri for the second out. Pennock was pitching his hardest, trying to lift himself out of a mighty bad hole, but he had one break, anyway, for he faced Sherdel, a none too hefty hitter even for a pitcher. A called strike and a foul strike put Sherdel in the hole and Pennock breathed a little easier. But Herbie put over a ball on his next pitch and then Sherdel tapped to Gehrig, who touched first and retired the side. Pennock was visibly tired as he left the box. One run, two hits, no errors.

Eighth Inning.

NEW YORK—Combs opened the inning. He had two balls and a strike called on him and apparently was going to try to bunt when he suddenly swung and drove the ball at Hornsby, who just got his fingers on it and it rolled into the outfield for a single. Koenig attempted to bunt and missed, but he lifted the next one to Hafey. Ruth drove the first pitched ball into the stands, but it was a foul. Babe tried to line one out, but the best he could do was to roll to Sherdel and force Combs at second. Thevenow taking the throw. Thevenow made a quick toss to first for a double, but Ruth beat the toss by a stride. Meusel's first slash went foul in left by inches and spoiled a double. With the count two and three on him, Meusel hit to Bell, who tossed him out at first. No runs, one hit, no errors.

ST. LOUIS—Pennock was a bit unsteady. His first three pitches to Holm were balls, wide ones that Holm made no move to look over. Then Herbie swished over a strike but still was off his mark and passed Holm on the next pitch. Southworth drew a round of applause as he marched up to the plate. He lashed one to Koenig, who had a double play in front of him and worked fast. He tossed to Lazzeri, forcing Holm at second, but the Cardinal runner was in the path of Lazzeri's arm and the Yank second sacker couldn't make the heave to first and Southworth was safe. Hornsby, however, ended the trouble a minute later. He shot a fast one to Lazzeri, who tossed to Koenig, getting Southworth at the midway, and Koenig made a sharp toss to Gehrig, completing a double play on Hornsby and ended the inning. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Ninth Inning.

NEW YORK—Gehrig lifted a high fly to short left field which fell just out of Thevenow's reach for a two-base Texas leaguer. Lazzeri attempted to bunt the first ball pitched and there seemed to be some question as to whether he had really stuck his bat out or pulled it back. Both managers argued and it was finally called a strike. He laid the next one down the third base line and beat Bell's throw to first, getting credit for a single, Gehrig reaching third safely. Paschal batted for Dugan. The first pitch was a called strike. Paschal fouled the next to the grandstand. The third pitch was wide for ball one and so was the next. Paschal dropped a Texas leaguer into centre field, scoring Gehrig with the tying run. Lazzeri stopping at second. Severeid bunted in front of the plate and O'Farrell leaped on it and forced Lazzeri at third, Bell taking the throw. Paschal reached second and Severeid first. Thevenow made a beautiful stop back of second of Pennock's drive and with a backhand toss to Hornsby forced Severeid, but Paschal reached third on the play. Combs hit a slow roller to Hornsby and was retired at first, ending the inning. One run, three hits, no errors.

ST. LOUIS—Mike Gazella went to third for the Yankees. Bottomley caught one and lifted it high into the air in right, but Lazzeri raced back and caught the ball. Bell hit sharply to Gazella, who made a neat stop and throw to Gehrig for the second out. Hafey came up and lifted a fly up over short and Koenig made a nice catch, though the sun seemed to trouble him for a second. But he hung onto the ball and the side was retired. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Tenth Inning.

NEW YORK—Koenig singled through short. Ruth attempted to sacrifice, but his first bunt rolled foul. The next pitch was wide and called a ball. Ruth again tried to bunt and fouled the ball back of the catcher for a second strike. Sherdel threw a slow curve that was low and bounced past O'Farrell for a wild pitch. Koenig moving to second. The next pitch was outside and the count on Ruth was three and two. Ruth walked on another wide one. Meusel sacrificed, sending Koenig to third and Ruth to second by laying down a bunt. He was thrown out at first by Sherdel. Gehrig was purposely passed, filling the bases. The Cardinals went into conference as how to pitch to Lazzeri, but Lazzeri didn't give Sherdel much chance to do much pitching. He hit the first one for a long sacrifice fly to Hafey, which scored Koenig. Gazella was hit by a pitched ball, again filling the bases. Severeid popped to Hornsby for the third out. One run, one hit, no errors.

ST. LOUIS—Pennock pitched carefully to O'Farrell and the count reached three and two. The Cardinal catcher hit a high foul on the next pitch and was out when Gazella caught it. Thevenow lined a single to right field on the first pitched ball. Flowers batted for Sherdel. Gehrig went back of first to get Flowers's pop fly for the second out. Holm rolled to Gazella and was thrown out at first. No runs, one hit, no errors.

KOENIG REAL FACTOR IN VICTORY OF YANKS

Redeems Himself for Past Errors and Gives New York Series Edge, Analysis Shows.

By RICHARDS VIDMER.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 7.—Mark Anthony Koenig has balanced his books. He owed the Yankees a ball game—not a common, ordinary or garden variety of ball game, but a world series victory. He became indebted to the New York American League baseball club and the members thereof when he tossed away the third game of the current classic. Today he paid his debt in full.

There are many who saw only the cool, calm, careful pitching of Herbie Pennock as the vital factor in the Yankees' triumph over the Cardinals today. There are some who will tell you that luck was the deciding element. But a look into the statistics will reveal the fact that Mark Anthony Koenig had more to do with the way the tide turned than any other individual.

Twice the Yankees were behind and twice they fought their way upward to even terms. Then as the game moved into extra innings Koenig paved the way to victory with a line single to left that got Wee Willie Sherdel into such trouble that he couldn't extricate himself before Koenig scored the winning run in the 3 to 2 victory.

Koenig Paves the Way.

That single changed the whole day for Sherdel. If Koenig had failed to hit safely, the following array of maulers wouldn't have looked so dangerous, but with a runner on the bases ready to score the winning run at the least provocation, Ruth, Meusel, Gehrig and Lazzeri were menacing and couldn't be cheated with ordinary pitching.

The Cardinals' lilliputian lefthander had to work so hard to make the ball none too good for Ruth to hit that he got one too low and it bounced away for a wild pitch and Koenig raced to second. Then there was nothing to do but walk Ruth. A single from the bat of the dangerous Babe would have driven the winning run home.

With runners on first and second, Wee Willie's only hope of salvation was to pitch and pray that Meusel would hit into a double play or, at least, force Koenig at third. But lanky Bob laid down a sacrifice bunt and Sherdel had to let the runners advance and throw out the runner at first.

Lazzeri Drives in Koenig.

Gehrig was purposely passed, filling the bases, as the Cardinals still hoped for a double play that would end the inning before Koenig could complete his slow but steady circuit of the bases. Their hopes were in vain. Lazzeri poled a long fly to Hafey and Koenig scored, lifting the Yankees into the lead and lowering the hearts of the St. Louis fans.

Sherdel hit Gazella with a pitched ball that filled the bases again, but he got by with no more scoring, as Severeid popped to Hornsby for the third out.

However, that one run of Koenig's was enough to win, for Pennock halted the Cards in their half of the tenth and completed his second pitching triumph over St. Louis in general and Wee Willie Sherdel in particular during this twenty-third series for the world's baseball championship.

Koenig had paid his debt. When he threw away that third game he put his team-mates in the serious situation of being behind, with two victories for the Cards and only one for the Yankees. When he won the fifth game today he put the Yankees out in front again, one game from the championship.

It took a strong heart and the much-advertised "will to win" for the Yankees to triumph today. In the first five innings they had only one chance to score as Sherdel swung along his majestic way, and that opportunity was killed when Lazzeri ran into a double play. When five innings had been completed the Yanks had made just two hits and the Cardinals were leading by a run.

Koenig Outsmarts Cards.

But Koenig came to the fore in the sixth and drove in the run that tied the score when he outsmarted the Cardinal defense and hit when they expected him to bunt.

Again the Cardinals forged ahead in the seventh and it looked as though this time it would take. But with the score 2 to 1 against them, the Yankees swung into the ninth with their jaws set for a last attack.

A sudden and unexpected volley of base hits rang out from the New York bats and before the crowd could straighten up and see what was going on the score was tied again. A double by Gehrig was followed by singles from Lazzeri and Paschal, who batted for Dugan, and that's the way it was done.

It must be admitted that there was a little luck connected with that rally, for Gehrig's double, in reality, was a pop fly that the wind carried just beyond Thevenow's grasping hands back of third. Lazzeri's single was a bunt that went safe because Lester Bell was reluctant to leave third base with Gehrig moving in that direction, and Paschal's hit that sent Gehrig home was a Texas Leaguer back of second.

Koenig's Blow Clean Cut.

However, there was nothing questionable about Koenig's single that opened the tenth inning and paved the way for the winning run. The Yanks were lucky to tie the score, but they deserved to win.

When Koenig drove in the tally that tied the count in the sixth inning he also put Sherdel in a precarious predicament, but that time Wee Willie stood his ground and solved the situation by striking out Babe Ruth in the pinch.

Pennock started it with a double to left, which Hafey misjudged. He slipped in changing his course and then lost the ball in the sun. Combs walked and Koenig's single scored Pennock. It also left runners on first and second, the score tied and none out, with Ruth at the bat.

Sherdel couldn't walk Ruth, for it would put a runner on third in a position to score on almost anything, even a sacrifice fly or a double play. So Sherdel had to pitch to the Babe and he did it well. When Ruth lunged and missed the third strike it brought a cheer from the crowd and cheer to Willie's heart.

Sherdel got so excited that he caught O'Farrell's return throw on the end of the index finger of his pitching hand and for a moment it looked as if he would have to retire from the game. He stuck to the job and evidently was not affected by the injury as he concluded that inning without further scoring and held the Yankees to one unimportant and unproductive hit in the next two. His downfall in the ninth and tenth was in no way due to his hurt digit.

Ruth Makes Mistake.

Ruth's foolishness, overzealousness, eagerness or whatever you want to call it, gave the Cardinals the lead in the first place. Pennock was pitching steadily and never once was in danger until the Babe tore in and tried to catch Bottomley's looping liner off his shoetops. There was one out at the time and a single wouldn't have loomed very large, but when the ball got past Ruth and was good for two bases it gave the situation a far more threatening aspect. There's a greater difference than just one base between a man on first and one out and a man on second and one out.

If Ruth had held that hit to a single, which was the wise way to play it, the chances were that the Cardinals wouldn't have scored in that inning. But Bottomley tallied easily from second on Bell's single to centre.

Just to prove that it was worth a try, Babe made the most sensational catch of the series a moment later when he stuck out his glove as he swept down the line of field boxes and pulled it back with Hafey's foul fly clutched tightly.

Double Figures Again.

The Cardinals' second run also was built on the foundation of a double. Bell opened the seventh with a drive down the left field foul line that was a two-bagger from the minute it left the bat. Hafey was retired on a fly to Ruth without advancing the runner, but O'Farrell singled just over Koenig's head and Bell raced home, putting the Cardinals ahead for the second time.

That was their last chance to score, however, as Pennock settled down and allowed only two runners to reach first and none to reach second in the last three innings. Still, that run was enough to win if Sherdel had been able to hold his own, but Pennock's mates were not to be denied. They wiped out the run in the ninth and won in the tenth.

And now they return to New York with the advantage all theirs. They boarded the eastbound train after the game with the outlook of playing on their own home grounds, before a home crowd with only one game to win to clinch the series and with two games to win it in.

The prospects of facing Alexander the great Saturday, however, is not so bright, and from where this writer sits it looks as if the series will go the full seven games with the winning team a toss-up.

813 Messages Praise Ruth; Big Hitter Thanks the Fans

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 7.—Babe Ruth had the echo today of his home run hitting of yesterday. The battering Yankee slugger was flooded under an avalanche of telegrams, letters and notes at his hotel quarters and at the Sportsman's Park dressing quarters of the Yankees. Ruth announced that he had counted 813 messages of congratulations.

"It's great to know the people are with you that way," said the Babe, smiling his pleasure. "I don't know how to thank them, so I wish you would through the papers. Tell them thanks, each and every one, and promise them I'll keep right on driving them as long as I can and whenever I can."

Robinson Says Breaks of the Game Favored Yanks and Caused Cards' Downfall

YANKS GOT BREAKS, ROBINSON ASSERTS

Declares Cardinals Outplayed New York Team Through the Regulation Nine Innings.

SHERDEL SHOWED COURAGE

KEPT BABE RUTH AT BAY

By WILBERT ROBINSON,
President and Manager of the Brooklyn Robins.

Written for The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 7.—The Yankees got the breaks today. All through the first nine innings the Cardinals should have had the victory, but they lost it in the tenth on the hard luck they had had in the sixth and ninth. I thought they outplayed the Yankees in every way in the first nine innings. They hit better and ran bases better, and it was the breaks that gave the Yanks two hits and two runs in the two bad innings that caused the best team to lose.

It was a finely pitched game between Bill Sherdel and Herb Pennock, two great left-handers, and Bill Sherdel showed he had the heart of a lion in working against heart-breaking hard luck.

The Yankees really shouldn't have scored in the sixth and ninth innings. Hafey slipped and fell in fielding an easy fly by Pennock, who was the first man up in the sixth, and the hit went for a double, on which he scored the Yanks' first run on a single to centre by Koenig. Thevenow was bothered by the sun and wind on a pop fly by Gehrig to short left in the ninth, and he missed it and let it go for two bases, allowing Gehrig to score on a Texas leaguer by Paschal, bringing in the tying run.

The Cards had made their two runs on nice clean hitting in the fourth and seventh innings, and it was tough for them and a little hard on Bill Sherdel to lose on breaks like this.

Yanks Poor Against Real Pitching.

This game showed, like all others except the one yesterday, that against good pitching the Yanks are not really in the Cards' class as a ball team. When they're not hitting they're just not there as a winning ball club, and only their good luck carried them through today.

Babe Ruth, the greatest slugger in the world, was almost helpless against Sherdel today. He got two bases on balls, but on his other trips to the plate Sherdel made him hit weak grounders to Bell and to the pitcher's box. Once, in the sixth inning, with two men on bases, he struck him out with a great mixture of slow curves held low on both sides of the plate and made him swing at a third strike which was a high, fast one on the inside. But the old Babe was there in the field with a great one-handed catch of a foul ball at the railing of the left field boxes for a third out in the fourth inning.

Koenig, whose playing in the field showed another error today, which, however, didn't figure in the scoring, was good at the plate and got two hits which counted in the Yanks' scoring.

Hornsby's batting was surprisingly off. He seemed to have lost his batting eye, for he was swinging at bad ones way outside, and he took only one good cut at the ball all day. He hit a nice line drive to centre in the sixth, but Combs got it on a nice catch.

Sherdel Fools Yankees.

Sherdel was fooling the Yankee batters all day with his screw curve, which he mixed with an occasional fast one. He had pretty good control, too, and although he walked five men he walked three of them purposely. Pennock was pitching his great curve ball and his fast one, and he kept them both on the inside.

The greatest flaw in Sherdel's pitching was that he gave two fast ones low on the inside to Koenig, who just eats that kind of pitching, and it was on those balls that Koenig got his two hits. Sherdel should have known better than to pitch that way to Koenig.

The Yankees threw away a run in the second inning on very bad base running by Lazzeri. Gehrig was on third and Tony was on first, with one out. Dugan hit a grounder to Hornsby. Lazzeri was out on a force-out by a mile, for Rogers was waiting in the base path to tag him out. Lazzeri should have stopped to slow up that tag or make Hornsby throw to first before the tag to prevent a double play and allow Gehrig to score, but Lazzeri ran right into Rogers, who threw the ball to first for a double play. That cut the Yankees out of a run.

They needed that run in the fourth when Bottomley hit a fast one on the outside to left field. Babe ran up on a risky play to try to get it at his shoe tops, but he missed it and the ball went by him for a double as the Babe slipped and fell. Lester Bell hit a curve which was chest high on the outside for a base hit to centre, scoring Jim.

Yankees Get Breaks.

The breaks for the Yanks came fast in the sixth. Hafey misjudged Pennock's fly, tried to stop short and slipped in a muddy spot. That was the first one. A minute later O'Farrell on a wonderful throw from home caught Pennock off second base. Thevenow tagged him before he could get to the bag, but the two boys got into a tangle of arms and legs and Thevenow dropped the ball. It was scored an error against him. Combs was walked because Sherdel was trying not to give him a good one to hit at, and then Koenig got one of those fast low ones for a single which scored Pennock.

Tabs was a great pitching inning for Sherdel in which he showed a lot of nerve. Combs was on second and Koenig on first when the Babe came to bat. He had to pitch to him with Meusel coming right up behind the old Babe, because it was dangerous to get another runner on the bases. It was a masterly performance the way he struck the Babe out. He also hurt a finger on his pitching hand in this inning, but after the trainer looked at it he kept right on working.

He was careful with Gehrig, filling the bases, and then he got a break in favor of himself, and it was a good one. Lazzeri hit a high fast one on the inside of a high fly to right field against the wind. It looked like it was going over into the stands for a home run, but little Billy Southworth backed up and the wind brought it down into his hands for the third out.

Cards Get Another Run.

The Cards got their other run in the seventh. Bell hit a high fast one on the inside against the left field box wall and it counted for two bases. Hafey, the next batsman, should have tried for a bunt, but he flied out to Ruth. Then with Pennock pitching carefully to O'Farrell and the count three and two, O'Farrel hit a high curve ball on the inside over short. Koenig touched it with his glove but couldn't stop it, and Bell scored.

In the ninth Gehrig got a high fast one for the pop fly which the wind carried away from Thevenow for a two-base hit for the Yanks. I thought Hafey had plenty of time to run up for that fly which was very high.

Then Sherdel, who had done some mighty good fielding, made a poor play by failing to field a bunt by Lazzeri. Bell, who was going to third for a play there, had to run back for the ball and he got it too late for a putout at first. Paschal hit for Dugan, getting a Texas leaguer to centre and scoring Gehrig from third.

The Cards did some good playing in the rest of the inning. O'Farrell made a great play by taking a bunt of Severeid's and forcing Lazzeri at third, and Thevenow made a wonderful stop of a grounder by Pennock back of second base and forced Paschal.

Koenig Gets One He Likes.

The tenth inning was opened with Koenig getting one of those low fast ones on the inside that he likes. He hit it to left. The Yanks were trying for one run, so Babe tried to bunt. He fouled two of them, which shows that Sherdel was pitching great ball, for the old Babe is a great bunter as well as a great hitter.

But Sherdel, who was trying mighty hard, overdid himself by throwing up a slow ball, which hit in front of the plate, going for a passed ball, which put Koenig on second. The Babe then was handed a pass, the Cards hoping for a force play. Meusel was up next and the play was still to bunt. He did, getting Koenig on third and Ruth on second.

Sherdel was right in walking Gehrig on purpose next in order to get a chance at a force play at home or a double, but it was all off when Sherdel let Lazzeri hit a high fast one on the inside for a sacrifice fly to left. He should have handed him a low slow one in an attempt to get a ground ball in the diamond.

The Cardinals were weakened a lot in the outfield by the loss of Taylor Douthit, who was hurt yesterday. Roscoe Holm played in centre for him, making two youngsters out there—he and Chick Hafey. I believe if Douthit, a veteran, had been in centre Hafey would have run up for the ball Thevenow missed in the wind and sun. An experienced man can help a youngster beside him make a play he might otherwise miss.

Tomorrow I'll try to tell what I think about the coming game.

ST. LOUIS STUNNED BY CARDS' DEFEAT

TAXI SUPPLY RUNS OUT

Many Are Delayed When Service Suddenly Declines as Crowd Departs After Game.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 7.—The embattled ball players staged another moving picture for the rampant St. Louis rooters, who came to the grounds again in record numbers, and after ten troublous innings the home team went down to defeat by the airtight score of 3 to 2. It was a terrible blow to the Cardinal fans as their rainbow of world's series hopes faded in a generally easterly direction. The jammed stands produced wild outbursts of clamor at times, when the Cardinals were rising up in wrath and desperation to smite the ice-cold Pennock.

Most of the outbursts of bedlam came in the earlier innings. When the pastime was drawing toward the finish the power of the Yanks loomed up like an ominous cloud and the crowd filed out of the park quietly, stunned apparently by the unexpected turn of events. The Yanks were solidly behind the unruffled Pennock and made the Cardinals look decidedly like the younger club. Huggins's henchmen always seemed to be three or four thoughts ahead of the Cards.

Crowd Again for Ruth.

Of the big figures in the game not so much was to be said as of the more remote characters. Babe Ruth, for instance, who was hitting home runs yesterday with almost monotonous regularity, went hitless. But the crowd, as was the case yesterday, made Ruth one of its favorites and cheered him loudly on occasions, especially after he made his great catch in the fourth inning.

On the other hand, there was Benjamin Paschal, the well-known pinch-hitter who has done nothing particular in the series previous to this afternoon. He stepped into Jumping Joe Dugan's shoes in the ninth inning and made the hit heard around the baseball world.

It was again a crowd of great spirits and greater noisemaking proclivities, and all world's series records for mad uproar were broken while the Cardinals were in the running. But after thirty-eight years the Mound City fans were fated to lose the last game to be played this year on the banks of the Mississippi.

Seventh Sets Noise Record.

All of yesterday's fierce fourth inning clamor was outdone today during the Cardinal rally in the seventh. When the famous O'Farrell crashed his single over Koenig's head, scoring Bell, the wildest outburst of Missouri music was poured forth that has ever been heard in the history of steam navigation. The automobile horns shouldered into the park by the more sturdy rooters seemed to make a good deal more racket than they did yesterday and the chorus of bells was tremendous. These noisemakers ranged all the way from cowbells to dinner bells, and they were never stilled while the St. Louis players were staging anything worthwhile.

As the home talent came in for their seventh inning the native sons rose to stretch and then settled back in their seats to do some really serious rooting. The lid was off when Bell made his hit and the uproar did not die down until the last Cardinal was out for that inning.

As far as transportation conditions were concerned the crowd did not seem to move out to the grounds as smoothly as yesterday, despite the best efforts of the mounted traffic men and their assistants on foot. The mounted men, still wearing their cavalry swords, handled things in good shape, but the trouble seemed to be that St. Louis ran out of taxicabs at the psychological moment.

Taxi Supply Runs Out.

The village statisticians have reported that there are 507 taxicabs operating here but they seemed to be scarce. The mysterious disappearing act on the part of the taxicabs, including the Yellows, Black and Whites and Red-Tops, was responsible for leaving many fans stranded for the time being. The worst that happenned, however, was that the rooters were a little late making supper.

Things looked much the same at Forest Park and also Sportsman's Park today, but there was one large cardinal bird out near the ball park that was not in the picture yesterday. This large and brilliant bird of passage was fastened to a halyard of a captive balloon flying above the Y. M. C. A. Building back of the centrefield bleachers. This particular roof had been a favorite perching place for spectators during the first two games but no rooters were allowed up there today.

The atmosphere was decidedly mellower today but the cautious Missouri male fans nearly all wore their gray overcoats, which gave a rather gray tinge to the crowd, but this was brightly illuminated by the Cardinal hats again worn by thousands of the women rooters.

BOY REGAINS HEALTH AS RUTH HITS HOMERS

John D. Sylvester, Son of National City Bank Executive, Now on Road to Recovery.

Special to The New York Times.

ESSEX FALLS, N. J., Oct. 7.—John Dale Sylvester, 11 years old, to whom physicians allotted thirty minutes of life when he was stricken with blood poisoning last week, was pronounced well on the road to recovery this afternoon, after he had contentedly listened to the radio returns of the Yankees' defeat of the Cardinals. His father, Horace Sylvester Jr., Vice President of the National City Bank, and the physicians, are convinced that John owes his life to messages of encouragement which the boy received Wednesday from Babe Ruth and other world series players. They had learned of his plight and of his request for autographed baseballs from his father.

The physicians say that the boy's return to health began when he learned the news of Ruth's three homers in the fourth game of the series. His fever began to abate at once, and the favorable course was hastened today after he had listened to the radio returns, clutching the autographed baseballs which he received by air mail on Wednesday night.

John's intense interest in the world series and in home runs especially, were explained to his family today when his chums told of the boys ability on the sand lots. He had modestly refrained from mentioning the fact that he has a reputation as a home run hitter and a skillful third baseman.

His recovery had reached the point tonight where he was already making plans for a return to the diamond, and he promised one caller that he would soon bring his team to a neighboring town for a game.

The boy's father sent letters to the managers of both teams today thanking them for their assistance in helping his boy to recover.

TEAMS ARE DUE HERE AROUND 6 TONIGHT

New York Central Prepares for Crowd That May Greet Returning Yankees.

VICTORY SPURS INTEREST

Sale of Tickets for Sixth Game of Series Will Begin at 8 A. M. Tomorrow.

The Yankees, headed by Babe Ruth, are due to arrive at Grand Central Terminal on their special train at 6 o'clock this evening, but New York Central officials said last night that there was a chance that the time schedule between here and St. Louis would be beaten and that the Yankees might arrive at any time from 5:30 P. M. The Cardinals are due in their special train at Penn Station at the scheduled hour of 6, but, like the Yankees, may be rushed into town ahead of time.

The Yankees are not likely to be greeted as the Cards were when they swung into St. Louis Monday afternoon, but there is going to be a big crowd on hand in Grand Central Terminal to greet Ruth, just the same. When the Yankees departed from here last Sunday evening they left by way of High Bridge for the reason that they could make a quick jump and avoid the traffic downtown by this means. So, aside from the crowd that hung around the Stadium to wish the Yankees well, there was not much of a throng on hand. It will be different this evening, and New York Central officials are preparing to handle a big crowd when the special rolls in.

Over both the New York Central and the Pennsylvania Railroad other specials are due up to a late hour this evening. These specials are the ones that followed the players' specials out of New York Sunday night. They were routed out of St. Louis last night at intervals. The players' specials, however, were run out of the Mound City within an hour of game time.

Interest Here Is Spurred.

The victory of the Yankees yesterday that put them in the lead revived world's series talk here, especially following Ruth's marvelous batting feats of the day before.

The crowds in City Hall Park yesterday watching the scoreboard on Park Row and another on Chambers Street were almost doubled over those that watched on the two previous days, and there was a great deal of cheering. Along Broadway last night the Yankees were the topic of much discussion, and there was a general feeling that Huggins's troupe would win in tomorrow's battle at the Stadium and thus win the championship.

The Yankee management last night again emphasized the fact that if the Cardinals win tomorrow and tie the series, thus necessitating a seventh game, that contest will be staged on Sunday, weather permitting, and tickets for the game will be put on general sale at the Stadium Sunday morning.

The previous announcement was amplified by the information that the sale for reserved and unreserved tickets for that game would be placed on sale at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning and first come would be first served. The clubs will not receive reserved seat subscriptions.

Schedule of Games.

In the event that it rains tomorrow, making it impossible to play, the sixth game will be staged on Sunday, providing, of course, that that is a clear day. In any event the sixth contest will be staged on the first clear day, and then if a seventh game is needed it will be played on the succeeding day or on the first day thereafter that is clear.

Teams Rush Back Here.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 7.—It was another rapid dash to the trains for both teams after the game. Just as after the second game at the Yankee Stadium, the players and the New York fans rushed to their specials which will land them in New York tomorrow about 9 o'clock.

YANKEES' COURAGE WON, SAYS HUGGINS

Boys Were Never Licked, Despite Sherdel's Great Pitching, Manager Declares.

HORNSBY RAILS AT CARDS

Their Playing Was Sloppy and Indifferent, He Complains, but He Predicts Victory.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 7.—"The fighting spirit won for us in a tough pitchers' battle," said Miller Huggins, Yankee manager, in the clubhouse at the end of the game. "That was the thing that most impressed me out there on the field today. It was fight, fight, fight with my men from the time the first ball was thrown and their demonstration of the true fighting spirit was crowned with success."

Colonel Jake Ruppert comes to the locker space of Huggins for a few words. His face is broad with a smile, the reflection of the satisfaction he feels over the accomplishment of "his boys" and "that little fellow Huggins."

Huggins pounded a closed right fist into the palm of his left hand to emphasize what to him is the high light of the game.

"You can't beat a fighting spirit like that," said Huggins. "It is not to be denied. The boys were never licked, despite great pitching by Sherdel. We had great pitching on our side. We had the day's best pitching. Pennock was at his best. He pitched in masterly fashion. But the fighting spirit was the big thing.

Some Breaks Against Them.

"That spirit is reflected in the number of men we had left on the bases. Of course we got some breaks. But you need breaks to win a ball game like that. There were breaks, however, which we didn't get. One of them was that play on Lazzeri in the second inning. We had a run over the plate then, but he made the mistake of walking blindly into a double play when a force-out would have given us at least one run, and possibly more. He should never have done that. We overcame the mistake, but that doesn't excuse mistakes. It might just as well have proved our undoing.

"We lost another break when the wind carried Lazzeri's home run back onto the field in the sixth and into the hands of Southworth.

"We outhit them today and in the field the team was on its toes. That catch by Ruth in the fourth on Hafey's foul fly was a great catch and showed that the Babe is a leader in this fighting spirit when he is ready to risk his neck for an almost impossible catch.

"We have them on the run now. No, I won't say that we'll win Saturday in New York. Let others do the predicting. We'll do the playing. I'll use either Shawkey or Shocker against them in New York."

Hornsby Calls Playing Sloppy.

The cause of greatest joy for Huggins was the basis for fiery condemnation from Manager Rogers Hornsby for his Cardinals. In the Missourians' clubhouse the fiery young manager of the National League champions berated his players for what he termed a sloppy, indifferent exhibition, and Hornsby made no bones about his criticism. He was madder than yesterday, when he railed against the weak, inefficient pitching his staff offered just when a victory meant most to the Cardinals.

"I had a fine bunch of ball players out there this afternoon," said Hornsby, loud enough for his players to hear. "Back of the greatest pitching possible they slip and skid and hesitate when they should be on their toes all the time, working their heads off.

"Sherdel pitched a great game. He was better than Pennock. He should have had a shut out victory. The score should have favored us by 2 to 0. We earned all our runs. That's something that can't be said about the Yankees. We'd have won today if the team had been up to scratch, but you can't win with a team playing the way mine did today and with the breaks all against you.

"They got their first run in when a fellow sat down in the outfield. They got another in the ninth when a fellow wouldn't run on a high fly which he should have caught. That fly of Gehrig's in the ninth was Hafey's ball, but he stood still instead of running in on it, until it was too late to make the catch, and Thevenow, although he tried hard, couldn't get under it. Then we had that injury to Sherdel in the sixth when he was hurt on the pitching hand with a thrown ball. Maybe it didn't do him any great hurt, but it's a sure bet it didn't do him any good.

"But we'll get them. Pittsburgh came through last year with two wins to grab the series, and I don't see why we can't do the same thing. We've got the stuff and it will be on exhibition, too. I'll use Alexander against them Saturday. He's ready and the team will be ready, too.

Says Ruth Won't Hit Again.

"You didn't see Ruth hitting today, did you? And you won't see him hitting again, either. Not if we can help it. There'll be no more laying them right in there for him. He'll get balls he won't be able to hit out of the infield. We're going to pitch to him, too. We don't fear him. Not at all. If he can hit good pitching, then he's welcome to his hits. But we have yet to be convinced he is the murderous hitter they say. At any rate we'll pitch to him and let him do what he can."

Sherdel was crushed under the sting of his defeat. He was inconsolable in the clubhouse, and became even more morose as the players came over to his locker, slapped him on the back and praised him for a heroic effort.

Then he exhibited his left hand, his pitching hand. The nail of the index finger was blackened and painful looking, while the tip of the second finger was red where the ball returned by O'Farrell had hurt him in the sixth.

"I had pain from it through the rest of the game," he said, "but I would have won even despite this had they stood up behind me."

FANS GIVE EVIDENCE OF ANGRY ATTITUDE

Boo and Jeer Umpire Dineen Behind the Plate—Other Sidelights.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 7.—The fans at Sportsman's Park displayed the first traces of an ugly mood today. Umpire Bill Dineen behind the plate did not please the customers at all as he called balls and strikes, and, with Sherdel repeatedly voicing his own complaints, the crowd was booing and jeering continually.

Nick Altrock, the great comedian of the ball parks, is doing his stuff under cover here, so to speak. Nick is present but not voting. He has not donned a uniform, as he is under contract with the Washington club, and has confined most of his comedy to the rathskeller dining room at the Hotel Jefferson, where the 400 or so newspaper men covering the series make their headquarters after the games.

Nick, in one of his more serious moments, recalled today that it was just twenty years ago that he starred in a world's series as a pitcher for the White Sox. He also generously offered to break through the Washington contract if President Sam Breadon wanted him to step out and do some box work today. Mr. Breadon thanked Nick but said he would take a chance and rest his hopes on Wee Willie Sherdel.

Among the literary folk covering the games is none other than Havey Boyle, the well-known Pennsylvania Boxing Commissioner.

BELL LEAGUE'S LONE ENTRY.

Dr. Tipton, Head of Disbanded Appalachian Circuit, Sees Game.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 7.—One of the happiest men in that vast throng was Dr. E. W. Tipton of Kingsport, Tenn., President of the disbanded Appalachian League. He came from Tennessee to see Lester Bell in a world's series conflict as Bell is the only Appalachian leaguer ever to get into a world's series.

WHITE SOX WIN, 3-0; CAPTURE CITY TITLE

Blankenship Outpitches Root and Blake of Cubs in Seventh Game of Chicago Series.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7 (AP).—The American League White Sox today won the city series title by defeating the Cubs, who won the honor last year, in the seventh game of their series, 3 to 0. Ted Blankenship had the better of Charley Root and Sheriff Blake, who divided the pitching burden for the Cubs. Blankenship controlled the situation throughout, although he allowed one hit more than his two opponents on the mound.

The victory today was worth approximately $200 to each player, that being the difference between the winners' and losers' share of the players' pool from the first four games. The players have not participated in the gate receipts of the last three games, announced as 10,850, with gate receipts of $16,726.62. Each club's share was $6,863.96. The Commissioner's share today was $2,350.04.

How Two Radio Announcers Described Fifth Game in World's Series at St. Louis

St. Louis Fans Sing With Joy in Bleachers Before Yankees Turn Tables on Foe.

ALL GOOD PLAYS CHEERED

Weather Is Better for Football, as Ducks Indicate In Flight High Above the Diamond.

Here is the story of the game as broadcast by Graham McNamee and Phillip Carlin from WEAF, WJZ and twenty-one other stations:

St. Louis has been absolutely wild for days, wild and growing wilder. It is going to take about a whole week, I think, to get this town back on a normal footing after this series is over. This is our last day here, and I am sorry for it. (Recapitulates previous games).

"Along came Ruth!" That seems to be the answer to yesterday's game. He started out with a regular home run that he got in the first time up, into the right field stand. And the next time up, off the same pitcher, a fast ball pitcher, Mr. Rhem, Ruth socked another one. It went clear over in the stand between centre and right field, and went through a back opening and broke a window across the street.

The next time up they passed him. Then, thinking probably that the storm was over and had abated for the afternoon, Herman Bell came into the box. I talked to him last night, I said, "Herman, for heaven's sake, what did you feed Ruth a fast one on the outside for?" Herman said, "Well, you know, honestly, I didn't think he was going to knock them all out of the park."

Sherdel and Pennock opposing one another. The same as the first game, when Pennock beat Sherdel, 2 to 1.

Douthit is out of the game today as he was in a little smash-up out in the field yesterday. He has a strained muscle in his back. He is in no way seriously injured.

Yankees' First Inning.

One strike. That is Combs batting. One strike. A ball. One strike. He hit the next one, a fly, to left field, where Hafey camps under it and takes it for a put-out.

Koenig is batting. The first ball is hit to Thevenow on the ground. He gets it over to first base to Bottomley for a put-out.

Babe Ruth is up and St. Louis is giving him a tremendous hand. Babe Ruth batting. Babe is swinging that bat of his around. The pitcher, Sherdel, is looking him over and the Babe is looking the pitcher over. A long curve is wide of the plate. A slow ball comes over for a strike. A mean little teaser. Ruth did not strike. There is the next one. He had to jump out of the way of it or it would hit him in the shoulder. Two balls and one strike is the count. The infield is all playing very deep. The outfielders are away out near the fence. A grounder to second is tossed to first for a put-out, retiring the side.

Cardinals' First Inning.

Now we are going into the last half of the first inning and Holm is up. He is the first man up for the Cards. He has taken the place of Douthit. The first ball he hits to short, who gets it over for a put-out, Koenig to Gehrig. A nice stop, nice throw.

Southworth is batting. Again St. Louis has been showing its appreciation of Southworth's work by giving him a wild cheer. He hits the first ball down to short, who fumbles it, and he is safe on first. An error at short.

Rogers Hornsby is up. Somebody wrote me a wire, telling me that I should say Rogers Hornsby and not Roger Hornsby. All right, I will do anything I am asked. Rogers Hornsby it is until I forget it.

A little too low to Mr. Hornsby.

A stolen base. Southworth goes down with the pitch. Hornsby swung. A stolen base and a passed ball. The catcher, Severeid, tried to throw it before he got it, so it gives Southworth a stolen base, but it is also a passed ball by the catcher. He hits the next ball, a grounder, to the pitcher. It bounded so high that he almost made first. But the pitcher got it to first for the put-out, advancing Southworth to third.

Jim Bottomley is batting now. One strike. He swung at it. Pennock is taking his time, scraping the dirt around in the box for a more comfortable footing. He looks over to third at Southworth, looks around at his infield. Outside, a curved ball. Bottomley swung at it, just barely tipped it for the second strike.

Pennock is one of these pitchers who is coolest when under heavy fire. That has always been his reputation. His arm goes up, his foot is up. There is the ball—a little too close to a left-handed batter for the second ball.

Pennock sure is looking them all over with each pitch now. Here it comes. And a little too far on a side. Three balls and two strikes is the count on Bottomley. Pennock did not like the idea of calling that ball a ball, but I believe it was a little outside of the outside corner. The next ball is a grounder to second, who gets it over for a putout at first, retiring the side, Lazzeri to Gehrig.

Yankees' Second Inning.

Bobby Meusel is up. A fast ball, right over the middle of the pan, cut the plate in two. If it had been a pie, nobody could have chosen either piece. A ball. That was a show ball, too far out for a right-handed batter. And a ball, slow and a little too far out.

Bob Meusel, for all his height, is not an easy man to pitch to. He is right up on top of the plate, as close as the law allows. He hits the next ball to third. Bell fumbles it, but picks it up and gets it over to first for the put-out. Lester Bell has fumbled a good many balls during this series. He has not suffered by the fumble. He fumbles them and they drop right in front of him and he picks them up and he gets them over to first. I think Lester is just a little too anxious. He goes after the ball instead of letting the ball come to him.

Gehrig is now up. Ball. Another one, a little on the outside. One strike, right over the centre of the plate. The count is one and three. Strike two.

Now it is Sherdel's turn to take his time, which he is doing. There it comes. He hit the next ball through short, right over second base, a little closer to short, for a single. Thevenow made a dive for it, but couldn't get his hand on it.

That was the first hit of the game. Then a long foul into the right field stands, driven by our eminent Italian friend, Mr. Lazzeri. There is a ball. A strike. The next ball is driven for a hit to right field.

With a nice long slide, Gehrig goes into third base, and he now perches there quite safely. Lazzeri is on first.

Jumping Joe Dugan is at bat. A little too close to the batter. Two balls. A shot down to second base is turned into a double play. The run which comes in does not count. A grounder to Hornsby. Hornsby touched Lazzeri and then threw to first, retiring Dugan.

Cardinals' Second Inning.

A ball on Mr. Lester Bell, who is batting. It was a little high and wide for a right-handed batter. A foul ball along the third base line. Even the coachers are taking to wearing gloves, so that they can retrieve the foul balls. There is another foul ball. A strike; he struck him out. A curved ball. Lester did not swing at it.

Hafey, the left fielder of the Cards, is now at bat. He knocks a high foul. It hit the edge of the stand and bounded clear out into the field. He knocks another high foul, almost to me—not quite, though. There is another one, high, wide and handsome. There is another foul ball—up on the roof of the stands. Some of the boys are up there just for that purpose, to get those foul balls that go up there.

Two balls and two strikes. Here is a foul. That one landed about four feet from me right in the middle of the popcorn box. It destroyed about a dollar's worth of popcorn. Foul ball along third base line. A little short down to third. Nice work. A bad throw by Dugan actually takes Gehrig off his feet, and at the moment that he fell Hafey ran into him, but Dugan held the ball and they rolled about together for a moment with the total result that Hafey is retired.

One strike on Mr. O'Farrell. A little low. The umpire jumped to get his feet out of the way. Ball. This also is a little too close. Three balls and one strike. Somebody is playing a harmonica. We can get along without it. A grounder is deflected off Pennock's glove, and the shortstop, Koenig, gets it, but it was slowed up too much to get the man.

Thevenow up. There, he shot one to deep centre for a put-out, retiring the side. Combs caught Thevenow's high fly with little difficulty.

Yankees' Third Inning.

It is darker now. The sun has disappeared. It is a bit windy. The Cardinal infield is shooting them around out there, and the umpire, Mr. Klem, is dusting off the plate. A fly to centre field. Mr. Holm takes it for a put-out. That was Mr. Severeid who hit that ball.

Herb Pennock is batting. He is up at least. You can't tell whether he is batting or not. One ball. And one strike. A slow ball fooled Pennock for a second strike. And a ball. Sherdel did not like that decision of a ball, and neither did Mr. O'Farrell. Foul. And the next one is a little wide. Three balls. He hit it. A line drive to the pitcher. Sherdel took it in his gloved hand, really a wonderful catch, and he is certainly getting some hand.

He has thrown two balls to Combs. Maybe that drive kind of jarred him up a bit. It certainly was moving. If it had gotten by him it was an absolutely sure hit. And a strike. That was a curved ball over the outside corner of the plate. This one tells the story. Here it is—a fair ball. The catcher takes it and with a nice throw gets it over to first to make the put out. The ball was hard hit, but it was hit on the bottom of the bat, bounded into fair territory and before it hit the ground the second time O'Farrell had it, and with a fast throw to first caught Combs.

Cardinals' Third Inning.

Sherdel is batting. One strike. Curved ball. Came right over the middle of the pan nicely. And a ball. He hit one hard down to short. Short to first. Out. It was a nice stop that Koenig made that time.

Holm is up. One strike. He throws his bat. He pretty near threw it up in the grand stand. A ball, wide and high. Two strikes. He struck him out. He stood there and watched it go by.

Southworth batting. A little too close to a left-handed batter, one ball. Pennock is winding up again. Here is the ball. It is a foul, almost right in our hands again. He caught hold of the next one, a high fly, between left and centre. Babe Ruth, who took part in yesterday's game, made that putout.

Yankees' Fourth Inning.

All ready to go. Koenig is up. A little low; one ball. A strike. He hits the next one, a fly to left field, and it is taken for a putout by Mr. and Mrs. Hafey's son.

Now the Grand Master of Swat, the Battering Bambino, and all the rest of those things, is at bat. One strike. A slow ball is a little high. A slow curve wends its way far outside for a ball. Another ball, a very slow one, probably the slowest of any of them, but it wasn't quite on. Three balls and one strike, and a little low for another ball. He passed him.

Meusel up. Ruth goes down on a hit-and-run play. A long drive to left field is taken for a putout, and Babe Ruth is driven back to first base in a fearful hurry by Hafey's throw-in. Ruth scurried back like a rabbit.

Gehrig is up. One ball. Tried to get Ruth on first. Ineffective. Here is the pitch, and it is a strike, right over the pan. He crossed him with a fast ball that time. Sherdel is showing an awfully nice change of pace today, too. Two strikes. It curved out from the plate, but Gehrig bit at it. It was six inches beyond the end of the bat as he swung. Now Gehrig is taking a toe-hold on the dirt and grabbing the bat a little harder. A slow ball struck him out, retiring the side.

Cardinals' Fourth Inning.

Hornsby up. One ball. Oh, I see One-eye Connolly up there. He crashed the gate again. Did you pay your way in? He says he didn't. A low short one to the pitcher on the ground goes to first in time for the put-out.

One-Eye Connolly, the nationally known gate crasher, is standing up with his hat in his characteristic manner. I don't know why he always wears the peak of his cap over on his right ear. Bottomley is batting. That is a strike. And a little too close. A fast ball. A strike. Pennock fed him a sort of a fade-away and it worked. He didn't swing at it. A fast ball a little outside. Here is the next pitch, and three balls. Severeid didn't like the idea of that being called a ball.

Pennock is taking his time now. Here is the motion. His arm goes up slowly and then his foot—and a drive to Babe Ruth gets by him as he tries for it and goes for a two-base hit. Babe tries to make a shoe-string catch. The ball just barely eluded him and was retrieved by Combs. Combs returned the ball to third base, holding the batter at second.

It was a slight error in judgment, I should say, on Ruth's part not to take that ball on the first bounce, but if he had caught it it would have been a wonderful catch.

Lester Bell batting. One strike. Foul ball, making two strikes.

It is a hit. Bell gets a nice single to centre field, bringing in the first run of the game. Heaven only knows if you can hear what I am saying or not. That was a nice single directly over second base.

Hafey is batting. One strike, just over the inside corner, a fast ball almost shoulder high. A fly to Babe Ruth. Can't tell yet. Babe got it! One of the prettiest catches you ever saw in your life. A foul ball that was over the barrier, and Babe ran and slammed up against the barrier, got his hand over, almost touching the populace inside of the grandstand, and took the foul with his gloved hand.

I hope to tell you that was a catch! It wasn't only a hard catch, but it was the danger of running into that heavy barrier out there in right field at the same time. It took nerve to go and get that ball.

O'Farrell is up. On an attempted steal they put him out, catcher to short. The throw was a little low, quite low. It touched the ground before Koenig caught it, but he made the put-out very nicely.

The crowd over by the Yankee dugout is giving Ruth a fine hand as he comes in, following his circus catch out in left field.

Yankees' Fifth Inning.

Lazzeri batting. A foul—one strike. And a strike. Mr. Lazzeri bit very hard on a very slow ball. There you are, another slow ball. He hits it on the ground to third. Third gets it to first for a put-out by a very fast pick-up and throw. It was a slow hit ball. Lester Bell made a nice pick-up away upon the grass, and with the same motion snapped it over to his teammate, Bottomley, at first base.

Dugan is now up. The telegraph machines click merrily sending the news all over the country. Joe Dugan, he who chokes his bat more than any other batter in the country, I believe, is up. A ball. A little too low. The next is right over. Strike one and ball one. The next one he hits high but not very far. High to first base. Out! Bottomley takes a high fly just inside the foul line about twenty feet behind first base.

One ball for Severeid. The next one he hits, a fly to left, and Hafey is camping under it, and he gets it, retiring the side.

As yet the sagging house still stands over there, but it seems to me that the left half of it is kind of parting from the right half. I'll say there is a 10 per cent. list to that house. The boys don't seem to worry about it, the boys and girls over there. I guess there are a thousand people on top of it.

Cardinals' Fifth Inning.

O'Farrell is up, a right-handed batter. Here it is. The first ball is a nice curve. It swerved over for a pretty strike. Last half of the fifth, one to nothing in favor of the Cards. And a little low—one ball. There is the ball—another foul. The next one is a fast ball down to short. Short fumbles it. Koenig made a stab for it, touched it, but it got away from him and went out to left field, left centre. They held O'Farrell on first. A single.

Thevenow up. The first ball he drives to Koenig, who gets it over to first in time for a put-out. O'Farrell goes down to second. Koenig almost threw that one away, too. He made a hard put-out for Gehrig over on first.

Sherdel is up. Herby is looking around the infield. Now he is ready. He shoots a fast ball. One strike. Two strikes. Pennock is working very slowly. Here it is. He struck him out, a curved ball over the end of his bat.

One strike on Holm. Pennock is taking his time now, working very slowly. The howl around here is, "On the nose, boy, on the nose." One ball, a little too close, a slow ball. Here it is, a drive to short. Short gets it to first for a put-out, retiring the side.

Yankees' Sixth Inning.

Pennock up. One ball. A little low. Nobody seems to like to have liked the decision very much. A little too close. Two balls. A fast ball right over the middle of the pan. Another strike called. He tried to slip one over and he struck him out. The third strike came back as quick as a flash. Oh, no, Pennock walked away from the plate, thinking it was a strike, but it was a ball. The count is three and two. Here it is. He hits the next one, a fly to left field. The left fielder fell down and the ball goes to the fence.

Pennock is tearing around the bases, and is at second. On the relay they hold Pennock at second base. A two-base hit. Hafey would have taken that drive without a great deal of trouble, but as he started back for it he slipped in the soft turf out there and it got away for a two-base hit.

Combs is up, with Koenig and Ruth coming later. Here it is. He tries to bunt. Wait a minute, folks. He attempted to bunt. He didn't get it, but a steal was attempted at the same time. For a moment we thought it was out, as the shortstop and the runner piled up all over second base. We couldn't see the ball, but anyway he is safe.

Thevenow dropped the ball, we found out eventually. An error for Thevenow. O'Farrell threw to second in that play. Combs walks.

Koenig is up. A hit to left field. There comes the relay, but the run comes in, tying the score, sending Combs to second on Koenig's hit. It was a solid shot over third base out to left.

Strike one on Babe Ruth. Ball one, too far out. A slow ball is too low. The pitcher is pretty sore at the decision, so is the catcher and so is the crowd. Now Ruth is marking the place where he says the ball went, which is about three inches closer to him than the plate. Then O'Farrell marks the place where he thinks it went, right over the plate. In the meantime the umpire hasn't said a word but "Ball!"

The Babe took an awful swing at it, at a slow wabbling curve that was off the end of his bat. There it is! Struck him out! And you ought to hear the crowd now. You would love to listen to them for a minute. All right, folks, that was Babe Ruth striking out.

Sherdel's pitching hand. The catcher talks to Sherdel after that. Evidently it turned the nail back, or something of that kind. It was not a fast ball, so it did not break the finger. Sherdel is running into the clubhouse now. We can't tell exactly what happened up here. Haines is out, warming up now.

It is strange. The ball was not thrown fast. He probably was not careful how he took it and it hit him on the end of one of his pitching fingers.

Sherdel is coming back on the field again. Evidently he has had his finger taken care of. There are little groups of players all over the field, discussing it. Now Hornsby and O'Farrell are talking to Sherdel, and he is going back to pitch.

Everybody is here but Meusel. Where is he? Meusel can't be found. He is supposed to be batting. He must have stepped out for lunch or something. Sherdel is taking a few practice throws now. Here is Bob ready to go. A hard drive. A long drive to right is taken for a put-out right at the barrier, and Combs goes to third, holding Koenig at first.

Grover Cleveland Alexander and Jess Haines are warming up in the bull pen. That was a long drive out to right field. Southworth took it right up against the bleacher barrier.

Gehrig is up. A ball. I think it was purposely wide. They thought Koenig might try to go down. One strike. A slow ball. He is again wide. Two balls. Foul ball. One strike.

The Cards are throwing it around the infield. Sherdel is in a dangerous spot. He has had a bad man to pitch to. When Gehrig is hitting, he hits them hard. They tried to get Koenig at first, but it was unsuccessful. A ball. Again the slow ball is too far out to a left-handed batter.

He goes back and picks up the little white resin bag which lies behind the pitcher's box for the benefit of the National League pitchers. He dries his hand with it a bit. Now he is ready again. Here it is. I guess the umpire called it a ball. Gehrig walks. Everybody else seemed to think that Gehrig had swung at it. Sherdel has come all the way up to the plate to argue with the umpire about it, but as usual the argument with the umpire will probably end just one way. Hornsby also comes in to have a little talk with the umpire—only for a short time, however. Now they are all going back into their positions and the bases are thoroughly occupied by Yankee men.

Lazzeri up. Here is the pitch and it is a strike. A slow ball—he strikes at it.

O'Farrell and the pitcher, Mr. Sherdel, have walked half way each from the plate to the box to talk to one another a little. Evidently the entire subject was that O'Farrell reached to slap Sherdel on the back.

A wide one—one ball. Three men on, you know, with the score tied. A slow ball hits the ground first and almost gets away from O'Farrell. If it had gotten away it would have brought in a run. He hits the next one an awful shot for a put-out right at the barrier in the right field.

Oh, boy, everybody here thought it was a home run, but Southworth took it with his back against the wall in the right field. That certainly was close to four runs, believe you me. If there had been an extra pound behind that ball it would have been a home run, as sure as you're born. Some of the folks here are hollering for pulmotors because their hearts have ceased to beat. Lazzeri will never come closer to making a home run without making it.

Cardinals' Sixth Inning.

Southworth hit the first ball on the ground to first. First made the put-out unassisted by running over himself.

Hornsby is up. "Rajah come on," they are all howling. Hornsby hit a hard drive to centre for a put-out. A peach of a catch by Combs out in centre field after a long hard run, and he just barely got to it. If he had not gotten it, it was a sure three-bagger.

Bottomley is up. The crowd is clapping and yelling. They are using the old lock-step clap, you know, trying to worry Pennock. Foul ball, one strike. The next is a ball, a little far out to a left-handed batter. A curved ball, Strike two. He struck at that one. A ball. You couldn't tell what that one was for a minute, it was so close. There are a big flock of wild ducks going south over our heads. He swung at it and missed it, retiring the side.

Yankees' Seventh Inning.

Dugan up. Strike. Strike two. He hit a little short fly to third for a put-out.

Severeid is up now. He swung at a slow one. A little outside, a ball. He hit the next one to short. Thevenow gets it and throws it over to first for a put-out. Thevenow slipped about three feet as he got that ball, but he righted himself, got on an even keel, and got it over to first base for the put-out.

Pennock up. The first ball he grounds to the pitcher. The pitcher gets it over to first for a put-out.

Cardinals' Seventh Inning.

Lester Bell is up. Here is the first ball. A left field line drive. Babe Ruth retrieves the ball and returns it, holding it to a two-base hit for Lester Bell. It was a nice drive over third, and the St. Louis crowd has gone crazy.

A ball is called on Hafey. The score is tied, you know, 1 to 1. A high fly to Babe Ruth to left is out. Hafey is retired and Bell is held on second base.

O'Farrell up. A ball. A little too close to a right-handed batter. O'Farrell certainly watches them. He never bites at any bad ones. Strike. Pennock is pitching his heart out now. Here it is. A little too close to the batter. Another too far out. Three balls and one strike. That white uniform down on second base is the hope of the Cardinal team right now. Pennock looks around on his infield, then watches O'Farrell. Foul ball, strike two. The next ball is a hit, a safe hit. Koenig went up in the air and managed to touch it, but could not hold it. A hit to left field. Ruth retrieved the ball. A run scored, breaking the tie.

It is now two to one in favor of the Cardinals, and I want to tell you that there seem to be a lot of people quite contented over the event that just occurred.

The first ball to Thevenow is hit for a high infield fly to second, and is taken by Lazzeri for a putout.

Two down and a tremendous hush suddenly hits the crowd after all the excitement. Now the noise picks up again. The psychology of an infield fly.

Sherdel is batting. A curved ball. One strike. Here is the next one. Fouled it. Strike. The crowd out in the bleachers in the centre left field is singing songs now. My, but it is a colorful place, where everybody has the red cardinal birds on. Ball. One ball, two strikes. He drives the next one on the ground to first. Gehrig steps on first base for the putout, retiring the side.

Yankees' Eighth Inning.

Combs up. One ball, a curved ball, a litale too far out. The breeze is getting cooler, but it is not going to rain. It is a little more of a football day than a baseball day. Two balls. A strike. He was going to try to bunt it and changed his mind and did not do anything and it was called a strike. He hits the next one hard, a grounder over to second base. Hornsby fumbled the ball after a hard run, but followed it himself and get it away out in centre field and held Combs on first.

It was an impossible play and will be classed as a base hit undoubtedly. Yes. The official scorer gives Combs a hit. It bounded over the pitcher's head, and out toward second, and Hornsby just barely deflected it. He held it to a single.

Koenig is up. One strike. He missed it entirely on an attempt to bunt. Combs is staying pretty close to first, not taking a long lead, taking very little chances. The Yankees are playing for one run now for the moment, anyway. Away outside. Sherdel almost made a wild pitch. He hit the next one, a long shot to left field. A putout, holding Combs on first. Hafey made the putout in left field.

Babe Ruth is up. Now they are booing him a bit—booing and cheering, about half and half. Babe is taking a toe hold in the ground. He is swinging that big bat of his about. It is the first pitch, a slow ball. Foul. One strike on the Babe. Here is the next pitch. A grounder. Out at second. Safe on first.

The putout was pitcher to short, catching Combs going down. Thevenow then almost made a wild throw, a pretty wild throw, anyway, over to first. Bottomley just barely got it, but it pulled him away off the bag. Ruth is on first by virtue of that fielder's choice.

Meusel up. A ball. Foul strike. A ball. Two balls and one strike. A slow ball dribbled right over the plate perfectly for a second strike. Bob did not offer at it at all. He tried to get Ruth off the first base. And a little too low. Three balls. The Babe is hanging around first base, taking no lead at all.

Sherdel is looking Meusel over again now. There his arm goes up and the ball comes in. Foul ball. It was so close to being fair or foul that we didn't know up here which one it was until the umpire swung his hand, motioning a foul.

Had it landed an inch or two in towards the field, it would have been a sure two-base hit, and Ruth was almost around to third by the time the ball landed. He got away fast, came around quickly; it would have meant a run. It was just a matter of an inch or two that time.

The next one is a ground ball to third, who gets it to first for a put out, retiring the side. Again St. Louis is up in the air. Their men have played good ball this afternoon. They only have to protect a one-run lead for one inning now.

Cardinals' Eighth Inning.

Holm is batting. One ball—a little low. A fast ball. A little too close. And a little close again as the crowd begins to yell. It wakes up enthusiastically. Three balls, no strikes. Called strike. Three and one. Here it comes. And he walked him. First man up in the eighth inning walked. That is the first free transportation that Pennock has given in this game.

Southworth bunts a foul. Pennock and Sherdel coming toward the end of a nice pitcher's battle. A little bunt runs foul on the third base line. It looks like a fair ball for a moment, but it just wandered out across the white foul line half way down to third base. Urban Shocker is out in the Yankee bull pen warming up. Southworth hit the next ball to short, who tossed it to second, and the second baseman is unable to throw to first as the slide by the base runner going into second knocks him down. It is a force-out, Koenig to second.

Hornsby stands further away from the plate than any really great hitter I have ever watched. Strike. He bats right-handed, with his left foot well advanced. Strike two. He swung at a fast ball on the outside. A little low. The shadows are again beginning to get long on the field. Pennock is working slower and slower and each ball is thrown with the utmost care. He hits the next one, a drive to second, to short, to first for a put-out. A double play.

Yankees' Ninth Inning.

Gehrig is batting. I see Nick Altrock just behind us here in the press stand. This year, instead of being a comedian, Nick is a man of letters. He is writing for the papers. One ball for Gehrig. A high fly into short left falls safe for a Texas leaguer and is turned into a double by fast running on the part of Gehrig.

Thevenow ran out into left field and over toward the left-field foul-line, and Hafey came in for it, but neither one could get it.

Lazzeri is up. Haines and Alexander are warming up out in the bull pen for the Cards. Thomas and Shocker are warming up for the Yanks. One ball. Hornsby comes tearing in and fights a decision in regard to whether it was a ball or strike. Lazzeri is wild. Dugan is also coming up to argue. And now the little manager with the big feet, Miller Huggins, comes out to argue a bit. Evidently Hornsby argued first. Anyway, quite a few Yankees are now talking to Klem.

Klem is returning the compliment by talking to them. Huggins is having a fine little argument with Klem. Klem is now taking off his mask. Huggins is having a fine little scrap with him about it and pointing out to the scoreboard. He is pointing, I think, to the fact that the scoreboard already has a ball marked up.

I couldn't swear as to which one Klem called it first, but I think he called it a ball and reversed himself. Everybody is booing everybody else. I said Klem, didn't I? Well, it is not Klem. I mean Dinneen. Dinneen is at the plate, not Klem. I think Dinneen reversed himself and finally called it a strike, instead of a ball.

A bunt to the middle of the field is safe at first. Lester Bell picked it up and tossed it to first as fast as he could, but Lazzeri was already there when the ball got there. A very close decision, but I think an eminently fair one. That, of course, advanced Gehrig to third base.

A pinch hitter is going to bat for Dugan. Paschal will bat. The remarks around here are very pithy, some of them. One strike on Paschal, a curved ball. Now Sherdel is trying to settle down. Foul ball, strike two. An outside fast ball. One ball. Another ball, outside. Two and two is the count. A slow ball. It is a short fly to centre field for a hit. Paschal got a short Texas leaguer between centre and left, and the score is tied, and we may still be here all night. That makes three hits in succession.

Severeid is batting. A bunt. Put the man out at third. Nice play. A little bunt in front of the plate. O'Farrell picked it up like a shot and drove it to Lester Bell at third. Lazzeri was retired going into third base. That was a beautiful and heady play on the part of O'Farrell.

One strike on Pennock. Ball. Foul ball, two strikes. The Cardinal infield is tossing the ball around after the foul. Miller Huggins did not want to take a chance on a new pitcher going in. And a little low. Two and two.

Sherdel looks around at the infield to see how every position is filled. He watches the base runners closely on first and second. A drive, a hit—No! No, a beautiful stop by Thevenow and a force-out at second base. Two down. If that ball had gotten by Thevenow, it meant a run.

Thevenow knocked the ball down with a beautiful one-handed smash behind second base, picked it up with the same motion, with the right hand, as he was going by and with an underhand motion threw to Hornsby at second, retiring the runner coming down from first. Paschal went to third on the force-out and Pennock to first. Combs up. The first ball he hit to Hornsby at second, who tossed it to first, retiring the side.

Cardinals' Ninth Inning.

Bottomley up. A ball. A high fly to short right is taken by the second baseman, who goes away out to make the catch. The pride of Italy made that catch, Lazerri. That is what you call a right field fly to second base.

Lester Bell up. A foul ball along the left field line. The next one he hits to third. Put out. Third to first. That plane that we just saw go over wasn't the plane that has been dancing around here for the last three days. It was the air mail going over.

Hafey up. The first ball is a very high infield fly toward shortstop. He got it, retiring the side.

Yankees' Tenth Inning.

Koenig is batting. Foul. And a little close. Ball. And a slow ball for a called strike. And the next is a safe hit between short and second. Nice solid hit by Koenig.

Ruth batting. He bunts the first ball foul along the third-base line. Strike one on the Babe. One ball, a little too far out for the Babe. He sort of figured on bunting it again, and then changed his mind. Now it looks as if he might make an attempt to hit it. He is gripping his bat this time, and he bunts. Foul! Not so good.

Sherdel fooled him that time with a very slow one, and Babe's bat was under it. This is a baseball game. Ruth takes his real socking position now. A slow ball lands in front of the plate, and the man goes down to second. A ball, too far outside. Three balls and two strikes.

Here it is, four balls. Ruth is passed. Man on first and a man on second. I imagine he finally got orders to pass Ruth on that fast ball. It really looks like good strategy there, as there is a chance now for a double play.

Bob Meusel is up. The infield is talking to Sherdel. Great difficulty in stopping a run now. Here is the ball. One ball, a little too far outside. It looks as if Meusel had orders to bunt also. He certainly held his bat as though he were going to that time. He bunted. Foul. Both runners were well on their way. Now they are well on their way back. He bunted right in front of the plate. The pitcher threw to first for a putout, advancing both men.

That ball was dribbled in front of the plate about twenty feet. Sherdel came in fast for it and got it over to first in time for the putout. A long outfield fly brings in one run and a hit probably two runs.

Gehrig up. One ball. Just a little off the corner to a left-handed batter. Ball. I think he has orders to pass him. It looks like it. That will fill the bases with one out and it looks like good strategy at this point. Three balls. Four balls.

Lazzeri up. And the infield is again in talking to Sherdel and the umpire has gone out to tell them not to use up so much time, I imagine. It will take pretty sweet baseball on the part of these Cards to prevent a run now. The infield is drawn in. A double play, of course, kills the danger. Now it is a question what they can do about it.

Here is the first pitch to Lazerri. He hit the first ball, a long fly to left field. Now watch the play! It is caught for an out and a run comes in, breaking the tie. It is now 3 to 2 in favor of the Yanks.

Gazella is hit by a pitched ball, filling the bases.

Severeid up. One ball. Shawkey has just gone out to warm up for the Yankees. They have three pitchers out there warming up. The third one, or it will be pretty soon, a fly to second. Yes. The side is retired. Hornsby makes the catch of a high infield fly.

Cardinals' Tenth Inning.

O'Farrell up. Ball. Pennock is taking his time, working very slowly, playing the corners. A little low, two balls. A strike. That was a fast ball right over the plate. One strike and two balls. A little too far out, three balls. Two strikes. Here it is. A high foul that Gazella is camping under. He takes it for the first putout of the last half of the tenth inning.

The Yankees are slapping the ball around the infield and dancing at the same time.

Thevenow drives a nice single over the second baseman's head out to right field.

Flowers bats for Sherdel. A short fly to first base, and Gehrig makes the putout, holding Thevenow on first.

Holm is batting. One ball, a little too close. Two are down, Thevenow is on first. Two balls, again too close. The outfield has moved away over towards left. A strike, a fast ball. Here it is. Foul ball. Strike two. Pennock is certainly working very carefully. Here it is. He hits the next one between short and third and it is a putout, third to first, winning the game for the Yanks.

SERIES PICTURES AT RISK.

Barred From Field, Camera Men Perch on Grand Stand Roof.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 7.—Camera men for the newspapers are risking their necks here daily to get good pictures of the world's series, because of the unusual régime which keeps them off the play field. Handling giant telescopic cameras and perching precariously on the roof of the grand stand, they are a surprising picture to veterans of other world's series.

Besides this trouble in vantage point, the camera men have been having their troubles with visibility. Gloom shrouded the field they were shooting at today, until the sun broke through the clouds in the sixth inning.

REGISTER OR YOU CANNOT VOTE!

If you do not register you cannot vote. There will be registration in New York City all this week. The registration places will be open from 8 to 10:30 P. M. the first five days and from 7 A. M. to 10 P. M. on Saturday.

Douthit, Hurt in Collision, Will Be Idle Rest of Series

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 7.—Taylor Douthit, reliable outfielder of the Cardinals, is out of the world's series, as a consequence of the collision with Hafey yesterday in fielding a fly ball, announcement was made after the game today by Manager Hornsby. Holm, who substituted for Douthit in centre field today, will remain there, Hornsby said. Douthit was in his uniform today but he didn't exercise. The left side of his body is swathed in adhesive tape which supported a couple of bruised ribs.

$1,000,000 WON HERE ON THE FIFTH GAME

WESTERN FANS HARD HIT

Yanks Favored at 2½ to 3 to 1 to Win Title—Odds 9 to 10, Take Your Pick, for Tomorrow.

More than $1,000,000 was wagered in New York yesterday in the view of the leading betting commissioners both along Broadway and in Wall Street. The uncertainty of the so-called crucial game, the fifth, resulted in a constant flow of money from early morning until game time. A number of the leading commissioners reported such great activity that it was necessary to increase their staffs to care for the unexpected outpouring of money.

The Cardinals apparently are carrying the unlimited support of the West, while New York layers, now more confident than ever, also are willing to go the limit. In view of the fact that neither the Card nor Yankee backers show any indications of wavering, the money placed before the series ends is expected to exceed $10,000,000.

The new quotations find the Yankees favored at odds ranging from 2½ to 1 to 3 to 1 to win the championship, but it was noticeable that the price for tomorrow's game, the sixth of the series, was quoted at 9 to 10 and take your pick. This short price was due to the fact that Alexander is slated to pitch, and Alexander showed in his last start that he is no easy problem for the hard-swinging Yankee batsmen.

In Jack Doyle's Broadway billiard academy the odds quoted on the sixth game are 9 to 10 and take your choice and on the series 2½ to 1, with the Yanks the favorites. Doyle also reported a freak wager, placed at 2½ to 1, that Alexander, if he started the sixth game, would not last nine innings. On the series Doyle said the odds were 13 to 5 against the Cards, 2 to 5 against the Yanks.

Wall Street betting houses report continued activity. The odds quoted there in most instances were 3 to 1, with the Yanks favored. One concern reported the placing of $9,000 against $3,000. Another reported the laying of $3,000 against $2,500, or 6 to 5, that the Yankees win the sixth game.

Card Backers Hard Hit.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 7.—The defeat of the Cardinals here this afternoon was not pleasing to backers of the team, for they wagered large amounts on Sherdel to outpitch Pennock. The Yankees went into the battle favored to win at 11 to 10, the odds having whittled just before game time from the quotations of last night, when the Cardinals were favored at odds of 11 to 10 and 6 to 5.

A flood of Yankee money made its appearance in the lobby of the Jefferson Hotel, where the baseball clans gather here, and the odds gradually went to evens and then switched to the Yankees at 11 to 10.

Nor has the expectation that Alexander will pitch in Saturday's game lessened the confidence of Yankee bettors. The result is that tonight the American League champions are 11 to 10 favorites to win the game in New York on Saturday. Betting on the outcome of the series is light, supporters of the Cardinals asking 3 to 1 for their money.

These odds are justified by the commissioners here, who point out that if a Cardinal backer should bet $100 on his favorites to win tomorrow at even money he would have $200 to place on the team at even money for the final game, and if he should win this bet he would finish by winning $300, which would be at odds of 3 to 1.

Yale Parley Ends With Princeton Remaining on Harvard's Football Schedule

Yale's Efforts at New Haven Peace Parley Succeed in Keeping Big 3 Intact.

MICHIGAN GAME CANCELED

Bingham Says Harvard Never Intended to Break Football Relations With Tigers.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 7.—Harvard and Princeton will not sever athletic relations, Harvard will cancel the football game which has been tentatively scheduled with the University of Michigan, and Princeton, Harvard and Yale will continue their arrangement of a triple alliance. Yale's efforts as peacemaker in the move made by Harvard to withdraw from the triangular agreement and to drop Princeton have succeeded.

The conference, which was held at the home of Professor George H. Nettleton, head of the Yale athletic system, here last night, broke up in a love feast. The delegates from Yale's sister universities, Professor Charles W. Kennedy of Princeton and William J. Bingham of Harvard, finally agreed that it is better to retain the present agreement, which has seemed invaluable from a Yale standpoint, principally because it is felt here that its influence on American amateur sport has been stimulating in the extreme.

The session lasted several hours. At its close Professor Nettleton declined to make an announcement. The decision that the triangular agreement should be continued was announced by Professor Nettleton to Yale University officials during the day and was received with unbridled satisfaction.

Great Progress Seen.

Such notable progress has been made in improving general athletic relations and in clearing eligibility misunderstanding that Yale would have regarded a Princeton-Harvard break as an unmeasured calamity. Tonight Yale athletic headquarters announced the outcome of the conference in the following statement:

"The first regular meeting for the present academic year of the Harvard-Princeton-Yale chairmen of athletics was held at New Haven Wednesday evening, Oct. 6. After full conference, it was mutually agreed that the tentative proposal of a Harvard-Michigan football game at Ann Arbor in 1927 was counter to the understanding and practice of the 'triple agreement,' and, on suggestion of Harvard, it was accordingly withdrawn. The Harvard-Princeton football game for 1927 will be played at Princeton, and no change in the essential athletic regulations of the three universities is contemplated."

Warm congratulations were tonight tendered by Yale alumni and undergraduate leaders to Professor Nettleton, who is beginning his second year as Yale athletic head. He succeeded Professor Clarence W. Mendell, whose reorganization of Yale athletics placed the World War gained wide prominence. Professor Mendell, who became Dean this fall, and Professor Nettleton are given credit for having brought about a continuance of the triangular agreement, which President James Rowland Angell has warmly commended.

Never Wanted to Break, Says Bingham

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 7.—William J. Bingham, Harvard's athletic director and member of the Faculty, on his return from the Harvard-Yale-Princeton athletic conference which was held at New Haven last night, declined to discuss his session with the Yale and Princeton Athletic Committee chairmen.

He said that a joint statement had been made at New Haven regarding the meeting. Hearing that the dispatches from New Haven stated that Harvard and Princeton would play football in 1927, Mr. Bingham said:

"The clause, which reads, 'No change in the essential athletic relations of the three universities is contemplated,' means that there will be no change in the rules of eligibility, &c. The question of future games was left open.

"Athletic relations between Princeton and Harvard are excellent and I am confident that nothing will arise to disturb the amicability of this relationship.

"There never has been any suggestion on the part of Harvard of discontinuing athletic contests with Princeton. Some months ago, with the approval of our committee on the regulation of athletic sports, I inquired of the Chairman of the Princeton Board of Control as to Princeton's probable attitude toward a suspension of the football games for the next two years to enable us to play home and home games with the University of Michigan. This request was made because our Faculty regulation, made last year, prevents more than one football game to be played away from Cambridge each year."

W. AND M. AT SYRACUSE.

Football Team Arrives in Rain, but Holds Secret Practice.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Coach Pete Reynolds today recalled two veteran backs from the substitute list and posted them in the Syracuse varsity backfield in the places occupied this week by two sophomores. Charlie Cook and Willis Clark were the veterans, replacing Halsey Singer at quarterback and Jonah Goldman at halfback, respectively.

More rain drenched the Orange today and was falling hard when the William and Mary squad of twenty-four men arrived. The invading players went immediately to the Bay Shore training camp of the Syracuse team, where they held a secret practice.

SNODGRASS, KINSEY, ARRIVE

Coast Players Here to Join Pyle's Professional Tennis Troupe.

Harvey Snodgrass and Howard Kinsey, Coast tennis stars, arrived in New York yesterday and thus completed C. C. Pyle's troupe of professionals. Milo Lengien, Miss Mary K. Browne, Paul Feret and Vincent Richards will play in the Garden tomorrow night and Sunday night. Kinsey and Snodgrass worked out in private shortly after their arrival.

From now until the matches take place all the players will do their practicing in secret, not even newspaper men being allowed to see them at work. It was announced yesterday by Pyle that Richards would be the only one not to do any practicing, as he will rest until Saturday. The pairings are expected to be announced today.

Yale and Harvard Track Team To Invade England Next Year

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 7.—Yale and Harvard have made plans to cross the ocean next Summer and meet Oxford and Cambridge in track athletics. This announcement was made by Coach Connors at the rally of the Yale varsity track squad today, when 200 candidates for the combined cross-country and track teams reported.

DALEY LOST TO HARVARD

Veteran Guard Believed to Be Suffering From Appendicitis—Princeton Has Light Drill.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 7.—Yale's forward passing attack, which proved effective against Boston University last Saturday, failed against the scrubs this afternoon in the final scrimmage before the Georgia game here Saturday. The reserves made the only score of the afternoon and won, 6 to 0.

One of the most promising heaves of the regulars was intercepted by Fisher Starr, scrub quarterback, who sidestepped fifty yards through the varsity defense for the touchdown.

Dick Wortham, it was announced today, was suffering from a leg injury which has bothered him all this week, and Johnny Charlesworth, sophomore, was installed in his berth at left guard.

Word was today received from Georgia that its squad would reach here tomorrow about noon and would practice in the Bowl before sunset. Major Prichard, Yale coach and former West Point captain, tonight termed Georgia the strongest eleven below the Mason and Dixon Line.

Stewart Replaces Daley.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 7.—Leo Daley, the one veteran lineman who was expected to start for Harvard against Holy Cross on Saturday, will in all probability not be able to play. Yesterday he complained of a pain in his right side and he has since been under observation. It is feared that he has appendicitis.

In the first team line-up today Stewart was at right guard in Daley's place. The Crimson's workout this afternoon included the usual drills and a long dummy scrimmage against the scrub team.

The first team lined up with Saltonstall and Meadows, ends; Simonds and Clark, tackles; Goodwin and Stewart, guards, and Parkinson, center. Ernie Gamache also played at center. He formerly played there, but he has been at end for two seasons.

As Art French has a lame leg, Clark was in the back field with Miller and Sayles, Stafford continuing to play at quarterback.

Princeton in Light Drill.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 7.—Coach Bill Roper, with the game with Washington and Lee only two days off, eased up on his men this afternoon. In the early part of the drill the Princeton coach supervised the kickers. Earl Baruch still leads in punting, holding a slight edge over Jake Slagle, Tiger triple threat star, who was absent today.

The other absentee was Captain Johnny Davis, who is still nursing an injury which kept him out of the opening game with Amherst, and which may keep him on the bench Saturday.

Following the preliminary drill, Coaches Roper and Wittmer called the men together for a long dummy scrimmage, and instructed them in new plays.

The line-up which received the greatest amount of attention this afternoon follows: Moeser and Weekes, ends; Meislahn and Rosengarten, tackles; Mann and Baldwin, guards; Bartel, centre; Williams, quarterback; Miles, Prendergast and Bridges, backs.

WILLS WORKS HARD; BOXES SIX ROUNDS

Spars With Three Mates as Big Crowd Watches—Joe Wolcott Joins His Staff.

Appearing before a crowd that jammed every available inch in Grupp's gymnasium yesterday afternoon, Harry Wills, negro heavyweight, engaged in the most impressive workout he has yet held since he began training for his fifteen-round bout with Jack Sharkey at Ebbets Field next Tuesday night. Wills went through six rounds of spirited boxing in which he did not spare his sparring partners.

Three opponents faced Wills. They were Jack Townsend, Jeff Clark and Johnny Campbell, a welterweight. Each went two rounds and all received an equal share of punches that sent them spinning around the ring.

Joe Wolcott, famous negro fighter of another day, also joined Wills's staff yesterday, but not as a sparring partner. Wolcott has been engaged to act in an advisory capacity and from now on will take personal charge of Wills's training. After the workout Wolcott said Wills appeared to him to be as good as he ever was. Wills's fine showing yesterday also had an appreciable effect on the betting, and the odds, which had shortened to 7 to 5 the previous day, again had become 2 to 1, with the negro the favorite.

Among those entered are Canada Lee, Dick Fullam, Stanley Cross and Jimmy Burns. There will be competition in three four-man classes as well as a number of special bouts.

PENN'S WEAK POINT IS FULLBACK ROLE

Seeks Man to Fill Kreuz's Job, but Fears Wascolonis Lacks Driving Power.

LINE STRONG AT WINGS

Eligibility of Star Tackles, However, Is Worrying Coach Lou Young.

This is the twelfth of a series of football articles on Eastern teams and their prospects for the season.

By ALLISON DANZIG.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7.—Pennsylvania is prepared to go Harvard or any other institution of learning one better. Three professors for one good running back may be a fair exchange at Cambridge, but Lou Young, head coach of the Red and Blue, will even give three light running backs for one brute of a fullback.

Al Kreuz has passed on from Penn and his absence may mean the difference between a team of championship caliber and one that at present is lacking in the ramifications of last year's. Kreuz could tear a line apart and plug up the gaps in his forward wall like the Holland boy at the dikes, but he fumbled badly in the classroom and professional football recovered. Young's problem now is chiefly to develop another man to fill his shoes, but Kreuz's were No. 12s and it takes a big man to wear them.

Al Wascolonis is the most sizable back to fit the job and while it's a lot of comfort to Penn men to know that Al's here, he isn't the caveman that was Kreuz. Nature wasn't so generous to him as it was to Kreuz and the difference in weight of twenty-five pounds between them is one that no amount of coaching can overcome.

Looking over the fine array of experienced ball carriers that Young, Bert Bell and Poss Miller have assembled at Franklin Field, one might wonder how the absence of one man could have so much weight, but, as the coach put it today, "What good are ball carriers when you haven't got a man to lead the interference and clean the way for them?"

Backs Are Really Good.

But there's no reason for Penn followers to be discouraged about this backfield. It is almost possible that even Gil Dobie could forget about the degeneracy of the human race as exemplified in football material if he could lay eyes on the collection of seasoned, clean-limbed young men who are personally conducting the ball to the goal line for Penn. Besides Wascolonis, there are Charley Rogers, Joe Lair, Jesse Douglas, Dick Ordiorne, Tom Freeman, Paster Fields, Walter Pine, Mulligan and Andy Thompson, all of whom gained experience to some degree last year, and two corking men from the 1925 freshman team, Paul Murphy and Paul Scull.

The sophomore class has reason to be proud of Murphy and Scully, for both of them have made the varsity in spite of the presence of so many experienced backs. Both of them are triple-threat men, and Murphy had so good a football head on him that he has been made quarterback in preference to Laird, regular at the position in 1924, and Thompson, substitute to Al Leth last year. Murphy, who weighs 170 pounds, gets off a beautiful punt that twists with reverse English, and he is also a placement kicker, while Scull looks like the best drop-kicker Penn has had since the days of Howard Berry.

Rogers on Sick List.

Rogers is the man who threw the pass that beat Chicago last year and who recovered the fumble that was converted into the winning touchdown against Cornell. He is suffering from an injured ankle and may not get into the Swarthmore game Saturday.

The back field men are not what could be called heavyweights but they are far from being frail and they are fast and mentally active. They are just the type of ball carriers to execute Young's deceptive running plays and cleverly conceived passes, which will play an important part in the Penn attack. In short, Penn has one of the best collections of running backs in the East and almost all of the leading ones can pass and kick.

The best that can be said about the line is that Penn has probably the best lot of ends this side of the Appalachians, which isn't discouraging, anyway. The strength of the rest of the line hinges upon the eligibility of a powerfully built veteran. If Bob Pike makes the scholastic grade Penn worries over the departure of Captain Joe Wilson and Stan Sieracki, the two stalwart tackles of last year, can be somewhat lessened, but the loss of Dick Snyder, who has been declared ineligible, is a hard one to remedy.

Thayer Is Smart End.

In Captain George Thayer, Line Coach Lud Wray has one of the best wings in the country, a player who was mentioned frequently for all-American honors last year. Thayer weighs 190 pounds, is as sure a tackler as he is a receiver of passes, has the knack of smashing the interference and getting the man with the ball as well and is strong down field. Don Singer, who was hampered by injuries last year, is also a high type of end, and Feiwell Scull and Joe Lengnen, both experienced men, are worthy substitutes. Scull, a brother of Paul Scull, is one of the fastest men on Lawson Robertson's track team and is showing up so strong that he may take the job away from Singer.

Ed Make, Harry Miller and John Smith are the leading candidates for tackle. All of them are big enough. Three other promising tackles are Foster Sanford Jr., James McGinnis and William Downey, all substitutes last year. Sam Parke, a letter man, and Clifford Duncan are the leading candidates for guard, while Stewart Brydon and Tom Poole are also in the running.

Karl Robinson, the varsity centre for two years, has left a vacancy which is being filled by Jack Hutler, who played at guard last year and in 1924. He is giving so good an account of himself that there is no worry about how the centre assignment will be taken care of. Leon Westgate and Bill Dern are capable understudies.

The schedule for the remainder of the season:

Oct. 9, Swarthmore at Pennsylvania; 16, Chicago at Pennsylvania; 23, Williams at Pennsylvania; 30, Illinois at Illinois; Nov. 6, Penn State at Pennsylvania; 13, Columbia at Pennsylvania; Cornell at Pennsylvania.

Lafayette Eleven on Way.

EASTON, Pa., Oct. 7.—One of the most hearty send-offs ever given a Lafayette football team was accorded the Maroon squad when it left here early tonight for Pittsburgh to meet the Pitt Panthers on Saturday.

Holy Cross Is Expected to Give Harvard Another Hard Battle

Crimson Eleven Is Not Likely to Find Things Tomorrow Any Easier Than It Did Against Geneva—Popularity of the Huddle System Must Amuse Roper—Other Gridiron News.

By ROBERT F. KELLEY.

Harvard's opening of its season last week, when Bo McMillin's Geneva outfit gave the Crimson the first defeat it ever suffered in an opening game, has served to make Harvard's clash with Holy Cross tomorrow about the most interesting of the games in the East.

For Harvard, still wrestling with the problem of fitting in a new coach and system, is facing a team apt to provide almost as much competition. Holy Cross was impressive last week-end.

Coach Cleo O'Donnell has only three seniors on his team at the Catholic College, but he apparently has found the material at hand with which to build. Three transfers, Richard Sheridan, Mike Michelsky and Sheldon Daly, have helped, and he has four veteran backs and some good sophomore material for the line.

This game with Holy Cross has become quite a feature of the early season in New England. The two teams met first in 1911 and, save for a break during the war, have been meeting ever since.

Holy Cross was one of the first of the smaller colleges to demonstrate the new era in football when a little college became more than a victim, and has been of recent years providing Harvard with plenty of hard work each year in the stadium.

'Bill Roper, if he feels at all inclined, must be able to extract a bit of mild amusement from the spectacle of football players huddling all over the place this season. The huddle system of giving signals did not, of course, originate with Princeton, but it was the adoption of it by Princeton teams two years ago that has served to give its present vogue.

Both of the teams in the Harvard Stadium will be huddling, for both have turned to that form this season, and, unless memory of last year's Georgia team fails, both the teams in the Yale bowl will be doing it also, for Yale is another convert. The spectacle of that probable touchdown against Harvard last season bouncing away with the loose ball that came from a lost signal made up the mind of Tad Jones on that score.

The word from New Haven of the prevention of the threatened break between Harvard and Princeton bears out the reports in circulation during the past ten days, which made it practically certain that Harvard would not go through with its plan for dropping the Princeton game. A combination of unexpected disapproval on the part of certain Harvard graduates and the good offices of Yale is credited with preventing the rift.

There has been much talk on the newness of the Princeton-Harvard series, but, as a matter of fact, the first Princeton-Harvard game was played in April, 1877, a year and a half after the first game with Yale, and, though there have been some breaks, the series is one of the oldest in American sport.

The Roper-Jones agreement to end scouting between Yale and Princeton came so suddenly that there was an amusing incident connected with it. It broke on the eve of the opening games of each, and when it came time to call off the scouts, Winslow Lovejoy, Yale's captain of 1924, could not be found, having started for Princeton. Saturday morning Tad Jones was facetiously searching New Haven for a Princeton man to come out and scout him so that Roper wouldn't think he was trying to put anything over.

Scouting of recent years has become such an aboveboard thing that at times coaches have used the scouting of their teams by rivals to good advantage. Last year, for instance, Yale scouts watched Princeton pass Harvard to death and the following Saturday had their ends dropped back and waiting for those deadly short passes across the end. But Princeton, it will be remembered, countered by running these waiting ends to great advantage. To the more or less casual observer it would appear that a no scouting rule was a good one, for it would seem to make the sport more of a game for the boys playing it, with more of the burden thrown on them.

ARMY GOES THROUGH HARD 2-HOUR DRILL

Born and Harding Out of Gruelling Workout for Davis and Elkins Game Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 7.—The Army football squad went through two hours of grueling work today in preparation for the Davis and Elkins game Saturday. It was the last drill, except the signal practice ordered for tomorrow, that the Cadets will have before lining up against the West Virginians, who gave them such a hard battle last year.

Neither Born nor Harding was used today, Harbold and Davidson alternated at right end in Born's place. Either of them may start Saturday, as it is almost certain Born will not get back regularly before next week. Harding is bruised some, and rested today.

Both Meehan and Hutchinson were used as quarterbacks. At guard Hammack was displaced by Seeman early in the workout.

WORLD MOTOR MARKS ARE SET BY THOMAS

British Driver Breaks Records for 500 Miles, 500 Kilometers, 3 Hours' Speeding.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Three world's speed motor records were broken at the Brooklands track this afternoon by J. G. Parry Thomas, known as Britain's most daring and most successful driver. The new records, which are subject to official confirmation, follow: 500 miles, at 110.14 miles an hour; 500 kilometers, at 111.34 miles an hour; three hours' driving, at 111.20 miles an hour.

Thomas also intended to attempt to set new records for 1,000 miles and 1,000 kilometers, for which distances the records at present are held by French drivers. He hoped to do this by remaining at the wheel himself, but the strain proved too much and at the end of six hours he gave place to Paul Dutoit. Dutoit could not maintain the same high pace, however, and further attempts to set new records were abandoned.

Tire trouble began early in the race against time and it is claimed that this alone prevented Thomas from breaking other figures. As it was he missed the world's record for 1,000 kilometers by only twenty-seven seconds, beat the 500-mile record by just five seconds and the 1,500-kilometer record by six seconds.

RUTGERS LOSES MOSCOVITZ.

Star Tackle Out for at Least Two Weeks—Left Knee Injured.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 7.—Rutgers's hopes for victory over Washington and Jefferson Saturday declined today when it was announced that Dave Moscovitz, star tackle, would be out of the line-up for at least two weeks and perhaps for the remainder of the season because of torn ligaments in his left knee. The sophomore received the injury in the last play of yesterday's scrimmage session.

LEHIGH READY FOR BROWN.

Football Team Is Put Through Paces Until Darkness Ends Work.

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Oct. 7.—Final preparations for the Brown game at Providence, R. I., on Saturday afternoon were made today at Lehigh University when Coach Percy Wendell sent his charges through an exhaustive practice. Starting early, the players were pressed hard until darkness made it impossible to scrimmage.

NAVY VARSITY TEAM IN DEFENSIVE DRILL

Engages Squad B in Scrimmage, While Team to Play Richmond Also Works Out.

Special to The New York Times.

ANAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 7.—With several of the regulars still out of the line-up, the Navy football team engaged in a defensive scrimmage against Squad B, this afternoon, in preparation for the game against Drake on Saturday.

At the same time, the special team which will meet the University of Richmond the same afternoon worked out.

Of those who have been out of the hard work since Saturday, Hamilton, quarterback, was again on the varsity, and took part in the whole practice. Shapley ran through signals with the second team and Hardwick only did a little running. Shapley will probably start against Drake but it is doubtful if Hardwick, right end, will be available.

Schiber was at fullback on the varsity in place of Shapley, and Lloyd and Taylor were on the ends.

LOEW PAYS $2,800 FOR A POLO MOUNT

Coffee Cooler Brings Highest Price of Heckscher String in Auction Sale.

Special to The New York Times.

EAST WILLISTON, L. I., Oct. 7.—In a sale which was in marked contrast to the one yesterday when the Argentine string of polo ponies brought record prices, George A. Bain knocked down several polo ponies and hacks in the auction tent of William Post and Son.

Where the previous day had brought forth a large, interested crowd, only a handful gathered when these horses, mainly extra ones from the strings of several prominent owners, went on sale. The bidding was conservative, so much so that several of G. M. Heckscher's string went out of the ring when bidders failed to meet his reserve figures.

William G. Loew, Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock Sr., Mrs. R. Penn Smith Jr. and Charles Lawrence were among the buyers. Mr. Loew took Darby, a 15-hand chestnut gelding of Mr. Heckscher's, which Malcolm Stevenson played this year, and Coffee Cooler, a seven-year brown gelding of Mr. Heckscher's which brought the highest price of his sales, $2,800. Two hunters offered from his string, including Kings-Feet, winner of the Meadow Brook point to point, were withdrawn without bids.

Mrs. Smith took the other high price mount of the day when she purchased Captain C. H. Gerhardt's Gold Rush, an eight-year chestnut mare of 15:1 hands which had been played by Captain Gerhardt all Summer and took second place in the light weight novice class at the Meadow Brook pony show.

Stephen Sanford disposed of two old horses for a total of $1,000. Captain Peter Rodes sold some and J. C. Phipps and David Dows others.

CORNELL HITS FAST PACE.

First Team Scores Frequently in Scrimmage With the Seconds.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Another lively scrimmage featured Cornell's football practice this afternoon, probably the last of the week's preparation. The first eleven, which after the Williams game will be known as the varsity, drove through the third and fourth teams for consistent gains, though no attention was paid to scoring.

Stecher Beats Pesek on Mat.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 7 (AP).—Joe Stecher won his wrestling match with John Pesek of Nebraska here last night after each had gained a fall, and Pesek, in downing Stecher for the second time, used a strangle hold which the rules prohibit.

N. Y. U. FIRST TEAM GETS 3 TOUCHDOWNS

COLUMBIA RESERVES SCORE

Cross Jayvee Line Twice as Regulars Have Light Drill—Fordham Busy Till Dark—Other Met News.

Three touchdowns were scored by the New York University football team in scrimmage against the second varsity at Ohio Field yesterday afternoon. Kenneth Strong made all three. He ran thirty-five yards for the first score, punched a hole in the line for the second and took a pass from Connors to chalk up the third.

It was the second scrimmage of the week for the Violet eleven and showed the team fit and ready for the West Virginia Wesleyan game tomorrow. Coach Chick Meehan let it be known yesterday that he will start his first team against the visitors, as they are coming North with one of the strongest teams they have had in years. They are expected to arrive this morning and will work out at Ohio Field this afternoon.

Columbia Seconds Scrimmage.

Head Coach Charley Crowley of Columbia sent his reserves through a twenty-minute scrimmage against the junior varsity at Baker Field yesterday while the first team was having a light workout in fundamentals for tomorrow's game with Wesleyan. Coach Crowley has been using the substitutes in scrimmage all week so that they will gain needed experience for actual games.

Kumpf and Kaplan scored for the reserves, Kumpf going over the line from the two-yard mark and Kaplan following with a four-yard line plunge. The reserve team line was composed of members of Team C, with the second team men in the backfield.

Fordham Emphasizes Pass.

Another long drill which lasted until dark was the order of the day for the Fordham football team yesterday at Fordham Field. The practice was practically the final one in the Maroon's preparation for the Manhattan game tomorrow and the tilt with Boston College at Boston Tuesday. The team will have a light session today, consisting of work in the formation on the kick-off and a signal drill.

Forward passing, the phase of the game which has been impressed on the players since they started training early in September, again formed the major portion of the workout. In dummy scrimmage the regular eleven executed more passes than it did running plays during the hour which the skirmish lasted. Following the dummy scrimmage the aerial game was again the keynote of the signal drill.

Manhattan Loses Four Regulars.

The Manhattan College eleven was rendered a sad blow yesterday when Trainer Jim Mumbie announced that four regulars, G. Smith, C. Smith, V. Draddy and C. Cronin, will not be able to face Fordham tomorrow.

Captain George Smith was kicked in the groin Tuesday and collapsed yesterday, after trying to fight off the pain. It is not likely that he will be able to play again this year, which is his last. His brother, Charlie, a freshman, earned a halfback assignment, but numerous bruises and a broken rib prevented his appearance yesterday. Draddy has a bad shoulder and was sent to a specialist last night, while Cronin, left guard, badly battered at Springfield, wrenched an ankle and gave way to Larry McManus.

St. John's in Final Drill.

Coach Lynch yesterday sent the entire St. John's squad through its final workout prior to the Mount St. Mary's game tomorrow. Most of the afternoon was devoted to running down punts and gathering in forwards, after which the first and second teams engaged in a light scrimmage.

FORT HAMILTON FOUR WINS.

The line-up:

FRANKLIN BEATS ESTRIDGE.

Scores Victory in Bout at the 102d Medical Regiment Show.

Larry Estridge was easily defeated last night at the 102d Medical Regiment Armory by Benny Franklin of the home regiment. Franklin carried the attack to his opponent and won all the way. He weighed 157 as against 156 for Estridge, who represented the 369th Infantry.

In the semi-final, scheduled for six rounds, Frank Konchaina, 160½, of Fort Jay, was awarded a knockout victory over Teddy Grodin, 161, 27th Division Train. Grodin injured his ear drum in the first round and could not continue.

GENARO OUTPOINTS LEWIS.

But Is Hard Pressed in Bout in West New York Ring.

Frankie Genaro, former flyweight champion, outpointed Mickey Lewis of West New York in a sizzling ten-round bout at West New York last night, according to newspaper men at the ringside, The Associated Press reports.

It required all of Genaro's famous cleverness to stave off the bulldog rushes of his opponent. Genaro scored a knockdown in the seventh round. He weighed 118 pounds to 119 for Lewis.

Al Marsee of Jersey City gave Ray Davis of New York a terrific beating in the semi-final. Each weighed 126 pounds.

Milligan Stops Ted Moore, Keeps Middleweight Crown

REISELT AND HOPPE TITLE MATCH BARRED

Officials Ruled Layton Eligible Three-Cushion Challenger—Hoppe to Face Copulos.

Otto Reiselt, holder of the world's three-cushion title, will not be able to put his title at stake in the coming match with Willie Hoppe, it was officially ruled yesterday. It also was disclosed that the eligible challenger for the title, in the event there is no league play this season, is Johnny Layton of Minneapolis, who finished second to Reiselt in the league last season. The ruling was made by the officials of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company in the Chicago office, the headquarters of the company.

The letter bearing on the decision, which the Brunswick officials forwarded to Reiselt in Philadelphia, follows:

"We are enclosing an article from THE NEW YORK TIMES of Saturday, Oct. 2, referring to your having agreed to play a match game with Willie Hoppe for the national championship.

"There must be some misunderstanding regarding this, as it is understood and agreed that in the event you are to defend your championship in challenge match games that John Layton, who finished second, is to be the first challenger, and all other players who competed in the National Championship Three-Cushion League are entitled to a chance before accepting a challenge from an outside player or a player that did not participate in last season's Three-Cushion Billiard League."

The contract which Reiselt signed with the Brunswick officials in Chicago, under date of April 1, 1926, follows:

"I hand you herewith two copies of an agreement submitted through Secretary John E. Reanion of the National Championship Three-Cushion League and which I am signing with an understanding that I will not be called on to defend the championship in a challenge match, or at least not before Feb. 1, 1927."

Hoppe and Reiselt had agreed to meet in a 600-point match, which was scheduled to be played the third or fourth week in November. Yesterday it was learned that the match would not be played until January, or until after Hoppe's challenge match for the world's 18.2 balkline title, which now most likely will be played in December.

In its stead Charles S. Kline of the Strand Academy has arranged for Gus Copulos of Detroit to meet Hoppe next month in a 600-point test. Copulos is one of the few three-cushion stars who has beaten Hoppe in match play, accomplishing the feat in Detroit a year ago.

Hoppe will renew his three-cushion grind when he meets Andrew St. Jean in a return handicap match at the Strand, opening Monday afternoon. Hoppe will play for 600 points, against 480 for St. Jean, in twelve blocks of 50 points to 40 each. Hoppe and St. Jean are scheduled to dohier at the Strand today.

ACKERMAN BEATS KLAR.

Triumphs, 40 to 39, in Eastern States 3-Cushion Match.

Sam Ackerman defeated Louis Klar, 40 to 39, in an Eastern States three-cushion match last night at Kreuter's Billiard Academy. The match required 107 innings and more than three hours to play and was always close. Each player made a high run of 4. Joseph Cosgrove and George La Rue will meet in tonight's match.

DON'T FORGET TO REGISTER THIS WEEK

There will be registration in New York City every day this week. The registration places will be open from 8 to 10:30 P. M. the first five days of the week and from 7 A. M. to 10 P. M. on Saturday.

HANSEN AND DIENER AT GARDEN TONIGHT

Heavyweights Box in First of Series Planned by Rickard to Find Tunney Opponent.

JIMMY DELANEY IN DEBUT

Engages Alex Rely in Semi-Final—Monte Munn Will Face Archie Skinner in Six-Rounder.

The first of the series of heavyweight bouts which Tex Rickard plans to stage throughout the Winter season in the hope of bringing forth a new challenger for the world's championship will be held in Madison Square Garden tonight with Knute Hansen, Danish fighter, and Franz Diener of Germany, meeting in the feature event of ten rounds.

Despite the fact that Diener lost a decision to Bud Gorman in his recent American debut, the German will enter the ring at even money in the betting, which has been unusually lively for a bout which involves no title. Both Diener and Hansen have struck a popular chord among their countrymen and neither will be lacking for supporters. In his bout with Gorman, Diener shaped up as a boxer of possibilities, lacking only in experience to make himself a formidable opponent for any of the big fellows now struggling to get into the front rank among the heavies.

The ten-round semi-final, also promises to provide an interesting encounter when Jimmy Delaney of St. Paul, faces Alex Rely, South American heavyweight. This will be Delaney's first appearance in the Garden and Rely, a rugged and aggressive fighter ought to give him plenty of opportunity to show what he can do.

In the first of the three ten-rounders, Jack DeMave will make a return to local rings by talking on Young Bob Fitzsimmons. DeMave, who recently underwent an operation on his nose, in reported completely recovered and ready to continue with his campaign. DeMave is anxious for a meeting with Harry Persson, the Swedish heavyweight, and he intends to make an earnest bid for the match if he triumphs tonight.

Another bout on the card which has aroused considerable interest is a special six-rounder in which Monte Munn, the giant Nebraskan, who is being groomed by Dan Hickey, will make his appearance. Munn's opponent will be Archie Skinner of Boston, named as substitute for Jimmy Murphy when the latter was forced to withdraw because of an injured thumb.

In the opening preliminary, Henry Lamar of Washington will make his professional debut against Tom Wickman, a local heavyweight. Lamar is the former National A. A. U. light-heavyweight champion.

An interesting card of bouts has been arranged for the New Walker A. C. show tomorrow night with Vincent Sanchez, crack National Guard boxer, and Eddie Anderson of Wyoming down for the feature ten-round bout. Johnny Rocco, the New Rochelle lightweight, will oppose Harry Gabe of the east side, and in the first ten Bruce Flowers, negro lightweight, will tackle Andy "Red Ike" Tucker.

Entry blanks were distributed yesterday for an amateur boxing tournament to be held under the auspices of the New York A. C. The preliminary rounds are to be held on Oct. 22 and the finals will be decided on Oct. 25.

DESSIMEY WINS BOUT IN GARDEN TOURNEY

Takes Heavyweight Honors in Met. A. A. U. Finals Before Crowd of 4,000.

Marcel Dessimey of the Holy Name Club carried off the honors in the heavyweight division of the two-night amateur boxing tournament which came to a close in Madison Square Garden last night. Before a crowd of more than 4,000, Dessimey won the decision in the final bout of his class from J. Consiglia, who competed unattached, in three rounds.

Others to score in the finals were H. Liebenson of the Glencoe A. C. in the 112-pound class; Canada Lee, Salem-Crescent A. C., in the 135-pound class and T. Moses, Astoria, K. of C., who triumphed among the 147-pounders.

The summaries:

112-Pound Class.

MISS COLLETT WINS AND REACHES FINAL

Takes Last 3 Holes to Subdue Miss Meehan, 3 and 1, in Berthellyn Cup Play.

MISS WILSON HER NEXT FOE

Chicago Golfer Who Put Her Out of National Tourney Conquers Miss Quier, 3 and 2.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7.—Miss Glenna Collett of Providence, former national champion, who failed to make the grade in the recent United States tournament here, reached the final round today in the Berthellyn Cup tournament at Huntingdon Valley, along with Miss Virginia Wilson, 20-year-old Chicago player.

Just last week at Merion Miss Wilson eliminated Miss Collett. They earned the right to battle again by defeating the Philadelphia girls in the semi-finals today.

Miss Collett disposed of Miss Helen Meehan of Cedarbrook, 3 and 1, after trailing the greater part of the match, and Miss Wilson forced out Miss Edith Quier of Huntingdon Valley, who yesterday defeated Mrs. G. Henry Stetson, new national champion. The score was 3 and 2.

Miss Collett played ragged golf against Miss Meehan and was two down at the turn. She did not succeed in squaring the match until the eleventh and was still even as late as the fourteenth hole. She played the last three in one under women's par and won them all.

The cards:

Out—
Miss Collett	5	5	7	6	5	5	4	4	5—46
Miss Meehan	5	5	8	6	5	5	4	3	5—42
In—
Miss Collett	4	3	6	4	4	4	5	4
Miss Meehan	6	5	6	6	3	6	6	5

Miss Wilson swept into an early lead against Miss Quier, last year's winner of the tournament, winning five of the first six holes. After the eleventh, the Chicago girl was four up, but Miss Quier made a determined rally and the match was in doubt until the end.

The cards:

Out—
Miss Wilson	4	6	5	6	5	4	6	4	6—46
Miss Quier	5	6	6	7	6	5	5	4	5—49
In—
Miss Wilson	4	4	7	5	4	5	5
Miss Quier	5	4	6	5	3	5	6

In the semi-final of the second sixteen Miss Helen Payson of Portland, Me., and Miss Ruth Raymond of Baton Rouge, La., were victorious. Miss Payson defeated Mrs. Lee Mida of Chicago, 6 and 4, while Miss Raymond disposed of Mrs. H. A. Pardue, Chicago, 3 and 2.

BENNETT'S 79 TOPS QUALIFIERS AT LIDO

St. Albans Player Leads Kopf and Hale by 5 Strokes on Long Beach Links.

Special to The New York Times.

LON BEACH, L. I., Oct. 7.—The last golf tournament of the local season, the invitation event of the Lido Country Club, drew a small field here today, less than fifty turning out for the qualifying round, with none of the district's stars on hand.

As a direct result of the absence of low handicap players the scores were high, a 79 taking the medal. R. H. Bennett, a St. Albans player, had that and it put his five shots ahead of any once else in the field. His nearest rivals for the honor of leading the procession were I. B. Kopf, a St. Albans teammate, and G. E. Hale of Laurelton.

It was Bennett's incoming nine that enabled him to win the medal, for he was out in 41, the same figure that Hale had. The latter required 43 to come home, while Bennett came in in 38.

Bennett's card:

MORRISON SCORES DOUBLE

Finishes First in 2:06 and 2:09 Pacing Events—Walter Cox Out With Broken Leg.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 7 (AP).—The May Day Consolation $2,000 stake for two-year-old trotters was the monetary feature and also the most interesting race decided at the Grand Circuit races here today. It was won by Fred F. Field's bay filly Isola's Worthy, with Harry Stokes substituting for her regular driver, Ben White, who was injured yesterday.

A. T. Morrison of Sandusky, Ohio, carried of the driving honors of the day, securing first money in the 2:06 and 2:09 pacing events. Jean Axworthy won the 2:11 trot, making her a double winner at this meeting.

In winning the May Day Consolation Isola's Worthy made the event a 100 per cent. victory for the White stable, it having won the main division yesterday with Ruth M. Chenault. Harry Stokes, champion catch driver of the Grand Circuit, had the mount. Tomorrow is the closing day of the meet here.

Driver Walter M. Cox received a broken leg in yesterday's spill with Ben White, it was discovered on examination at the hospital.

CORNELL OFFICERS POLO VICTORS, 17-6

SMITH LEADS WINNERS

His Smashing Hits and Brilliant Dashes by Cutler Feature Clash in Second Corps Area Play.

The Cornell Army Officers eliminated the 105th Field Artillery in the fourth game of the Second Corps Area polo tourney at Governors Island yesterday by 17 to 6. The Cornell quartet showed even better form than the score indicates. It gave a six-goal handicap to the guardsmen and the artillerymen were unable to add to this margin.

The smashing hits of Lieutenant J. A. Smith featured the Cornell play. For the 105th quartet, Lieutenant Cutler, the No. 3 man, starred. But even his brilliant attempts to drive the ball between the goalposts was of no avail. So close was the Cornell guarding that even when Cutler brought the ball within scoring distance, he could not hit it between the uprights.

Cornell trailed until the third chukker and then stepped out and evened the count. Then in the last half of the game the victors chased the ball between the posts eleven times.

GRACE MARES TAKE FIRST TWO PLACES

Golden Dawn Wins Blue With Maureen Next in Piping Rock Opening Event.

POLAR BEAR BEST JUMPER

8-Year-Old Gelding Captures Honors for Burton, While Mrs. Davis's Munitions Also Scores.

Special to The New York Times.

LOCUST VALLEY, L. I., Oct. 7.—The twenty-fourth Piping Rock Horse Show got under way here today with a record-breaking entry and an opening attendance that has seldom been equaled in recent years of the exhibition. More than eight hundred entries have been received, which the superintendent of the show announced as more than double the 1925 entry.

Several hundred members of the Long Island hunt and riding clubs were in attendance, although only three classes were contested. The cold weather kept the throng in motion throughout the afternoon, but despite this fact scores of luncheon parties are scheduled for tomorrow, when the show swings into full stride with a full day of competition, beginning at 9 A. M. and continuing till 5 P. M. Saturday the judging will begin at 9 A. M. again and conclude with the championships at 5:10 P. M.

W. R. Grace, Van Duzer Burton and Mrs. Albert J. Davis were the possessors of blue ribbons tonight as the result of victories for their horses in the three classes shown. Grace won the opening class of the show, which began promptly at 2:30 P. M. His chestnut mare Golden Dawn was adjudged best in a class for hunter brood mares. His Maureen took second prize. They were shown in hand and judged on conformation and quality. Fletcher Harper and Archibald Randolph were the judges.

Polar Bear, an eight-year-old white gelding, won the blue ribbon for Burton in a jumping class that included sixty head. Polar Bear performed admirably and was well shown. The quality of the class was very high and several of the horses performed faultlessly. A second trial was necessary to decide the winner. The same judges officiated for this event.

The victory of Munitions, a bay gelding, the property of Mrs. Davis, in the class for green or qualified hunters, was considered by many the feature of the afternoon.

Belgrade Claiming Stakes Won by Endor

ENDOR CAPTURES BELGRADE STAKES

Takes Jamaica Feature, Which Is Marred by Scratching of Five Entries.

FATOR SCORES 3 VICTORIES

Wins on Endor, Turf Light and Wee Burn and Gets a Place in Five Starts.

By HENRY R. ILSLEY.

Scratches robbed the Belgrade Claiming Stakes at six furlongs, the featured number of an ordinary card at Jamaica yesterday afternoon, of the greater part of its interest. The pencil eliminated five of the over-night entry, leaving only four in the parade. G. C. Winfrey's Endor was the public choice, heavily played and quoted at 7 to 10 at post time, and he won, ridden out, by a length. Fator had the mount and the three-year-old son of Vindex and Flying Whisk ran in 1:15 2-5 under 111 pounds and over a muddy track.

Laverne Fator again returned to his best form and put over three winners and one second in five mounts. In addition to his fine ride to win the stake, he carried off first money in the Tammany Highweight Handicap on James Butler's Turf Light. His other victory was on William Ziegler Jr.'s, Wee Burn in the Claremont Purse.

The track was very slow in recovering from Wednesday morning's rain and water stood in puddles during the first race and the course was muddy all afternoon. Although scratches were not as numerous as on the previous day, sixteen were eliminated. Half the races on the program went to the favorites.

Endor Is Ridden Hard.

With Nida, Powhatan, Laura Dianti and others eliminated from the Belgrade Claiming Stakes, Endor looked the best of the remaining four, although there was considerable interest in the P. S. P. Randolph entry of Bucky Harris and Nero, which was held at 6 to 5. The four made a good race of it down the back, with Endor making most of the pace. W. C. Clancy's Summer Time was with the leader for a piece, finding the pace too hot and dropping far out of the contention at the end.

Endor was hard ridden all the way to hold his position. Bucky Harris came very wide on the turn for home and lost a lot of ground. He came fast in the last furlong, but Endor, under a hard finish, lasted to gain the money by a length. The others were far out of it, Nero taking third money.

The Tammany Highweight Handicap was more interesting as a contest than the stake event, although scratches cut the number of the starters from twelve to seven, the Rancocas Stable declining, among others, with Nida and Sabine. It was a race for all ages at six furlongs and Frank Brown's four-year-old Titan carried top weight of 129 pounds.

The winner was James Butler's three-year-old filly Turf Light, which was coupled with the same stable's two-year-old Charade as the public choice at 13 to 5. Fator was up on the winner, which carried 114 pounds and earned $1,035 for his owner. Charade, under 112 pounds, had a lot of early foot and led the field, but the filly tired at the end and was just nosed out of third money.

Gets up in Last Jump.

Fator followed the early pace and just got his mount up in the final jump to nose out N. S. Hurd's Sandhills. The result might have been different had not Walter J. Salmon's Ursa Major bolted to the outside with Maiben on the turn for home. At that he came like a flash in the stretch drive, finishing on the inner rail and at such a speed that many in the stands thought that he had won.

Clinton H. Milton's Flora M., a homebred daughter of Huon and Kolinsky, was a red-hot tip to win the first division of the claiming race for maiden two-year-olds at five and a half furlongs, and a whole lot fell for it; so much so that her price was battered down from 5 to 2 to 4 to 5. There were other tips floating about, the most notable of these being that on Marshall Field's High Time colt Cornbelt, which was dropped in among the platers for the first time. While he opened at 6 to 5, he went to 2 to 1 before the close. William Hogan's Simon's Kiss was again heavily played, backed from 12 to 1 to 4 to 1, while J. A. Coburn's First Dance was forced from 20 to 1 to 12 to 1.

All of these figured in the contention at one time. Dwyer's Way made an early bid, but was soon lost in the shuffle and Simon's Kiss led the field of a dozen around the turn. Thurber on Cornbelt was in close quarters on the back, came around his field and was forced to come a trifle wide. He managed to squeeze through, however, and in the stretch drive took the measure of Simon's Kiss, winning by his own length, with First Dance third and Flora M. fourth. Six claims were made for the winner, which went to R. O. Egan for $3,300.

BIG BLAZE IS FIRST IN LAUREL FEATURE

BUDDY BAUER ALSO VICTOR

Idle Hour Stock Farm's Juvenile Captures the Tyrone Purse—Pays $13.40 in the Mutuels.

Special to The New York Times.

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 7.—Under the clever handling of Earl Sande the Glen Riddle Farm's Big Blaze, the odds-on favorite, won the Cumberland Purse, the featured number on the card here today. McAuliffe and Festival forced the pace over the first part of the one mile and a sixteenth journey, with Big Blaze being held under slight restraint by Sande. When ready Sande sent his mount to the front, and, holding off Ingrid's challenge in the last eighth, won by a length. Ingrid was second, a length in front of Harry Baker.

The Idle Hour Stock Farm's Buddy Bauer captured the Tyrone Purse, the secondary feature. Ten juveniles faced the starter for the dash of five and a half furlongs. Caroler and False Pride were the first and second choices, respectively, Buddy Bauer being third in demand among the talent. The race resulted in an easy victory by nearly four lengths for the son of North Star III and Bed of Roses, the Seagram Stable's Tetra Glass being second, a head in front of Ever More. Buddy Bauer paid $13.40 in the mutuels.

MR. MILLS ON STATE FINANCE.

Representative MILLS has a good head for figures. The question is whether his grasp of facts is as good. It is easy for him to show that the issue of $100,000,000 in bonds by the State will cost, in the end, when interest and amortization are reckoned in, $150,000,000. There is nothing unusual in that. It is the way of all public loans. But when Mr. MILLS implies that $50,000,000 could have been saved by the application of the principle of paying as you go, he ought to explain how it would have been possible to provide the $100,000,000 out of current revenues, without borrowing. Any Governor or Legislature undertaking to do that would speedily have had to "go," without being paid in anything except political curses.

Another point in the financial speeches of Representative MILLS is left obscure by him. He declared again yesterday: "A vote for SMITH is a vote" to continue borrowing. A vote for "me is a vote to pay as you go." But does he mean the people to understand that there is any way of recalling the bond issues already approved by the voters? In the matter of the liquor referendum, Mr. MILLS has pledged himself to be guided by the decision of the voters next November. Does not that hold also for the bond issues which the electors of New York have already approved? If Mr. MILLS knows of any way in which the popular will as thus expressed can be reversed, he ought to say so. If not, he should not hold out the hope that his Administration, if he should be elected Governor, would really be able to keep his promise of paying as it goes.

PRIMARY OR CONVENTION.

This year's scandals in party primaries have given fresh impetus to the discussion of their merits and demerits as compared with the convention system. Most disputants take strong ground on one side or the other. If they still believe in the direct primary, they paint the evils of the convention in the blackest colors. On the other hand, advocates of a return to the convention can see nothing whatever that is good in the direct primary. But something like a judicial attitude on the whole subject is maintained by Mr. MAYO FESSLER of the Citizens' League of Cleveland in his article in The National Municipal Review for September.

He admits that in theory both the convention and the primary, in their original conception, were sound and democratic. But he argues that in actual practice both have become subject to great abuses and turned out to be useful tools in the hands of unscrupulous party managers. Particularly severe is his arraignment of the actual working of the direct primary in the matter of expense, involving as this does a great advantage for candidates who are rich or who have rich friends, and particularly in the matter of breaking down party responsibility. The direct primary has, in fact, shown itself to be in practice the great dissolvent of party discipline. It stands today as the chief obstacle in the way of efficient government by party. The tale has been told so plainly in Congress during the past four years as to convey its moral to the humblest intelligence.

After fully and fairly stating the case, Mr. FESSLER's summing up is a little unexpected. In answer to the question which is to be preferred, the primary or the convention, his reply is, "Both." What he means is that he would like to combine the two, eliminating, so far as possible, the bad elements of either, and preserving, as the phrase is, the best features of both. He would have a party convention before the party primary. Then if the nominations made by the delegate convention were not satisfactory, an opposition ticket could be run in the primary. It may be said that this resembles in some respects the original plan for party primaries urged for New York by Mr. HUGHES when he was Governor. The present method in this State is not entirely unlike that proposed by Mr. FESSLER. But such a mixture has meant no great improvement, and does not seem to contain real promise for the future. Where bosses are really in control they can manipulate a primary as well as a convention, or a combination of the two.

The truth of experience is that no piece of mere political machinery will automatically work to bring about the reforms expected from it. The honest friends of the direct primary make no concealment of their disappointment and chagrin at the way in which it has worked more badly from year to year. The fact is that any device got up by the non-political class is certain to be skillfully availed of by the professional politicians. They are on the job year in and year out. Reformers are too apt to take long vacations. What the ordinary citizen, who does not make politics his trade, hopes for from the party managers is the selection of fit and respectable candidates. The system which will do this best is the best for him. And it would not be hard to extract from confessions of even the champions of the direct primary the fact that the convention system was, on the whole, superior in the quality of its nominations, and especially in its fixing of party responsibility and strengthening party discipline.

K. K. K. KAPUTT.

Imperial Wizard HIRAM EVANS trembles in his capital, Georgia, the seat and heart of his empire, has revolted. Every candidate for whom the white sheet was unfurled has been beaten—Commissioner of Agriculture, Judge of the Supreme Court, Senator and Governor. Where the holy fire burned brightest a few years ago are ashes and a lingering malodor. The capital will have to be removed to Alabama. There the Klan named or is said to have named the Democratic candidate for Senator and for Governor, though there was a division between the national and State order on the former, and imperial wizardry lost, as usual. One sees little but division and disaster. Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana kicked the Klan in the head.

The Democrats, dishonored by their complicity in some States with these bigots, are luckier than the Republicans. The former have largely repented. The latter are still in the bond of iniquity in a number of States. In Oklahoma Senator HARREL is hampered in his campaign for re-election by the support of the Klan. Mr. STEIWER, the regular Republican nominee for Senator from Oregon, is blessed with the friendship of the Klan. So is our velvet-voiced friend, Senator WILLIS of Ohio. But the national organization is in a state of disruption. State branches cry for autonomy. Naturally they want to keep the fees at home. A new variety of the old plant has appeared called the Minute Men. Senator MEANS of Colorado was beaten as a Ku Kluxer.

While one cannot know what is under the cards, and the summary processes of simplification are always doubtful, it is clear that just as the Ku Klux used to "claim everything," now, generally speaking, if you can "brand" your opponent with the three mystic letters, the chances are that he will "lose everything." This must be a comforting reflection for several Republican opportunists. In Indiana there has been the devil's own row in the Klan for some time; a wide rebellion against the Imperial Wizard; squabbles about Federal patronage, wrath against the Republican political partners in the good work. Grand Dragon STEPHENSON, once a sort of Republican overboss, is in jail. Certain Republican editors and members of the Legislature are trying to have the corruption which they believe existed under his rule investigated.

Their efforts may be burked, but what a pleasant situation for the Republicans! Senator ROBINSON is said to be a member of the Klan. Senator WATSON has at least complied with it. It will be remembered that he was the Klan's candidate for Vice President—or should we say, in the hieratic language, Imperial Klalliff? Governor "ED" JACKSON was "put over" by the Klan. The Indiana Democrats have the luck to be on the side of intelligence at present. Certain Republican politicians in Indiana and elsewhere may have to learn by experience the folly of yielding to a temporary "craze" for the sake of the votes in it. With the immediate political results we needn't be concerned. Both parties are tarred with the same stick. Nor should there be any jubilation over the apparent decay of the brotherhood. Probably the real cause of dissension is in the disposal of the receipts.

The K. K. K. will have, has already, successors. There will always be fanatics and fools, crooks to exploit them, politicians eager to use them; and when we see tolerance prevalent in the United States, we shall yank our ascension robe out of the closet. As true believers in "the Nordics"—if we could find out what "a Nordic" is—we are constantly pained by the knowledge that the latest consummate flower of bigotry blooms on "the old American stock." Where is the "Americanization" brigade?

"STABILIZING" BELGIAN CURRENCY.

That Belgium will lead the way in stabilizing, on a new gold parity, the European currencies still in a state of fluctuating value appears to be indicated by the announcements from Brussels. Belgium has, indeed, a particular motive for fixing an early date for this change, because her previous effort in that direction broke down disastrously. Between last October and the middle of March the Belgian franc was held with little variation at a price slightly above 4½ cents, as against the old gold parity of 19 1-3. In March it was announced that arrangements for legal stabilization had been completed; the only unsettled questions were then supposed to be the exact rate at which the currency would be made exchangeable for gold and the date at which the convertibility would begin.

But the Finance Ministry had neglected to complete the necessary arrangements for loans on foreign markets. It had depended on general assurances, and when the foreign bankers laid down stipulations of what they considered indispensable preliminaries the Ministry found that compliance was impossible. Support of the franc was abandoned almost overnight; its value fell from 4½ cents on March 13 to 3⅝ at the end of the month and nearly to 2 cents in the middle of July.

The drastic step was then taken of conferring on the King a virtual financial dictatorship. The requisite reforms of home finance were then speedily introduced. They included the unusual expedient of surrendering the Belgian State railways to private control and requesting holders of the Government's 6,000,000,000 francs of unfunded obligations to exchange them for preferred shares of the company formed to operate the lines. In August it was announced that this conversion plan had succeeded, only 750,000,000 francs of the floating debt having by that time failed to assent to it. Following these measures for strengthening the Treasury position, the Belgian franc has subsequently risen, though as yet only to 2¾ cents. Negotiations for a foreign credit in England and America have been renewed, and formal announcement of another and better-guarded plan of stabilization is an early probability.

The Belgian Government is said already to have "sounded" France whether Belgium's resumption of gold payments, before France was ready to try the experiment for herself, would be taken in good part. The French Government is believed to have responded amicably; indeed, there would be certain distinct advantages to France in awaiting the outcome of Belgian stabilization. If the Brussels program were to achieve complete success, the prospect for effective support of a French stabilization plan would be brighter. No one can be sure how far the French "currency crisis" of last July may not have been aggravated purely by the break-down of Belgium's abortive effort in the Spring. But perhaps the most interesting aspect of the existing situation is the now prevalent belief that the time is ripe for effective solution of their depreciated currency problem by both France and Belgium. Yet it is less than three months ago that even conservative Paris bankers were beginning to believe that stabilization was no longer possible and that the franc would actually have to "follow the German mark."

THE UNITED STATES OF EUROPE.

At the concluding session of the Pan-European Congress at Vienna its organizer and chief propagandist, Count KOUDENHOVE-KALERGI, coupled a hope with a warning. A united Europe is bound to come, he said, but a long road remains to be traveled. The question arises whether the road is not in danger of being made longer by over-advertising the hope. Openly to preach the federation of the peoples of Europe is to irritate nationalist susceptibilities. It is too late to stigmatize as "Balkanization" what was hailed ten years ago as "self-determination." In Central and Eastern Europe there are new nations or aggrandized nations with a population of 75,000,000. They will not rise with enthusiasm to the prospect of merging into a United States of Europe the separate identity they have scarcely begun to taste. To these should be added Italy, which preaches louder than ever the gospel of "sacred egoism." Soviet Russia offers the remarkable spectacle of a would-be Communist and anti-nationalist experiment evolving into a nationally conscious State.

The Pan-European idea at Vienna may be compared with the League idea at Geneva. It is likely that among the framers of the Covenant of the League there was not absent the hope of a United States of Europe to come some day. But it is the virtue of the League that it found the formula for reconciling the facts of today with the possibility of promoting a distant ideal. If a federated Europe shall ultimately come out of Geneva, it will come not as the result of preachment but as the result of practice. The League is a device for reconciling nationality with world peace. In the course of time the nations cooperating for the maintenance of peace may be educated to the value of cooperation all along the line. But it is a merit of the League system that Poland, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Italy and the little fellows born out of the war are not thrown into a suspicious defensive by the fear that they are being enticed on the road toward national self-surrender.

Perhaps the best illustration of the difference between the Geneva idea and the Pan-Europe idea is found in the economic sphere. Excellent are the resolutions passed at the Vienna congress in favor of a European economic conference to deal with the present unhappy complex of tariff barriers and commercial rivalries. Yet at Geneva, too, the pressing need of supplementing political peace with economic peace has been recognized, and Geneva has debated the question of a European economic conference. But whereas Vienna emphasizes it as a step toward the realization of Pan-Europe, Geneva is content to stress the importance of economic peace for the interests of the nations as they are today. Poland or Czechoslovakia, invited to revise their tariffs for the sake of a future United States of Europe, will refuse. If it is pointed out to them that they are themselves the sufferers, they are likely to reply that they are willing to pay the price for their separate national existence. On the other hand, Poland or Czechoslovakia will listen more readily to the proposal of an economic conference that is only that. When in the course of years they find themselves enjoying the benefits of European economic unity they may be open to further suggestions.

STREETS AND PLAYGROUNDS.

A statement attributed to the Chairman of the Traffic Board, that about 700 special supervisors would have to be detailed by the Police Department if motor traffic is to be kept from passing through streets set aside for play, is not altogether conclusive. This might be the ideal method of enforcing the law. But there is no reason why removable barricades cannot be placed at each end of a play street. This, however, is but a detail in the much larger problem of providing playgrounds throughout the city. That the Board of Traffic, the Department of Parks, the Board of Education and other municipal bureaus, directly or indirectly concerned with the safety and welfare of the city's children, are fully aware of the needs there is no doubt. But they are handicapped by lack of funds. Even the various civic associations interested in playgrounds have not been able to command sufficient money to do all that they would like. Meanwhile, many streets have to be used as playgrounds, and it is necessary to see that the traffic regulations are enforced.

The playground question requires coordinating by some group such as the Regional Plan of New York, empowered to examine and make recommendations. A number of helpful plans have already been begun. Largely under private stimulus the use of back yards as block playgrounds has met with success in some of the more crowded districts. In a few cases roof playgrounds have also proved practicable. Last Summer through private funds many school playgrounds were made available. In Central Park the Heckscher playground has served many children. Recently Mayor WALKER expressed the hope that Welfare Island and the other islands in the East River might ultimately be used for recreation purposes. The Regional Plan has published a project for putting on Welfare Island alone twenty baseball diamonds, forty tennis courts, sixty handball courts, swimming pools, dance pavilions and other means of recreation.

That the city will ultimately have to resort to condemnation proceedings in order to obtain park space within Manhattan is the opinion of many students of the problem. The final solution will have to be designed on a broad scale to meet the needs of tomorrow as well as today. For the present, all available spaces for temporary playgrounds should be discovered and used. Most of them will probably have to be supported by private contributions. The sooner the city understands that these are but makeshifts, the sooner it will take the long view of the entire municipal recreation problem and lay out for New York's parks and playgrounds a program to be completed within a stated period of years.

TEACHING DEFECTIVE CHILDREN.

Typical of the desire for intimate understanding and close relationship between the various branches of education today is the Bulletin published monthly by the Training School at Vineland, N. J. Its purpose is to aid and encourage those whose minds have not developed normally. In its field, the publication brings together reports of work for defectives at this and other institutions, and provides a place for those who are interested to give their opinions, critical or laudatory.

The current number presents a variety of news and results indicative of the close cooperation between workers in this department of education. A study in the physiological maturity of feeble-minded girls is made by a scientific researcher. Changes in disciplinary methods in institutions for defectives are reported by the head of one of them. Instead of punishments for bad behavior, rewards for good behavior are held out. A pat on the back, above the waist, gets better results than several pats below.

Diplomatic methods rather than force are also recommended in a contributed article by an attendance officer of a Detroit public school. In that city there is a system of child accounting which sees that each child is in the proper school every day. Though there are but four recognized reasons for absence, the "hookey cop" finds as many situations to deal with as there are absent children. Of course, many of the cases are of boys and girls who belong in ungraded classes, in special groups for subnormal pupils, or in institutions. Where poverty has led parents to keep the child out of school to work, education must go behind the child into the home. Some parents have no idea of what a normal child should be able to do. They have no standards of comparison. One slow child was excluded from a special class as non-teachable. He was to be put into an institution. But his mother had thought he was getting along so well. JOHN was 10 years old, and "doing fine." He could almost write his name—all but the "J" and the "hn." For such children with such parents the truant officer is a blessing.

Even in comfortable or wealthy homes parents are sometimes ignorant or negligent. One father supplied his son with plenty of money and an automobile and departed with the mother for Bermuda. He said he was surprised to learn that his son had not been in school every day during their absence. The old methods of former days are useless in all such cases. "Hookey cops" these days must be masters of tact. They must be imaginative as well as accurate, adaptable as well as stable. And like all those whose work brings them into contact with the mentally defective, they must have an inexhaustible supply of sympathy and a genuine desire to help.

THE BASEBALL HERO.

When RUTH reported at the St. Petersburg training camp, an imaginative writer said that he had passed "the shadow line of his youth," was growing "old and fat," and that his best days were "behind him." Yet on Wednesday this Falstaffian ballplayer pounded out three home runs and personally conducted the Yankees to an overwhelming victory. RUTH was in a sentimental mood, and then he is always dangerous. On Tuesday by air mail he promised a desperately sick boy in New Jersey to "knock a homer for you." The child's hero made it three. That feat cheered the little fellow up.

The story helps to account for the popularity of RUTH among the boys of America. A champion prizefighter may capture the fancy of the grown-ups, but RUTH's subjects range from the articulate child in knickerbockers to his grandsire. Fill in with all ages, classes and conditions of males, add the ladies who need to have baseball explained to them, and one has an idea of the empire of human hearts swayed by this specialist in home runs. His great value to the baseball industry is the coordination of eye and muscles, enabling him to hit a ball so hard and far that thousands are attracted not so much to see the game won as to gaze upon RUTH in a supreme moment. But "walking" RUTH is the propensity, and even the custom, of pitchers. Such a handicap robs him of many hits, and the great man does more walking than any other player.

If there be any who protest the space given by the newspapers to RUTH's prowess, let them consider how wholesome is the admiration he kindles. Every Summer day baseball is played in back lots, sand lots, cow pastures, parks and stadiums. It is a clean and manly sport. The ambition of every player from a ragamuffin to a leaguer is to feel the thrill of hitting a home run. Grown men look back with regret to the blissful day when they smashed a ball clear over the fielders' heads with the bases full. If verse is immortal in the United States, the claim of "Casey at the Bat" must be given consideration. So when a man arises who can make three home runs in a world's series game, he wears the laurel amid the deafening plaudits of the American nation.

Your champion boxer has his train of followers, and he can draw crowds and heap dollars on dollars, but prizefighting is not the national game. No one is really proud of it. But baseball is universal. Its influence is beneficent. It makes sound and vigorous men. To make a hero out of a player like RUTH is well worth while.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

As Many Votes by Another Name.

No politician will ever sneeringly ask the question "What's in a name?" He knows that in politics names sometimes count for everything. This is doubtless the reason why Mr. MORRIS, Chairman of the State Republican Committee, has filed with the Secretary of State at Albany a strong protest against allowing the Republican opponent of Senator WADSWORTH to have his name placed on the ballot under the designation "Independent Republican."

Chairman MORRIS asserts that he has no desire to keep Mr. CHESTMAN's name off the ballot entirely. He merely insists that it must not be there under false colors. He complains that what is contemplated is a "wrongful use of the name of the Republican Party." Then, with an admission which might seem strange coming from the "party of intelligence," he points out that some innocent Republican voters might vote for Mr. CHESTMAN, if he was allowed to call himself an Independent Republican, thinking that he was in reality the regular party candidate.

What the legal merits of the case may be, it is not for a layman to say. But there is no denying the fact that Mr. CHESTMAN has long been a Republican and that he is now running independently for United States Senator. The proposed description of his candidacy fits the facts precisely. Nor is it probable that up-State Republicans will be deterred from voting for him no matter what designation may go with his name on the ballot. If Chairman MORRIS could have his way and compel Mr. CHESTMAN to be indicated as a "Fanatic Dry" or a "Kicker," they would vote for him just the same. They are not thinking about names so much as Chairman MORRIS appears to be, but rather more about things.

Much Older Than Nineveh and Tyre.

Magnificent work is being done by the spade-wielders in the Desert of Gobi, along the Nile, along the Euphrates, at Shechem, at Corinth, in Alaska and in Yucatan. But these specialists have still far to go in stripping off the buried strata of human history before they can even approach the record established in a cognate field. Striking achievements of research continue to be reported by excavators concentrating on the subject of the Young Generation and the Old.

In no other field is so much Old Stuff being brought to the surface, sorted, distributed and released for the Monday morning papers. The Young Generation is fast going to the devil by way of the gin bottle and the automobile. Per contra, the Young Generation is franker, manlier, more cleanly-minded than it ever has been. The Old Generation is undermining the future by abdicating its authority over the Young. Yet the Old Generation is building a solid future by learning to live in intelligent sympathy with the ideas of the Young.

These vital truths formed the substance of animated conversation in Neanderthal and Cro-Magnon circles 100,000 years ago, and will doubtless come up for further consideration 100,000 years hence. It is Old Stuff, but with lots of life still in it.

Why Not Help the Work of These Inspectors?

If the Merchants' Association succeeds in persuading the Controller General of the Treasury to restore the ticker service by which the customs inspectors were kept in touch with the movement up the harbor of incoming steamships, it will have performed a service for the Federal Government as well as for the shipping companies and passengers.

When the Controller General discovered, last Summer, that this service by a commercial company was not authorized by statute, he summarily cut it off by withholding money to pay for it. His action, although supported by sufficient technical reasons, was assailed at the time as an expensive form of economy, inasmuch as the service rendered by the agency in reporting the whereabouts of ships could be duplicated by the Customs Service only at a much greater cost. Furthermore, the inconvenience which resulted from cutting off this system of information imposed unnecessary hardships on the force of the Customs Service and added to the confusion attending the landing of passengers.

Owing to the uniform courtesy of the customs inspectors, and to the irregular hours which many of them are forced to keep, the public has long felt that they deserve such help as the Government can give. When, therefore, the "watchdog of the Treasury" deprived them of the ship news service, criticism was widespread. By the same token there will be general praise for all who contribute to rectify this act, which seems to have been prompted by an inadequate understanding of all the elements in the situation.

Bootlegging Lobsters Should Be Stopped.

Baby lobsters, undersized, are sufficiently tasty to delight even a jaded palate. But the law has wisely decreed that none less than four and a half inches in length—it used to be six inches "down East"—may be taken or sold, under penalty of a $20 fine each. Hence for bringing in twenty dozen undersized lobsters a gentleman from Jersey has just been fined $4,800.

The interesting point is that the fine was assessed against the man who was delivering them from the fishermen to a restaurant. By bringing out sharply to all who traffic in undersized lobsters the risk attendant on the mere possession of them, an effective check is placed on the activity of lobster bootlegging fishermen. When there is no demand for their catch, and when, moreover, it is clear that to take them is an expensive business, they will be more ready to throw them back when they find them in the traps.

The enormous demand for lobsters is largely responsible for their increasing scarcity along our coasts. For many years Federal and State agents have been fighting the taking of undersized lobsters. It is attacking the source of supply. It is not unlike stripping a peach tree of its blossoms and still expecting to have a large crop. Fortunately, in this Jersey incident the lobsters were returned to the water. Some of them may not survive the exposure to the air, but so hardy are they that the majority will live—at least until they fall into another trap.

A Question of Authority.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Which would you consider the more reliable, Dr. Raymond Pearl of Johns Hopkins University, who says "Moderate drinkers outlast total abstainers," or the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, which says "A total abstainer is by far a better risk than a moderate drinker"? H. P.

SENATORS AND THE DEBT.

It Is Suggested That Those Who Talk of Payment Study the Matter.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If we eliminate from the recently published discussion of the debt question all that which has to do with the writer's or speaker's prejudices on the subject, we will be eliminating 90 per cent. of what has been spoken or written, and the remaining 10 per cent. might possibly be worth reading or listening to. When as keen and qualified an observer as Frank H. Simonds states that the debts cannot and will not be paid, it is not particularly important to hear that Senator X Y Z is "in favor" of their being paid—unless, of course, the Senator would like to be appointed a committee of one to go over and collect.

It is time that our Senators stopped airing their views on the moral and legal attitude of the debts and devoted some time to considering the obstacles which are encountered when international payments are attempted on such a vast scale. Certainly the allied debts to the United States rest on no more solid moral or legal foundation than the reparations which Germany owes to the Allies. Yet the Allies have found, through bitter experience on both sides, that it was the height of folly to demand sums which could never be paid. We, too, are going to have to learn the same lesson. It is rather remarkable that we contributed the sound economic reasoning of the Dawes plan to the reparations problem of the Allies, yet cannot apply the same common sense methods in considering the amounts and the ways and means by which our late Allies shall pay us. Probably it is the old story that it is a great deal easier to give advice than to take it.

It seems to me that there is one vital point in regard to our "loans" to the Allies that has so far escaped attention. This is the fact that the money was never actually loaned. The amounts advanced by this country were simply placed to the credit of the Allies for the purchase of supplies in this country. Why, then, should not these debts be liquidated in the same way they were contracted, by the establishment of credits in Britain, France and Italy for the purchase of British, French and Italian goods?

This is the same brand of sound reasoning that we recommended to the Allies; and according to The Literary Digest over half of the German payments, under the Dawes plan, last year were made in goods. This is, of course, the only sound method of transferring wealth as distinguished from money across national boundaries.

Our Senators have fallen into the commonest error of the layman in economics, confusing money with wealth. Once put the debts on the basis of whether we wish the Allies to send us a vast amount of concrete wealth in the tangible form of goods and services and we see how little we need or would profit by such payments. We must rid ourselves of the idea that it is somehow very profitable to this country to have vast sums owing to it in money which can never increase our real wealth.

As The Chicago Journal of Commerce puts it, the little boy who wanted to eat his cake and have it too was just as practical an economist as the people who expect this country in some miraculous way to increase its wealth by continually adding to its foreign credits in money, but never accepting foreign goods in payment.

An Armistice Day Observance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We put out our flags on Armistice Day and decorate the graves of those who made the supreme sacrifice. Would it not be most fitting if we all wore our stars on our coats one day in the year—Armistice Day?

F. E. COOK.

Brooklyn, Oct. 2, 1926.

KIN.

And now that you've traveled, my bonny, tall lad,
'Tis right you should tell what adventures you've had.

I followed a road that went uphill and down,
Past meadow and wildwood, through city and town.

The people who live in that faraway land,
Do they keep for the stranger a welcoming hand?

They're friendly, as travelers freely agree,
But rare was the greeting my kinsfolk gave me!

The cities you saw, were they spacious and high?
The streets, were they broad? Did their towers touch the sky?

Oh, yes, but the tower that seemed grandest to me
Was the soul of my kinsman, unsullied and free.

The orchards and vineyards, the grass and the flowers,
Were they greener and fresher and sweeter than ours?

The gardens and groves are the marvel of all,
But gay are my kinsman's dear children, and tall.

The blue lakes that lie between long hills, a-dream,
Were they what you loved, or the waterfall's gleam?

From lake and from glen I full lightly did part,
But not from youth in my kinswoman's heart!

You heard many tales of your forefathers brave,
The deeds that they did, and the lives that they gave?

I listened: but echoing still in my ear
My kinswoman's singing is all I can hear.

What gifts did they offer you? What do you bring
To make you remember your far journeying?

The prayers of my kinfolk, their laughter, their tears,
And the hope of a meeting to shine down the years!

COSTIGAN ATTACKS FLEXIBLE TARIFF

Commissioner Says He Found It Costing Us Money and Prestige in Europe.

TAKES ISSUE WITH MARVIN

Chairman Reported Little Dissatisfaction—Foreigners Suspicious of Use of Trade Secrets.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—The United States is losing both money and prestige in Europe by reason of the flexible tariff provisions of the Fordney-McCumber act, according to Edward P. Costigan, Democratic member of the Tariff Commission, who returned to Washington today from a tour of Europe, where he conferred with many officials and business leaders. Direct issue was taken by Mr. Costigan with Thomas O. Marvin, Chairman of the commission, who also visited Europe and declared on his return recently that there was little, if any, dissatisfaction abroad with the flexible tariff. Mr. Costigan visited France, Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Germany, Holland and England.

"A rising tide of criticism of America and of deepening hostility toward us" was noted by him. He declared abandoning of the flexible tariff is morally required, or correction of its "defects."

Mr. Costigan asserted that "the good faith of the United States is being challenged by foreign peoples whose friendship we certainly wish to cultivate and promote." Many European competitors are greatly dissatisfied because of intimate trade secrets that are given up, he said, even though the commission undertook to explain that none of these would leak out to interested parties. The Commissioner believed the problem was one that all American business men should study seriously.

Coincidental with the return of Commissioner Costigan, announcement was authorized by Senator Robinson, Democratic floor leader, that his committee, which has been investigating the Tariff Commission, would sit again in November and report to the Senate at the coming session. He thinks that as a result of this investigation the tariff will again come prominently forward for consideration in Congress. He looks for efforts next Winter to revise the tariff, but believes there can be no action until there is a swing-over in the political complexion of Congress.

"On my return after a journey abroad slightly longer than Chairman Marvin's," said Mr. Costigan, "and covering practically the same countries as those he visited, I have been surprised to hear that Mr. Marvin has issued a statement implying that there is little or no dissatisfaction in Europe with the United States Tariff Commission's activities under the flexible tariff provisions. Evidently my investigation abroad in the main brought me into contact with foreign business and political leaders of ability who felt more at liberty than those conferred with by Mr. Marvin to discuss, with the admirable frankness Americans prefer, the real attitude of their respective countries."

TO STUDY THOIRY PLAN.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 7.—The German Government purposes to create a special Parliamentary Commission for the study of the technical phases of the Thoiry agreement. So Foreign Minister Stresemann informed the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Reichstag this morning in the course of a detailed exposition of his compact with M. Briand.

The committee sat behind closed doors but it is understood that Dr. Stresemann pointed out the impossibility of reaching definitive conclusions on the financial features of the Franco-German rapprochement until the whole intricate problems had been thoroughly considered, not only by the French and German Government experts but by the Reparations authorities and the leading international, and particularly American, bankers.

The proposed Reichstag Commission, it was intimated, will be composed of Deputies specially qualified by reason of their technical knowledge to consult with and advise the Ministerial Committee already charged with carrying on the negotiations begun at Thoiry and consisting of the Ministers of Foreign Affairs, Finance and Commerce. The Foreign Affairs Committee will meet again toward the end of this month to receive a further report from the Government.

Dr. Stresemann also was interrogated about the killing of one German civilian and the wounding of two others by a French officer at Germersheim in the occupied Palatinate a fortnight ago. He indicated that the Reich would protest formally of the French Government as soon as the inquiry into the affair, now under way, was concluded.

The French proposal for coupling mobilization of the German Railway bonds contemplated at Thoiry with the question of allied debts to the United States and the laying of the whole problem before the League of Nations is coldly received here. The Berliner Tageblatt observes:

"Nothing could be worse than to convey the impression that Germany is helping to construct a Central European bloc for the purpose of bringing pressure to bear on America."

URGES VATICAN ACCORD.

Mussolini's Paper Declares Concordat Would Aid National Unity.

ROME, Oct. 7 (AP).—That a concordat should be concluded between Italy and the Vatican is the substance of an evidently inspired article published by Popolo d'Italia, organ of Premier Mussolini.

The newspaper says Italy has closed the cycle of her national wars, has completed her task of unification and is preparing for the second period of her power. The loss of the Vatican's temporal power in 1870 cannot again be discussed; at any rate it is irreparable, the paper adds. Daily necessities have produced a modus vivendi between the Church and State which is tolerable for both.

All countries having Catholicism as the base of their religion either have or have had a concordat with the Vatican. Instead, with Italy, there is not only in the national life but in her international relations a preconceived hostility by the Vatican to the unity of the country, the article continues. The attitude of the Vatican or the interested supporters of former Governments, it says, conceal, under the pretext of liberty for the Church, their jealousy for Italy's growth.

The Italian Fascisti feel the duty of respecting their Church and are proud that Rome will not be replaced as the seat of the Supreme Pontiff. For these reasons, with good-will on both sides, the paper says, it is possible to reach a concordat giving unreserved tranquillity to Italian Catholics, such a concordat as would heal the wounds caused by the loss of temporal power and render possible a union of all the national forces on a higher plane of civilization, progress and power.

BAN ON QUICK STRIKE URGED ON BALDWIN

Conservatives Call on Premier to Change Law So as to Make Secret Ballot Obligatory.

HIS REPLY DISAPPOINTING

Meanwhile British Miners Reject His Arbitration Proposal and Call Out Safety Men.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—After the Conservative Party conference at Scarborough today had denounced strikes, attacked trade unionism and urged the Prime Minister to "have just a little bit more of the lion and a wee bit less of the lamb" about him in dealing with such subjects, the delegates listened to a speech from Premier Baldwin which, so far as any announcement of Government policy went, was neither lion nor lamb; "neither fish nor flesh, nor good red herring."

The Prime Minister congratulated his Government on its handling of foreign affairs. He blamed the Opposition for its lack of statesmanship during the general strike. He said that the great economic conflict had pointed to the necessity for trade union law reform, but he gave no indication of what shape that reform, if any, would take.

The conference, during the afternoon, urged the Government to make illegal any strike held without a secret ballot. It heckled a former Conservative Minister when he sought to outline the difficulties of such a step and declared in favor of other limitations on the power of the unions, but Mr. Baldwin contented himself with declaring that society still needed the trade unions.

Consideration Is Promised.

"You cannot smash the system," he said, "and if you could it would be wrong."

He promised merely consideration for the resolutions passed by the conference which, besides urging the secret ballots, recommended that the Government make mass picketing and picketing of private residences illegal, to prevent victimization and intimidation, and require union finances to be audited by certified accountants.

He promised that as soon as the Cabinet had examined the subject a bill to regulate trade unions would be prepared, and, meanwhile, he noted it as a good sign that today there were trade union leaders studying labor problems in America instead of in Russia.

The Premier's speech was a disappointment to his hearers, who, during the afternoon, had heard veteran trade unionists of Conservative political convictions relate instances within their personal experiences of intimidation and coercion.

Pleased Over Foreign Affairs.

As regards foreign affairs, Premier Baldwin noted with gratification the entry of Germany into the League of Nations, which, together with the ratification of the Locarno treaties, he said, had set the seal upon a great work, the first stages of which were in progress when the Conservative Party met last year.

The Premier asserted that the British policy with Turkey had been completely successful and said that ratification of the Treaty of Angora would be registered soon with the League.

"Satisfactory arrangements have been made with France and Italy about their debts," he said.

"The only anxiety at the moment, perhaps," the Prime Minister continued, "lies in the Far East, namely, in China, but in consequence of the attitude of the British Government I trust that our difficulties are in a fair way to solution.

"Although we shall in no way depart from our policy of conciliation in China we shall not hesitate to take whatever steps may be necessary to protect the lives and property of our fellow countrymen."

Success of Move Deemed Unlikely.

SCARBOROUGH, England, Oct. 7 (AP).—Should the resolution adopted by the Conservative Party Conference here today ever be carried into legislative effect it would be difficult for workers to resort to the weapon of a strike and next to impossible to have a repetition of the recent general strike.

The resolution urges a change in the trade union law making illegal any strike without a previous secret ballot of the members of the union affected, and also making mass picketing and the picketing of private houses illegal.

Adoption of the resolution comes as a result of pressure from party members for some legal means of preventing such "lightning" labor movements as the recent general strike, in which the men were called out by their leaders without a strike poll first being taken.

Premier Baldwin has constantly parried attempts to force his Government into dealing drastically with trade union powers, which he regards as a thorny subject.

The action of the Conservative Party today is aimed at stirring the Government into broader activities and extending its field. But the movement is considered not likely to succeed, for the Government is aware of the extreme difficulty of making illegal a strike without a secret ballot.

Today's conference, however, will undoubtedly strengthen the Government's hand in introducing some sort of legislation for moderately curtailing the powers of trades unions.

Government Proposal Rejected.

LONDON, Oct. 7 (AP).—The delegates' conference of the Miners' Federation by an overwhelming majority today rejected the Government's offer to create a national arbitral tribunal for the settlement of the differences between the miners and mine owners, and by an equally large majority voted in favor of the withdrawal of the safety men fro the mines.

Thus the Government passes out of the dispute, temporarily at least, and the owners and the men are left to fight out the struggle between themselves.

The delegates' conference rejected the Government's proposals for a settlement after the announcement of a district vote, which opposed the proposal, 737,000 to 42,000.

The Government had already made it plain that unless its offer was accepted by the miners it would be withdrawn immediately. The principal feature of the offer was governmental assurance that if the miners returned to work they would receive governmental assistance in obtaining a nation-wide agreement, which is one of the important demands of the miners.

The decision of the miners was taken in the face of practical exhaustion of their resources. In addition, their position is daily becoming weaker by a slow drift of the miners back to work.

Withdrawal of the safety men, if put into effect, is considered by many as likely to cause serious trouble, not only in the mines but between the strikers and those desiring to return to their labors.

THE SCREEN

By MORDAUNT HALL.

The Vitaphone and "The Better 'Ole."

VITAPHONE subjects, including Elsie Janis, Al Jolson, Reinald Werrenrath, Willie and Eugene Howard, George Jessel and an orchestra, overture; THE BETTER 'OLE, with Sydney Chaplin, Doris Hill, Harold Goodwin, Theodore Lorch, Ed Kennedy, Charles Gerrard, Tom McGuire, Jack Ackroyd, Tom Kennedy and others, based on Captain Bruce Bairnsfather's drawings and play, directed by Charles F. Reisner, at the Colony.

Additional Vitaphone features and an uproariously funny but thoroughly farcical conception of "The Better 'Ole" were presented last night at the Colony Theatre by Warner Brothers before an enthusiastic audience that included many notable persons. One might mention that among those whose laughter was heard were Condé Nast, Will H. Hays and Jack Dempsey, the latter still bearing the marks of Gene Tunney's fists. It was a wonderfully successful evening, in which the Vitaphone provided stirring entertainment for the first half of the performance and Sydney Chaplin, as Captain Bruce Bairnsfather's Old Bill in a truly Hollywood notion of "The Better 'Ole" provoked many an outburst of hilarity after the intermission.

The Vitaphone program proved just as absorbing as that which was offered some time ago at Warners' Theatre, where, incidentally, it is still running. The series of "living sound" subjects are, in this present instance, in a far lighter vein, but none the less remarkable, even though there was occasionally the suggestion of a lisp and a noticeable scratching sound in one or two of the numbers. The overture, a Vitaphone orchestral number, was slightly marred by a whistling undertone.

In some of the singing numbers there was not a sign of a flaw and the performers were not only able to gain the full attention of the audience but, during the exhibition of most of these numbers, despite the lack of color, one was impressed by the personality of the singers, especially in the renditions of Al Jolson, Elsie Janis, Willie and Eugene Howard and George Jessel.

In a special setting Reinald Werrenrath is heard and seen singing "The Long, Long Trail" and other melodies. The program is ably balanced, for when Elsie Janis appeared on the screen the persons that packed the theatre to the doors were soon applauding as one individual. In fact, not since the initial offering of the wonderful Vitaphone has such spontaneous applause been heard in a cinema theatre. Miss Janis is brilliant in a song entitled "When Yankee Doodle Learned to Parlez Vous," and her dancing on a motor lorry adds to the effectiveness of the pictorial side of the number. She also sings "Madelon," "In the Army," "The Good Old War" and "Good Bye-ee."

Whatever slight defects there were, the audience did not consider them, and it was, in most instances, just as if Miss Janis were on the stage. One forgot all about the Vitaphone in listening to the distinct words of the songs, which to many must have brought back the days of the fighting in France.

In Willie and Eugene Howard's offerings, sounds like a starter's whistle and a taxicab horn were heard. This feature is called "Between the Acts at the Opera," and it is just as funny at the Colony as it is on any stage.

Al Jolson is seen, and of course heard, in three songs: "The Red, Red Robin," "April Showers" and "Rock-a-Bye Baby," with a Dixie melody. This Vitaphone assuredly destroys the old silent tradition of the screen. This time it was the audience that was silent, so keen was everybody to catch every word and note of the popular entertainer, and when each number was ended it was obvious that there was not a still pair of hands in the house.

After delivering a funny monologue that caused the audience to laugh longer than they were expected to, George Jessel's shadow is heard singing Irving Berlin's song, "At Peace with the World and You."

Immediately the word "Intermission" was flashed upon the screen many of the persons left their seats and the conversation in the lobby was wholly devoted to a eulogy of the Vitaphone.

Charlie Chaplin's brother, Sydney, then had his fling at fun. His comedy, "The Better 'Ole" relies only on the characters of Old Bill, Alf and Bert and that unforgettable drawing, "If yer knows a better ole, go to it." Aside from that, Old Bill goes through war experiences such as Captain Bairnsfather at least never put into the original stage version of this comedy or in his drawings. Mr. Chaplin is partial to the farmyard in this production, which has many side-splitting incidents. He does a great deal with an egg, after having milked a cow, and then discovers that the egg has hatched in his pocket.

The longest period of hefty comedy is delivered through a dummy horse, with the Vitaphone orchestral accompaniment rendering that popular song, "Horses, Horses, Horses." Sydney Chaplin and Alf are respectively the front and rear legs of the animal. It is seen, of these characters are, in many an awkward dilemma. The dummy horse even drinks from a trough with some German horses and the look in the real horse's eye as he gazes at the dummy is enough to make a cynic chuckle. This dummy horse has a charmed life, for he is shot at by drunken German soldiers, but eludes all the bullets.

There are moments when this comedy drags, but this failing will undoubtedly be remedied, for it merely means the curtailing of some of the scenes.

The performance did not finish until after midnight.

H. P. STORY DEAD; AIDED WAR LOANS

OVERSEAS WITH AVIATORS

Returned in Time to Participate in the Last Two Liberty Loan Campaigns.

Harry Powers Story, writer and counsel on public relations, died on Wednesday in the Jamaica Hospital at Jamaica, Queens, after a short illness. Just before his death Mr. Story had been engaged in a campaign to raise funds for a clubhouse for the American Woman's Association, in which Miss Anne Morgan and other prominent women are interested.

Mr. Story had been connected with charity, patriotic and political campaigns in New York since the war. In the Presidential campaign of 1924 he had charge of the solicitation of funds by mail for the Republican National Committee at New York headquarters. In the Fourth and Fifth Liberty Loan drives he wrote several pamphlets and most of the advertising copy used in the New York newspapers. He also had part in the Harvard Endowment Fund Drive and the Visiting Nurse campaign.

Mr. Story was born in Cincinnati in 1881. He went overseas in December, 1917, with the aviation section and returned here in time to take an active part in the last two Liberty Loans. Before the war he was associated with the H. K. McCann Company, advertising agents, and later with the John Price Jones Corporation as Vice President. He resigned about five years ago to open his own office as a public relations counsel.

He married in 1917 Miss Frances Wood of Boston, who survives him, as do two daughters, Charlotte Fairbanks and Abigail Wingate Story. His home was at 38 Pearsall Avenue, Freeport, L. I.

The funeral services will be held at the Fairchild Funeral Parlors, Jamaica, this morning.

JOURNALIST IS INDICTED.

Dwyer Faces First Degree Murder Charge for Shooting Ruffner.

Gerald Dwyer, 30 years old, a former copy reader on The Brooklyn Daily Eagle, who lived at 254 Hancock Street, Brooklyn, was indicted yesterday for first-degree murder in the shooting and killing of Joseph Ruffner, another copy reader, in front of Ruffner's home at 208 West Ninety-seventh Street last Sunday night. Dwyer, who is in the Tombs, is expected to plead this morning in General Sessions.

Dwyer is accused of firing five shots at Ruffner, who was 35 years old, and an employe of The Bronx Home News, when Ruffner started to eject him from the lobby of the apartment house, as Dwyer attempted to call on the wife of the slain man. Three bullets struck Ruffner. The accused man first said he was drunk. He later admitted the killing and attributed the trouble to a practical joke Ruffner and his wife had played on him in the early part of the Summer.

SAYS JOLSON FILMED WELL.

D. W. Griffith, at Damage Suit Trial, Also Backs Writer's Claim.

David Wark Griffith, moving picture producer, testified yesterday at the trial of the suit for damages against Al Jolson, the comedian, that he had thought Jolson filmed well and would have been a success on the screen if he had not deserted it for a trip to Europe. He also substantiated the claim of Anthony Paul Kelly, scenario writer, who is suing Jolson for $250,000 for services in getting him a moving picture contract, by saying that Jolson had received an opportunity on the screen through his instrumentality.

The inspection of the first screen test of Jolson in costume did not seem to depress the actor, so far as he could remember, the producer said. In fact, "the boy," as he called Jolson, did not appear unhappy over it at all, Griffith testified. When Jolson "walked out" and left for Europe, however, it finally dawned "even through my thick head" that the comedian might have been discouraged, he admitted.

McKEE FOR MODERN WOMAN

She Is Factor in World's Progress, He Tells New York League.

Joseph V. McKee, President of the Board of Aldermen, championed the modern woman in an address before guests of the New York League of Business and Professional Women last night at the Hotel McAlpin. The occasion was a dinner in honor of Lena M. Phillips, President of the National Federation.

"Despite the ridicule that has been heaped upon the woman of today by both pulpit and press," President McKee said, "I have a firm belief in her as a definite factor in the progress of the world. The old prejudice against women in business is fast disappearing and today there are few organizations of importance in the commercial world that do not list among their most valued executives a member of her sex."

Miss Phillips, in her address, traced the course of women from the days of slavery to her present independence. She asserted that industry had liberated women and that their presence was no longer required in the home.

Other speakers included Jessie L. Hall, President of the New York State Federation of Business and Professional Women; Olive S. Gabriel, Vice President of the National Women Lawyers Association, and Judge Leone D. Howell, Surrogate, Nassau County.

APARTMENT HOTELS HOPE FOR NEW LAW

CALL LAWS INADEQUATE

Tenement House Provisions Not Designed to Control Modern Buildings, They Assert.

NICHOLSON MADE RULING

Held That Electric Outlets in the Serving Pantries Did Not Make Dwelling a Tenement.

Real estate owners and city officials, discussing the ruling of Tenement House Commissioner Walter C. Martin that many of the large apartment hotels in the city which have an aggregate value of $300,000,000 are illegal, in that numerous tenants cook in the service pantries in defiance of the law, suggested yesterday that the test case to be launched by the Commissioner would result in the enactment of a law establishing the right of apartment hotels to lease to housekeeping tenants.

These real estate owners and officials asserted that the Tenement House laws under which the apartment hotels now fall, under the ruling of Commissioner Martin, were not designed to deal with the modern electrically equipped apartment hotel, but to protect tenants of the tenement type of dwelling from being imposed upon by landlords through failure to provide proper sanitary conveniences.

The difficulty in which the owners of apartment hotels find themselves is due to the fact that while they are constructed as buildings of the hotel type, with certain privileges not afforded to builders of the ordinary apartments such as increased height and the necessity for only one exit instead of two—building and other inspectors assert they have found the serving pantries being used by tenants for cooking and thus, under the ruling, are recognized as coming under the tenement house classification, necessitating the enforcement of the tenement house laws.

The cooking which, according to Commissioner Martin, is done in the apartment hotels, is carried on in the service pantries, which are equipped with electrical outlets.

The fact that the pantries are thus equipped with electrical outlets which can be used for cooking does not automatically place the buildings in the tenement house class.

This was learned when an opinion by Corporation Counsel George P. Nicholson was made public. He pointed out that the owners were required to certify that there was to be no cooking in the apartments and that the buildings were not otherwise to be used for tenement house buildings, before the proper certificates were issued.

In the paragraph in his opinion dealing with the electrical outlets he says:

"The providing of electric outlets in the service pantries in the apartments are not of themselves sufficient to warrant the classification of this building as a tenement house, since electric outlets are used for many purposes incident to the occupancy of an apartment in a hotel."

Mr. Brisbane Not Interested.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On your front page this morning I read that Mr. Martin of the Tenement House Department has reached some decision in connection with apartment house hotels and that—I quote from THE TIMES—"among the more conspicuous hotels affected by Mr. Martin's decision is Arthur Brisbane's Ritz Tower."

I read also in THE TIMES: "Property owners have formed an organization called the Apartment Hotel Owners' Association * * * and a call to all such property owners was sent out for a general meeting. The meeting was held yesterday in the Waldorf. Arthur Brisbane, owner of the forty-two-story Ritz Tower Hotel, Emery Roth, its architect, were among those present."

I was not present at any such meeting. I never heard of it. If Mr. Roth, one of my architects in connection with the Ritz Tower, attended the meeting, he did not do so at my request or as my representative, and I should not have authorized him to attend the meeting as such. Mr. Roth is architect for many buildings in New York. Perhaps he attended this meeting, as he might properly do, to represent interests other than my own.

The Ritz Tower apartment, in all respects, is an apartment hotel, was built and will be conducted accordingly. It is rented for a term of twenty-one years to Mr. Keller, manager of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel and to a corporation organized by Major Duncan G. Harris, President of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel Company. It will be conducted under Ritz Carlton hotel management.

There are two kitchens in this forty-two-story building, one for the hotel which provides more than sufficient dining room space for every tenant in the building, and one in an apartment which I built for myself on the nineteenth and twentieth floors in accordance with the building laws.

On every floor of this apartment hotel there are a waiter, a valet and a maid in constant attendance. The Ritz Tower will be managed with the same methods of service as the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. All apartments are connected by electrically heated dumbwaiters with the hotel kitchen in the basement.

I shall be obliged if you will print this statement.

BAMBOO A PAPER SOURCE.

British India Plans Manufacture Soon on a Huge Scale.

BOMBAY, Oct. 7 (AP).—Forest research experts in India have discovered how to use bamboo as pulpwood in the manufacture of white paper. The process, it is announced, has been perfected after fifteen years' experimenting by the Forest Research Institute and College at Dehra Dun.

The authorities say that by the new process India will soon be in a position to supply the paper demands of a large part of the world. The bamboo, which has been looked upon here for centuries as a nuisance comparable only to common weeds, now seems destined to assume a prominent place among the national resources of the British Empire.

Extensive plans for the erection of pulp mills and paper factories are being fostered by the Madras, Bihar, Orissa and other Governments in India.

London Mother Saves Baby, Descending Water Pipe in Fire

LONDON, Oct. 7 (AP).—The West End of London got a thrill today when a mother, carrying her child in her arms, made a melodramatic escape from the top floor of a burning apartment house.

A great crowd watched Mrs. Mary Fowler save herself and baby from the flames by clambering down the outside of the house on a water pipe, then make her way along the neighboring roof and down a skylight. Firemen were forced to lift their hose pipes to permit her to pass under the jets of water while making her perilous descent.

The onlookers raised a loud cheer when Mrs. Fowler reached safety.

GIVES COTTON MEN $30,000,000 CREDIT

Federal Farm Loan Board Aids Cooperative Marketing Bodies Hit by Price Slump.

BANKERS WARN OF CRISIS

State Group at Convention Urge Crop Curtailment to Combat Possible $400,000,000 Loss.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7. (AP).—The Federal Farm Loan Board has extended a $30,000,000 credit to cooperative marketing associations that have been hit hard by the slump in cotton prices.

Chairman Williams of the board, in announcing this action today, said cooperatives already had applied for $7,000,000 credit and it was anticipated that additional credit would be required.

The money will be made available through the intermediate credit banks and will be used in the marketing of this year's cotton crop.

In making the funds available for this purpose, Mr. Williams assured all cooperatives that the immediate banks were prepared to assist in any way possible in disposition of the crop "through soundly organized and properly managed cooperative marketing associations."

The demand for credit has become acute in recent weeks by the downward trend in cotton prices, and the action of the Farm Loan Board is in line with other efforts that have been taken by various State agencies throughout the South.

State Bankers Urge Acreage Cut.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 7.—Bankers of the South, concerned over the continued decline of the market price for cotton, met today and decided to do everything in their power to check the decline and to regulate the output of next season by advocating a reduction of 25 per cent. in acreage.

They stressed the fact that present prices forecast a loss approximating $400,000,000 on this season's crop and that a very serious financial situation is likely if present conditions persist.

A pledge was obtained from the President of the State Banking Association in each of the eleven cotton States that immediately on their return home each will call a special meeting to start the campaign for crop limitation, and to consider immediate relief for the common farmer.

There was considerable discussion of a proposal that a great amount of cotton (some suggestions going as high as 5,000,000 bales) be taken off the market in the South and warehoused until the price is higher. No decision was made.

Bankers say that Southern credit facilities are ample to take care of their crop surplus and that every reasonable use of these facilities should be made.

The majority said that the low price already has had a very marked effect on Southern business generally and that still further inroads will be made this Winter unless there is swift and permanent recovery of cotton prices.

Although the cost price differs considerably in various sections, bankers say that the present open market price for cotton represents a loss of fully 5 cents to the pound to the grower.

Emergency Feared in Price Drop.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 7.—The rapid decline in cotton prices has precipitated a serious emergency, and the consequences, unless prices harden quickly, are difficult to estimate, according to J. H. Tregoe, New York executive manager of the National Credit Men's Association. Mr. Tregoe said today that the credit situation was fundamentally sound and that though stocks of merchandise were not above normal, receivables were in good condition, failures were decreasing and there were no signs of speculation or inflation.

Regarding cotton, Mr. Tregoe declared that "taking from the cotton section a spending power of approximately half a billion dollars will be severely felt in the liquidation of existing credit contracts and in buying for future needs." He held, however, that the credit situation in the cotton district was not strained and could bear this emergency.

"The loss of buying power is the serious side of the matter," he added, "and in this loss the whole country will participate.

"The psychological effects of such a situation must be reckoned with, for many debtors will plead inability to settle their indebtedness because of the cotton situation, when, as a matter of fact, this situation has had no effect directly on their business."

Sterling Honored at Yale.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 7.—John W. Sterling was referred to as "a princely benefactor" of Yale at the unveiling today of a portrait of Mr. Sterling painted by George B. Torey of New York City, which has been hung in the Sterling Chemical Laboratory on Prospect Hill. The portrait was presented to Yale by George H. Church, a trustee of Mr. Sterling's estate.

COMMERCE CHAMBER FOR FARE RISE PLAN

Adopts Resolutions Demanding Increase to Make Old and New Subways Pay.

POLICY STATEMENT ASKED

Committee Chairman Calls Board of Estimate "Too Cowardly" to Declare on City Operation.

Resolutions demanding an increased fare on both old and new subways sufficient to make them self-supporting and prevent the carrying of future deficits in the tax budget were adopted yesterday by the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York on report of its Committees on Taxation and Public Service in the Metropolitan District.

The resolutions declared against municipal operation and for unification of rapid transit operation, so far as practicable, called upon the city Administration for a declaration of rapid transit policy, instructed the members of the two committees to appear at all public hearings and urge the views expressed by the resolutions and directed the Secretary to notify Mayor Walker and other public officials concerned of the chamber's action.

Nearly five hundred members of the chamber were present when the President, William L. DeBost, asked for a joint report from J. Vipond Davies, Chairman of the Committee on Public Service, and Andrew V. Stout, Chairman of the Committee on Taxation.

Calls Board "Cowardly."

In presenting the report, Mr. Davies said:

"The Board of Estimate is either too ignorant or too busy playing politics to expect anything from, and they will perhaps continue dallying and accomplish nothing. The impression has been generally created that the new lines now under construction are to be municipally operated, and the Board of Estimate is too cowardly to say whether this is a fact or not, or to take any position on the matter one way or another."

Before the resolutions were put to vote Arthur Leland spoke from the floor, declaring:

"If the present city Government does not bring about an increased fare, I believe that this ancient organization should start an anti-Tammany party to put men in office who have courage and who will not continue to fool the people. To travel to Long Beach and return it costs $1.45, and the distance is no further than a ride that can be had on the subway for 10 cents. Yet these city officials talk glibly of assessing $450,000,000 extra on property in Brooklyn, and $600,000,000 more on property in Manhattan to relieve the situation."

After the laughter this sally provoked had died down, William Williams rose and advised the chamber in order to interest the chambers of the five boroughs of Greater New York to urge an equalized fare for all the boroughs, so that the representative business men, feeling that their particular borough was not being penalized, would adopt the New York Chamber's resolutions and recommendations. After Patrick O'Rourke, President of the O'Rourke Construction Company, declared in his disagreement with the report that a 5-cent fare was the "slogan of all political parties and was entirely practicable," Charles L. Bernheimer moved for a vote on the report which was adopted without a dissenting vote.

Give Transit Figures.

One of the most important parts of the report was that which presented the figures to June 30 last on the rapid transit transportation situation. In this section the total investment by the city in existing lines is shown at $324,000,000, divided $58,000,000 to the Interborough Rapid Transit Company under Contracts Nos. 1 and 2; $106,000,000 to the I. R. T. under Contract No. 3, and $164,000,000 to the New York Rapid Transit Corporation. The taxpayers of the city provide $13,845,000 annually to cover the city's charges on this investment.

The moneys invested by the companies total for the I. R. T., $295,378,374 and for the N. Y. R. T. C., $150,000,000, a grand total of $445,378,374. The city deficit in the contract return provided under the I. R. T. subway contract, of which the taxpayers pay $35,028,318, totaled $64,886,695, and the city deficit under the N. Y. R. T. C. contract, which the taxpayers totally provided, was $41,613,871, or a total city deficit of $106,500,566. The total company deficits which must be provided for out of earnings before the city can receive any return from its investments was $24,923,829. The I. R. T. deficit in the return provided by the Elevated Extension and Improvement Certificates of 1913, reached $57,930,053. Thus the total city and company deficits to June 30, 1926 aggregated $189,354,448.

WILL INSIST ON CULVER LINK

Delaney Warns B. M. T.—Threatens to Halt Coney Island Yard Work.

John H. Delaney, Chairman of the Board of Transportation, declared yesterday at a meeting of the Board of Estimate that he would insist that the Coney Island yard and shops, now near completion, be connected with the city-owned Culver line, and added that rather than give the B. M. T. a monopoly of the yard and shops he would withdraw the contracts for their completion.

This declaration followed a tilt between Mr. Delaney and George D. Yeomans, counsel for the B. M. T., over the motive behind the B. M. T.'s request that the proposed Culver line connection should not be built. Mr. Delaney contended that the only reason for the railroad company's opposition to the connection was that it saw in the linking of the recapturable Culver line to the yard and shops a possible step toward the carrying out of a plan for an independent subway system.

The matter was put over for two weeks at the request of Michael Shugrue, Commissioner of Public Works of Queens, so that Borough President Connolly, absent at a funeral, might be present.

SLIDE IN PANAMA CANAL.

Dredges Are Clearing East Side Channel in Culebra Cut.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BALBOA, Oct. 7.—Two fifteen-yard dipper dredges are at work clearing away a slide which occurred in the Culebra section of the Gaillard cut this morning.

It is estimated that 1,500,000 cubic yards of earth are in motion and about 200,000 entered the east side channel of the canal. There has been no interruption of traffic.

While the slide is not serious, it is the largest that has occurred in a year.

Los Angeles to Make Flight to Detroit; Shenandoah Survivor to Pick Time and Route

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (AP).—The Los Angeles, the navy's remaining dirigible, was authorized today to make an overland flight to Detroit, one of the objectives of the Shenandoah when she was destroyed by a storm over Ohio a little more than a year ago with the loss of fourteen officers and men.

The voyage of the Los Angeles, a German-built craft, will be started Monday or later, depending upon weather conditions. The big ship will depart either from her hangar at Lakehurst, N. J., or from the tender Patoka at Newport, R. I., and return to one or the other, as her commanding officer may determine.

This will be the first overland flight of the Los Angeles since the Shenandoah disaster. She will be commanded by Lieut. Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, senior surviving officer of the Shenandoah, and in her crew will be many others of those who escaped death when the navy's first dirigible was wrecked.

Under orders issued today by the Navy Department, Commander Rosendahl is to have complete liberty of action in beginning and carrying out the flight, which, it is officially announced, is for training officers and men and for testing commercial air routes and the Ford mooring mast at Dearborn, Mich.

"The choice of routes and decisions as to start, continuation or termination of the flight rests with the commanding officer," the order said.

Refusal of the Navy Department to permit Lieut. Commander Zachary Lansdowne to make a trial flight to Detroit to test the Dearborn mast before the Shenandoah set out upon her fatal voyage figured in the navy investigation into her loss.

The Shenandoah was under orders to visit a number of State fairs in the Middle West. It is announced, however, that the Los Angeles will go only to Detroit and that no invitations from other cities to have the dirigible fly over them will be considered.

The Los Angeles started from Lakehurst for the twin cities in June, 1925, when President Coolidge spoke at the Norwegian celebration in Minnesota, but developed engine trouble before reaching Chicago and turned back.

FAILED TO LOCATE M'PHERSON SHACK

Murchison Tells at Evangelist's Hearing of Fruitless Search for Captivity Cabin.

DOUBTS HER DESERT HIKE

Arizona Officer Points Out Lack of Travel-Stains on Dress She Says She Wore.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 7 (AP).—Alonzo Murchison, brawny desert tracker and police officer of Douglas, Ariz., testified here today that he did not believe Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, could have made the Mexican desert hike she described on her reappearance at Douglas last June.

This testimony was the high light of today's session of Mrs. McPherson's preliminary hearing on charges of criminal conspiracy. The latter part of the hearing was filled with pictures of shacks which the defense produced and submitted to Murchison. The witness said he had been unable to find a shack in the Mexican desert south of Douglas to correspond with that described by the evangelist as the place where she was held by abductors.

According to Mrs. McPherson, she trudged twenty miles over the desert to Agua Prieta, Mexico, opposite Douglas, after escaping from the Mexican hut in which she declares she was held captive.

W. I. Gilbert, defense attorney, handed to Murchison the dress worn by the evangelist when she reappeared at Douglas and asked what evidence Murchison found to indicate that it had not been worn on a twenty-mile desert trip. The witness pointed out what he said was the absence of perspiration marks, soiled spots or tears in the garment.

When Gilbert threw the dress on the counsel table, where water had been spilled, the three prosecutors jumped to their feet, while District Attorney Keyes charged the dress was being soiled. A hot exchange followed, the incident ending when Judge Blake ordered the dress given to the clerk.

Gilbert produced a photograph of a house which he said was thirteen miles from Agua Prieta, but Murchison could not remember any house at that point. The defense attorney seemed to have an inexhaustible supply of shack pictures, all of which he said were photographs of houses in the area which Murchison said he covered.

The witness identified one shack which he said was on the San Juan Ranch, twenty miles south of Agua Prieta and near a spring. He said he had not visited it because the evangelist said the approaching country was not familiar to her.

In the cases of four different shacks which Murchison said he did not visit, but which he admitted were in the general area, the police officer declared the houses did not fit the shack described by Mrs. McPherson in any respect.

DIGS FOR PIRATE'S HOARD.

Burlington (N. J.) Woman Seeks Proof of Blackbeard Legend.

Special to The New York Times.

BURLINGTON, N. J., Oct. 7.—A century old legend, telling how the pirate Blackbeard buried his plunder beneath an old black walnut tree as a marker, has gained so much credence that Miss Florence E. Steward of Trenton directed a group of laborers in digging for the treasure around such a tree in her property here today.

Miss Steward said her family had known of the legend for two generations, and that as she expected to sell the house, she did not wish the property to leave the family without every effort being made to determine whether the walnut tree in the yard was the one associated with Blackbeard. She will continue to dig, she said, until certain of the result.

According to the tradition Blackbeard buried a Spaniard upright over the treasure chest, and then sailed away never to return. In the course of time the walnut tree on Miss Steward's property has become known as "The Pirate Tree."

KILLS IN HOLD-UP OF A LUNCH-WAGON

POLICE IN ALL-NIGHT HUNT

Thugs Beat the Messenger for a Kearny Corporation and Get $2,000 Payroll.

Within a few hours after all Newark policemen and detectives had been warned to be on the look-out for a negro who had been holding up lunch wagons, a man believed to have been the one sought eluded their guard last night and during a robbery in a lunch wagon at Lafayette and Columbia Streets, Newark, shot and killed a patron who attempted to resist him.

The man killed was Raymond Santa Roza, 27 years old, of 55 Chestnut Street, Newark. With a friend, Orlando Santo of Perth Amboy, Santa Roza was in the lunch wagon of Albert Battisle about 7:30 P. M. when the negro entered, whipped out a pistol and ordered the two patrons and the proprietor to throw up their hands.

Going behind the counter, the robber took $40 from a cash register. Then he searched Santo and took $1.40 from him. As he stepped over toward Santa Roza, the latter slipped his wallet containing $10 to Santo, and when the negro tried to go through his pockets he suddenly grasped the thief's pistol.

The two grappled for a moment and then the negro, overcoming his victim with superior strength, swung the pistol free and fired directly at Santa Roza's head. The bullet hit him in the temple and he died soon after.

The negro fled to the street and disappeared in the Pennsylvania Railroad yards near by. Newark policemen were ordered to keep up an all night search for him.

In Kearny, N. J., two thugs attacked Frederick Baker, a messenger for the Frederick Snare Corporation, beat him on the head with blackjacks and escaped with $2,000 in payroll funds. Baker was detailed to bring the money from the New York offices of the company, at 114 Liberty Street, and said just as he came out with the money the men came to him and told him they had been ordered to take him to Kearny in an automobile. When the car reached the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad trestle in Kearny, he said, the men attacked him and, seizing the money, threw him out. Baker was treated for severe wounds on the scalp and then went to his home, at 181 Belmont Avenue, Jersey City.

IN WILSON PROFESSORSHIP.

Professor Harper Takes Chair at Princeton Endowed by Bok.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 7.—Professor George McLean Harper of the department of English at Princeton University assumed today the new Woodrow Wilson Professorship of English established by Edward Bok with a gift of $150,000. Professor Harper was a close friend of Mr. Wilson and is regarded as the foremost authority in this country on Wordsworth, who, Professor Harper has said, was Mr. Wilson's favorite poet.

Professor Harper was graduated from Princeton in 1884 and became a member of the Faculty in 1889, the year before Mr. Wilson came to Princeton to teach. He will continue to give his regular courses in the curriculum.

When Mr. Bok established the Woodrow Wilson chair, he specified that "the purpose of the professorship is to provide training in the best spoken and written English literature."

PRINCE DANCES CHARLESTON

He Is So Expert That Others Appear Clumsy, Observers Assert.

LONDON, Oct. 7 (AP).—The Prince of Wales has mastered the Charleston. At a popular supper resort recently the Prince danced it many times. Observers said it was a pleasure to watch him and his partner; that the dancing of other couples seemed clumsy in contrast.

The diners were surprised when the supper bill was paid by the Prince. There was a time when royal personages rarely handled money, except to scatter largess. Such money as the late King Edward carried was always scrubbed and polished before he handled it.

KEARNEY BOY DIES IN AIR MAIL MURDER

WOUNDED MAN SEEN IN CAB

Driver Asked How to Avoid Ferries to New York—Riot Guns Guard Hadley Field.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 7.—The search for the men who shot and killed Frank Kearney, wealthy Maplewood resident and wounded his 16-year-old son, Robert, on the Stelton-New-market Road on Monday night, was spurred on today as the result of the death of the son in a hospital here and the offer of a $2,000 reward by the Middlesex County Board of Freeholders for the arrest and conviction of the murderers.

The two men who shot Kearney and his son and threw Mrs. Kearney from the Kearney automobile are believed to have been members of a gang of thieves who planned to hold up the air mail truck en route from here to Hadley Field. The robbers had wrecked their own car and attacked the Kearneys, who were driving toward here, when Mr. Kearney refused to give them a lift in his machine.

Mrs. Kearney, who was injured when she was thrown from the car, was at the bedside of her son when he died shortly before 8 o'clock this morning in St. Peter's General Hospital. She was so overcome that she required medical attention.

Demand Drastic Action.

In unanimously adopting the resolution offering the reward the Freeholders said: "The killing and the assault have so horrified the people of this county that the necessity had arisen to exert every possible means to capture the thugs, not only that the crime may be punished, but also to act as a check upon repetition of such offenses in the future."

The search centred today in Elizabeth and Newark. The investigators went to Elizabeth after learning that John J. O'Brien, night clerk at the General Hospital there, had reported that a man who had applied for treatment early Wednesday morning resembled James (Killer) Cunniffe, who with John J. (Bum) Rodgers, is said to dominate the band of thieves that plotted the air-mail hold-up.

O'Brien said that the man who asked for treatment carried his right hand in his overcoat and in his left hand was a blood-stained handkerchief. He disappeared from the hospital while O'Brien was at the telephone switchboard trying to summon a doctor to the admitting room.

The Newark cide was furnished by John Seyt, manager of a restaurant on Market Street, who said that early this morning the driver of a taxicab entered and asked him how he could get to New York without taking the downtown Hudson River ferries. Seyt told the man he did not know and said that as the driver went back to his cab he noticed two women in the rear end, lying on the floor in front of them, a man apparently wounded. Seyt took the license number of the cab but up to late tonight the police had not succeeded in finding the owner of the cab.

Riot Guns at Air Field.

The attempted attack on the air mail truck has resulted in guards at Hadley Field being furnished with riot guns. An application for an armored truck to replace the present one also has been made.

Archie Mucchio and Paul Luciano of Bound Brook, where the thieves were said to have maintained headquarters, were released today after considerable questioning. Luciano denied he was a brother of Nicholas (Cheeks) Luciano, an important witness at the trials of the Diamond brothers and John Farina, executed in Sing Sing Prison for the killing of two Brooklyn bank messengers.

State police at Somerville questioned Angelo Di Mitto, owner of a restaurant in Bound Brook. He was reported to have said that Cunniffe was one of three men who had dinner at his place several days before the shooting.

Despite identifications by Mrs. Kearney and other witnesses Prosecutor Toolan reiterated his statement that "Bum" Rodgers had not taken part in the shooting. He said, however, that the men he was seeking were wanted for many other crimes in New Jersey, including the fatal shooting of a pay-roll guard in Perth Amboy and the killing of a messenger in a hold-up at the Reid Ice Cream Company plant in Newark on July 19.

Funeral services for Mr. Kearney and his son will be held on Saturday in Maplewood.

CALLS NEWS PEACE AGENT.

Sir Roderick Jones Guest Here of Foreign Press Correspondents.

Sir Roderick Jones, Chairman of Reuter's, Ltd., spoke yesterday of the part played by newspapers and news agencies in the maintenance of international peace. Sir Roderick was the guest of honor of the Association of Foreign Press Correspondents at a luncheon at the Bankers' Club. Among the other guests were the Board of Directors of The Associated Press.

After describing briefly the hatreds still remaining in Europe as a result of the World War, Sir Roderick said: "We can contribute greatly to a better understanding among nations by honestly representing our peoples to one another. It is our duty so to disseminate the truth that the possible causes of another great conflict will be eliminated, at least in our time."

Sir Roderick then differentiated between the field of the news agencies and that of the special correspondent. "There is room for both," he said. "The agency, I may say, is perhaps by virtue of its organization able to carry the 'heavy goods,' while the special correspondent has an opportunity to supplement the work of the news agency by interpreting the news in a way that the agency cannot."

Frank B. Noyes, President of The Associated Press, responded briefly, praising Sir Roderick for his efforts to promote international understanding and speaking of the close alliance between The Associated Press and Reuter's.

Only Two Killed on Air Mail Flying 2,256,000 Miles in Year

Only two persons were killed, one for each 1,128,000 miles of flying, on the Government transcontinental air route during the last year, according to a statement issued yesterday by the Daniel Guggenheim Foundation for the Promotion of Aeronautics. Twenty-nine States and the District of Columbia are now traversed by air mail planes, and three new routes now under advisement will add two more States to the service.

Private airplane operators made 259,763 flights for a total of 5,326,672 miles last year. The 290 private operators used 676 planes in forty-one States and carried 205,094 passengers and 112 tons of freight and mail.

BUD STILLMAN SETS MARRIAGE FOR JUNE

Ceremony to Take Place in the Home of His Parents at Pleasantville, He Says.

TALKS ABOUT HIS FIANCEE

She Loves the Outdoors and Can Play the Accordion—"Can't She Cook? Oh, Boy!" He Exclaims.

James (Bud) Stillman expects to marry Miss Lena Wilson, the eighteen-year-old girl from the farm adjoining his mother's estate at Grand Anse, Quebec, next June, after his graduation from Princeton, at the home of his parents in Pleasantville, N. Y. The twenty-three-year-old son of the financier said so yesterday in an interview in his sparsely furnished apartment in a Princeton University dormitory. After that it is probable that he and his bride, a girl of the outdoors who loves hunting and tramping, will spend their honeymoon canoeing and hiking through the Canadian forests.

Plans for the wedding have not been settled yet, young Mr. Stillman said, but he is looking forward eagerly to Miss Wilson's expected early visit to New York with his mother.

As Bud Stillman described his fiancée—an old-fashioned girl in many ways, whose first experience with pretty clothes will be when she comes to New York—his eyes sparkled with enthusiasm, but he spoke modestly and with restraint. He is obviously very much in love with her. She is "different from ordinary girls," he said.

Talks of His Fiancee.

Miss Wilson doesn't smoke and she doesn't Charleston, but she can dance, young Stillman said. She prefers the old-fashioned steps, the waltzes and the square dance. Indeed, she taught him the steps of the square dance last Summer. She plays the accordion and the mouth organ. Hunting, fishing and canoeing are the things at which Miss Wilson excels, and in them she has the admiring appreciation of her fiancé, who also loves the woods.

Bud Stillman stood leaning against a radiator in his room answering the questions of a group of newspaper reporters quietly and frankly and with occasional flashes of humor.

One reporter wanted to know if, like most girls, Miss Wilson was fascinated by pretty clothes.

Bud grinned broadly. "I don't know," he replied. "She's never had any."

"But can she cook?" persisted the interviewer. Again Bud grinned as he shot back the answer, "Oh, boy!"

Met Her Seven Years Ago.

Bud Stillman and Miss Wilson met for the first time about seven years ago, when she was keeping house for her brother-in-law. Since then she has worked for Mrs. Stillman off and on during the Summer months. In the Winter she attended the little school in Grand Anse which is taught by a French nun.

Asked what sort of work Miss Wilson had done for his mother, Bud replied:

"She did all kinds of things. She was mother's personal maid and housekeeper, and she also acted as interpreter for mother when she wanted to give orders to the gardener or other servants who spoke only French-Canadian."

He was asked if he thought that New York society would be willing to accept his bride.

"I don't see that it matters," he replied; "personally I'm not interested in society. After we're married I expect to settle down and have friends, and it won't matter much to me whether they're in society or what they're in so long as I like them."

He said that Miss Wilson liked a home and could take care of one. "And that's what I want," he added. He said that his parents were well pleased with his choice, particularly his mother.

"Mother," he said, "understands. She knows that social standing isn't so all important. The qualities that matter are character and mind."

Young Stillman hopes to win a place on the Princeton crew this season. In his sophomore year he rowed on the junior varsity. Last year he played on the water polo team of the University. This year he has turned back to the crew. He expects to enter Harvard Medical School next Fall, but is now majoring in biology at Princeton. He is very much interested in scientific research, but said it is too early yet to decide on what branch of the medical field he would make his specialty.

Bud Pays for the Ring.

James A. Stillman, Bud's father, radiated pleasure at his home at 900 Park Avenue last night as he spoke of the commission he and Mrs. Stillman had executed here in response to a telegraphic request from Bud a month ago for them to select an engagement ring and of the family's plans to receive Miss Wilson here.

"The ring he and Mrs. Stillman chose was a beautiful one, Mr. Stillman said, but of moderate price. Bud paid for it out of his own funds.

"We are thoroughly happy about our son's coming marriage," he said. "You see, they can almost be said to have grown up together, for Miss Wilson lives on the adjoining farm, and he and Lena played together when they were hardly more than children."

Mr. Stillman confirmed reports that Miss Wilson had worked for Mrs. Stillman, but said it was not correct to call her a maid, for it is a custom of the neighboring families in the Grand Anse region to work for each other when needed.

"Not that it would be anything against her if she were a lady's maid," Mr. Stillman added. "On the contrary it's a point in any one's favor to work."

HUGE FLEET PARADES ON ERIE'S CENTENARY

Navy Heads Colorful Line of Vessels in Honor of 100th Birthday of Canal.

SMITH TELLS OF INCOME

Declares at Celebration Receipts This Year Will Exceed Any in Canal's History.

HONOR TO CLINTON URGED

Monument to Executive Who Opened State Waterway Is Proposed at Dinner at Waldorf.

With pageantry on the Hudson River in the daytime and a banquet at the Waldorf last night, the centennial celebration of the opening of the Erie Canal was ended, as far as this city is concerned, though other cities and towns are to hold exercises later.

What might be termed the climax of the celebration here occurred last night. Governor Smith in his speech at the banquet announced that the earnings of the canal this year would far surpass the figures of any year in the history of the waterway. Dr. John H. Finley, in a high tribute to Governor De Witt Clinton, who, through years of unremitting endeavor, put through the canal project, proposed that a monument to Clinton be erected either near the Great Lakes end of the canal or at Albany, where it joins the Hudson.

At the banquet there were about six hundred prominent people in all walks of life. Mayor Walker presided as toastmaster and the others on the dais, which was constructed to resemble a canal barge, were Bishop William T. Manning, Dr. Henry Moskowitz, Major Gen. C. P. Summerall, Elon H. Hooker, Roy G. Fitch, Dr. Finley, George Clinton, grandson of Governor Clinton and Chairman of the Canal Centennial Commission; Governor Smith, former Governor Silzer of New Jersey, Frederick S. Greene, Commissioner Albert Goldman, Major Gen. Haskell, Admiral Louis M. Josephthal and William J. Roche. The Police Band provided instrumental music and the Police Glee Club sang several of the Erie Canal songs of long ago.

Smith Denies Scrapping Plan.

Mayor Walker said he would like to talk of the benefits of the canal to this city, but would stick closely to his duties as toastmaster, and introduce the speakers. He presented Governor Smith, who decided that the canal had been responsible for making New York the great port of entry that it has become and said that of the ten and a half million people in the State more than seven million live along the line of the canal. He recalled that he had previously announced to the public that the canal was not being used to the extent that had been hoped, and he spoke with mild sarcasm of the Council of Farms and Markets, through which he had hoped, but without realization, arrangements could be made for the more intensive use of the canal terminals. He injected a suggestion of politics into his speech by laughingly remarking that while he had been charged with wanting to scrap the canal "it is just as safe as the Governor is," only capable of being scrapped by the people of the State themselves.

Then the Governor announced that the income this year would exceed that of any other year, and he expressed the hope that the canal would be operated on a business basis. He urged business men, in Chambers of Commerce and otherwise, to further the interests of the canal, and, with reference to the lack of use of the terminals, said:

"It takes ten years to get anything done. I started this agitation in 1919, so I've got three years yet to work on it."

Dr. Finley read parts of a speech made by a Mr. Mitchell at the time the canal was formally opened and waters from rivers all over the world poured into New York Bay. He touched lightly on the history of the canal and its great value in tying the territory of the Middle West to the Eastern seaboard, possibly preventing a division of the country itself.

A tableau was presented showing the "marriage of the waters" at the time the canal was opened, and Governor Clinton's speech on that occasion was read. Elon H. Hooker gave interesting figures regarding the canal and dwelt on the possibility of its further development. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Douglas Robinson spoke briefly of the value of such waterways as the canal to the Navy Department, and Julius Henry Cohen, Counsel of the Port of New York Authority, also spoke.

The marine parade started from Spuyten Duyvil a little after 1 o'clock headed by the U. S. S. Fox and other Naval Reserve vessels while along the side of the line were strung eleven Coast Guard boats. Each ship was decked out in colors and many of the vessels along the shore, from which small crowds viewed the procession, were decorated.

Behind the Government vessels came the city flagship Macom, on which were the members of the canzandal commission, Acting Mayor McKee, Commissioner Goldman of the Department of Plant and Structures and many distinguished guests. Alongside was the Thomas E. Moran, fleet flagship, aboard which was Eugene F. Moran, fleet commodore and Chairman of the Pageant Committee.

Gayly Decked Yachts in Line.

Following closely the Macom and the Moran were the passenger steamers Alexander Hamilton and the City of Keansburg. On each was a large crowd. In the next division were some of the best known pleasure craft about New York, including W. H. Todd's Salema, Barron Collier's Florida, Thomas L. Chadbourne's Rippin, F. S. Fish's Moby Dick, Jules Bellmer's Irwin and Richard M. Cadwalader's Sequoia 2d. William H. Todd was commodore of this division.

As the vessels passed down, the river each one blew a salute so that the siren of the Macom was kept going continuously and those on the shore knew that something unusual was going on. There were groups on the shore, far up town, where the school children had turned out to view the parade, and further down there were small crowds on every pier head, while the crews of the ocean liners, crowded the rail to see the decorated vessels go by. At St. George, S. I., the Moran and the Macom drew up and the vessels that had remained in the parade that far passed in review.

THE PLAY

By J. BROOKS ATKINSON.

Symbolism Flays the Lion.

THE LION TAMER, a comedy in three acts from the French of Alfred Savoir. At the Neighborhood Playhouse.

Arabella.....Dorothy Sands
Angelo.....Otto Hulitzka
Lord John Lonsdale.....Ian Maclaren
Victorine the Adventuress.....Albert Carroll
Cleopatra.....Marc Loebell
Snake Charmer.....Lily Lubell
Clown.....Blanche Tabeau
Program Boy.....George Heller

Under the imposing guise of symbolism in "The Lion Tamer," put on at the Neighborhood Playhouse last evening, Alfred Savoir delivers himself of a great deal of mixed material—satiric, comic, fantastic, brisk, impertinent, philosophical, with considerable plain fiddle-faddle, by the way. In a note in the program, M. Savoir proclaims that no one understood his piece in Paris last season. "That is why I am going to try to explain what I intended to convey," he writes. "Then no one will understand anything at all about it." What he intends to convey is never clear nor important; but much of it is as plain as the nose on one's face.

In the first act, set at the door of a circus tent, M. Savoir writes an excellent satiric one-act comedy about an idealist and a lion tamer, complete and sufficient in itself. In the second act he plunges into an ordinary boulevard farce that sighs and titters outside a bedroom door. In a somewhat superfluous third act he relapses into symbolic shadow-boxing, difficult to follow intelligently without a diagram. The Parisian success of "The Lion Tamer," M. Savoir affirms, was attended with "an absurd and disproportionate hubbub." Symbolism is always so difficult.

Without understanding the subtle truths behind the play, one can at least record some of the details. At the bar just outside a circus tent an English lord explains the vague mission that keeps him forever in the train of this extravaganza. He is waiting for the day when the lions will devour the lion tamer; he hopes to be present when that inevitable tragedy occurs. For to him the lions are far more majestic than their cruel tamer with his slashing whip. But the lion tamer, in his scarlet uniform, laughs in disdain. Fearing him, he says, the lions love him. Well, one need not go too deeply into the intellectual tenets of M. Savoir's fable. It is more to the point to report that Lord John Lonsdale falls in love with the lion tamer's wife; and since the lions refuse to devour their master, Lord John decides to avenge his principles through the rebellious wife. By being unfaithful to her husband she will kill the cruel and ugly nature by which he prevails over the lions.

Does this sound like buncombe? Read M. Savoir's lucid explanation: "The two chief characters in my play are clearly symbolic. One of them, Lord John, represents idealism, intellectuality, justice, beauty and also the distant, but nevertheless inevitable, counterpart of beautiful things: revolt, disorder, heresy, anarchy. The other one, the lion tamer, is power, brutal reality, iniquity, cruelty and vulgarity; but he likewise represents order, civilization, law and—why not say it?—the harmony of the universe." Yes, the cosmos, the invisible, the ultimate mystery beyond the stars, or perhaps M. Savoir's own savoir-faire!

Not all of M. Savoir's satirical table is as abstract and sober as his program note appears to indicate. In the second act he whittles away at the familiar ribaldries of boulevard farce close by the bedroom door. The saucy wife of the lion tamer, it appears, has deliberately decided to be unfaithful and to seek the unhallowed joys of annexing a lover. For this wicked purpose M. Savoir introduces a notorious roué whom no woman, as he says wearily, has been proud enough to resist. If all the salty patter in this scene, skilfully expressed through neat dialogue, seems like the ordinary commercial balderdash of Broadway—if its frisky involutions sound like smart journeyman playwrighting for the jaded business man, one must not forget that "The Lion Tamer" is intellectual drama. And that passport gives it a free entry into the halls of sin and dissipation where only the vulgar soil their garments. Honi soit qui mal y pense.

But "The Lion Tamer" is no looser in its second-act gayety than in its structure as a piece of craftsmanship. Fashioned of ill-related incidents, with many bare spots in between, it runs down spasmodically during the evening, nor does its symbolic frou-frou save it from boredom in the concluding act. As usual, the Neighborhood repertory company gives it a credible performance, directed with imagination in the significant details of circus department. Mr. Maclaren as Lord John Lonsdale describes completely the decline in this gentleman's idealistic fortunes. Mr. Hulicius catches the truculence of the masterful lion-tamer. As Arabella, Miss Sands distinguishes well the various qualities of the capricious wife; she is demure and vulgar by turns, but always a bit of a hoiden.

Visually, at least, "The Lion Tamer" bears more than a casual resemblance to the well-remembered "He Who Gets Slapped" of several years ago. Again we have the bizarre circus atmosphere, echoes of the ring performance, the resplendent uniforms, the bounding clowns, blaring band, the vivacious entrances and the excitement of life under the "big top." Against all this colorful background the full evening regalia of Lord John provides a vivid and illuminating contrast. Miss Bernstein's settings and costumes make excellent use of these possibilities. Even with such generous assistance, however, M. Savoir does not quite succeed in mocking the god who was bored.

Barty Jenny Heard in Lyrics.

Barty Jenny, a Swiss soprano, who has been heard with the Helvetia Maennerchor, sang lyrics in four languages in a well-arranged solo recital at Aeolian Hall last evening. Erno Balogh assisted at the piano. The singer, who has had encouragement from Mmes. Jeritza and Sembrich, was cordially received as she added to her classics a group of Swiss native songs. Though apologizing for a cold that hampered her tones, Miss Jenny sang agreeably and intelligently and received many flowers.

'THE JEWELED TREE' A MYTHOLOGICAL TALE

Garrett Chatfield Pier's "Dramatic Egyptian Fantasy" Proves to Be a Rather Hollow Fable.

THE JEWELED TREE, a "dramatic Egyptian fantasy" in six acts, by Garrett Chatfield Pier; music by Sandor Harmati. Staged by Lawrence Marston; settings by Willy Pogany; produced by the Pierce-Rothkan Corporation. At the Forty-eighth Street Theatre.

Thesp was produced last night at the Forty-eighth Street Theatre for some reason or other—probably because, according to all available information, its author is an Egyptologist—a dramatic fantasy of the Eighteenth Egyptian Dynasty which, if your history is a bit rusty, was around the period of him who returned in all his glory not so long ago as King of the rotogravure sections—Tut-ankh-Amen. "The Jeweled Tree" is the name of the exhibition; its author is Garrett Chatfield Pier, who is said to have been connected with the Metropolitan Museum of Art for five years.

Mr. Pier thus is doubtless correct in his mythology; the settings and costumes are probably accurate, and his story more than likely has been assembled by dint of painful research. But this fantasy's place in the theatre is somewhat doubtful. A harmless and artless conceit, it seems destined to suffer cruelly in the relentless competition of the Times Square play marts.

However commendable his intentions and sincere his efforts, Mr. Pier's concoction emerges in its transference to the stage as a somewhat hollow and pretentious fable. Pure Egyptian it may be, but to those not so well versed in the lore of that glamorous land it seemed last night to be synthetic—a combination of the mythology and folk tales of several countries, not neglecting the Scandinavian.

To achieve success, such an attempt at dramatic writing requires besides a definite literary ability and knowledge of craftsmanship, an interpretation in the hands of trained actors. "The Jeweled Tree" unfortunately is presented by a company which might be a group of amateur players in one of their more expansive moments, although Leslie King, Walter Petrie and Olive Valerie labor sometimes effectively with the materials at hand.

The production has been given settings by Willy Pogany which rangs from a matter-of-fact Egyptian throne room to an imaginative scene at the Sea of Forgetfulness, particularly mentionable for the effect of depth it achieves. There is also a ballet and incidental music has been written by Sandor Harmati. Perhaps the incidental music should have been stressed more, for "The Jeweled Tree" has in it the makings of at least one opera libretto.

GOOD DEAL OF FUN IN 'BUY, BUY, BABY'

New Farce of Innuendo by Authors of 'Cradle Snatchers' Is Given by an Excellent Cast.

BUY, BUY BABY, a farce in three acts, by Russell Medcraft and Norma Mitchell, based on a play by Francis R. Bellamy and Lawton Mackall. Produced by Bertram Harrison. At the Princess Theatre.

Betty Hamilton.....Shirley Booth
Norah.....Mabel Colcord
Harold Boland.....George Meeker
Pauline Lunt.....Veree Teasdale
Janice Marvin.....Laura Hope Crews
Ronald Bradford.....Edwin Nicander
Carteret Flotten.....Malcolm Duncan
Esmeralda Pottle.....Alison Skipworth
A Burglar.....Charles Mather
Henry Marvin.....Thurston Hall

The weapon of attack in "Buy, Buy, Baby" is not exactly the rapier. The authors of "Cradle Snatchers" have again turned their hands to a farce of innuendo, nd the resulting play was revealed last night at the Princess Theatre before an audience which seemed to find a good deal of it funny. "Buy, Buy, Baby" is broader than "Cradle Snatchers" by several strokes, and that is no faint praise. Whether or not it is funny must be left to the individual beholder.

The idea underlying the new play is perhaps a legitimate one for farce—certainly a farce may not be attacked because it is basically rowdy. In this instance a huge financial prize is dangled before three couples—the winning of which is contingent upon the birth of an heir. The possibilities of this notion are crystal clear. The authors have neglected none of them, except, perhaps, those which might have been handled with delicacy.

To keep alive this notion for three full acts requires no little invention and intriguing—the contriving of fanciful schemes to keep rival couples apart, consequent misunderstandings between lovers, scenes played at cross purposes. The result is a farce of the old school, even though its idea be of today.

A cast of generally excellent players has been encouraged to shout from the rostrum the sturdy nuances of the comedy, and situations already obvious are thus additionally pointed. Laura Hope Crews, Alison Skipworth, Edwin Nicander and Malcolm Duncan are the principal players.

FOR HER ... a CHICKERING ... not alone because the gentlewomen of each generation, from Mrs. Daniel Webster down, have made the Chickering the founding stone of their homes ... not alone because from Liszt to Lhévinne the Chickering has been the choice of the world's most sensitive musicians ... but also because nothing you can give her will so delicately compliment her good taste as your gift of the Chickering tone ... ripened by more than a century of knowing how.

Chickering Hall offers Chickering Pianos from $875 up ... Ampicos from $695 up ... remade instruments for as little as $125 ... genuine Orthophonic Victrolas from $95 up. All are sold on Easy Terms. Your present piano taken in part payment toward another piano.

WOULD LIMIT FREE LIST.

A. P. Tistel for Restriction of Federal Publications to Cut Waste.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 7.—Alton P. Tistel, Superintendent of Documents in the Government printing office at Washington, advocated restriction of free distribution of Government publications to eliminate waste, in an address before the forty-eighth annual convention of The American Library Association at the Ambassador today.

"Experience has shown that persons who have real use for the publications will gladly pay the nominal price charged to cover the cost of printing and binding, which for thousands of publications is only five cents," he said.

Calling attention to the great store of valuable scientific, industrial and economic information in Government publications, the speaker stressed the importance of libraries as intermediaries between the Government publishing offices and the reading public.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Recovery in Stocks, Followed by Renewed Break—Call Money 4½%.

It was characteristic of the speculative fraternity that, when yesterday's early recovery in stock market prices failed to hold and was followed by the fourth severe decline of the week, Wall Street should have begun to seek for discouraging facts in the trade situation. In so far as these were insufficient, a change of attitude on the part of the large investment community was pictured. Since Wall Street always insists on new and spectacular reasons for a sweeping movement of prices, the explanation that an overdone rise necessarily means drastic correction will no doubt make slight impression. But a mere comparison of values at various recent dates will show at least that a vulnerable position must have been created.

In some respects the three stocks, General Motors, du Pont and United States Steel, have been typical both of this week's reaction and of the rise which preceded it. At its low point of yesterday, General Motors had fallen 15 points from last week's closing; but it ended last week 56 points above the price of a year ago today. Du Pont's extreme decline this week has been 24½ points, but at yesterday's lowest it was selling 134 points above last October. United States Steel had lost 10½ points from last Saturday, but its low price for this week was 22½ points above that of a year ago. Action and reaction as displayed under such circumstances cannot reasonably be taken to measure enhancement or reduction in the prospects, either of the prosperous companies whose shares have been thus violently driven about or of American industry as a whole.

To the extent that this week's break in prices has resulted from purely speculative operations for the fall, there will at some point appear a repurchasing movement which will put prices up again; the market will have regained equilibrium when speculative accounts "pyramided" in the preceding excessive rise have returned to normal proportions. Some of yesterday's losses, even after early advances of 3 to 4 points, were substantial; net declines ranged from 4 to 8 points in several active shares. Transactions again passed the two-and-a-half million share mark.

It was evident from yesterday's weekly return of the Bank of England, that the test of the bank's power to keep up its gold reserve is now being strongly applied. During the week the bank lost £566,000 gold, which is the largest net outflow since the closing week of last November and has been exceeded in only six weeks since the British resumption of gold payments. Large as the past week's withdrawals were, however, they were less by £1,372,000 than in the same week of last October, when the full month took £20,000,000 gold out of the bank. In that month New York was drawing heavily; London sent $6,500,000 to New York alone, Germany, Holland and Switzerland being the other large consignees. But New York is not now drawing gold from London, and is unlikely to do so if sterling holds, as it did yesterday, a full cent above the rate of last October. It is also to be observed that, whereas the Bank of England had lost £4,000,000 gold last year in the two-month period prior to the present date, it has gained £3,000,000 during the corresponding period this year.

The Bank of France made a less favorable showing for the week in note circulation and on account of the Government than had been hoped for. The Treasury increased its borrowings 300,000,000 francs and the note issues rose 963,900,000. This makes the fortnight's total "month-end advances" to the Government 900,000,000; which is not, however, relatively large, the borrowings at the end of August having been 900,000,000. But note circulation has expanded 1,457,000,000 in the two past weeks and is only 1,924,000,000 below the high point of Aug. 5. This shows (what had been predicted beforehand) that it is less easy to control the French currency expansion than to reduce the Government's indebtedness.

CARRIERS IN AUGUST NETTED $133,008,263

6.20% ON THE VALUATION

Net Operating Income for 8 Months $744,944,169—Large Gains by Roads in Western District.

The important railroads of the country enjoyed profits of $133,008,263 in August this year, compared with $124,943,508 in the same month last year, the Bureau of Railway Economics announced yesterday. This is equivalent to a return of 6.20 per cent. on their tentative valuation compared with 5.99 per cent. in August, 1925.

Operating revenues totaled $578,822,690 compared with $555,493,701 in the previous year, or an increase of 4.2 per cent. Operating expenses totaled $399,329,821, against $399,898,354 last year, an increase of 2.7 per cent.

The returns are the largest of any August on record, and lack only $4,000,000 of being the largest profits reported by the carriers in any month in their history. It is generally expected by railroad men, however, that they will be exceeded by both September and October.

In contrast to the general prosperity fourteen Class I roads operated at a loss in August, of which six were in the Eastern district, one in the Southern and seven in the Western.

For the first eight months of the year the carriers received net operating income of $744,944,169, compared with $664,127,553 in the corresponding period last year. Gross revenues were $4,163,562,608, compared with $3,974,000,198, an increase of $289,562,410, or 4.8 per cent. Operating expenses were $3,094,130,636, compared with $3,011,196,508, an increase of 2.8 per cent.

Net railway operating income of the railroads in the Eastern district during the eight months totaled $389,093,059, compared with $352,789,444 last year. Gross was $2,096,277,120, an increase of 4.7 per cent. over the corresponding period last year, while operating expenses amounted to $1,554,993,333, an increase of 3 per cent. August brought net of $65,758,597, compared with $64,701,975.

In the Southern district profits were $105,483,057, compared with $102,550,493 for the first eight months of last year. For August the Southern roads reported net of $12,943,409, while in the same month last year they received $15,105,873. At that time the Florida boom was in full progress.

The carriers of the Western district contributed the majority of the increase for the country as a whole in August, showing net operating income of $54,306,262, against $45,135,660. They also reported $250,368,023 for the eight months, compared with $208,817,621 in the same period of 1925. This is the first time in many months that the Western district has not retarded the showing rather than improved it. Results for the country as a whole are shown below in tabular form:

FEW RAILWAY APPEALS FROM TAXES GRANTED

New Jersey Supreme Court Passes on 100 Assessments Near or in Jersey City.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 7.—With few exceptions, the Supreme Court today affirmed assessments on railroad property in or near Jersey City valued at close to $50,000,000. The litigation involved more than thirty appeals affecting more than 100 pieces of property.

The appeals were directed against assessments made by Jersey City's tax authorities from 1921 to 1924 and by the State Board of Taxes and Assessment in 1924 and 1925. It was argued that the valuations were excessive, that faulty principles had been applied in arriving at the figures and that the property, being devoted to railroad purposes, was without a general market.

A reduction was allowed on an assessment of $25,000 an acre on terminal tract of 243 acres owned by the New York Bay Railroad at Greenville. It was pointed out that 105 acres of the tract were under water and the valuation of that portion of the land was cut to $16,000 an acre. A cut from $32,500 to $30,000 an acre was granted on a 230-acre tract in Communipaw Avenue in Jersey City.

Aside from the New York Bay Railroad, the appellants were the Pennsylvania Railroad, the United New Jersey Railroad and Canal Company, the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Long Dock Railroad Company, the Delaware & Lackawanna Railroad, the Lehigh Valley and the Lehigh Valley Harbor Terminal Railroad Company.

CONFER ON RAIL MERGER.

Van Sweringens and Erie Directors Discuss Nickel Plate Plan.

O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen arrived in this city yesterday, and held conferences with members of the Erie Railroad Board. The meetings were secret and no information of the proceedings was made public.

It is understood, however, that the Erie directors are holding out for a contingent guarantee of two-thirds of a share of new Nickel Plate preferred for each share of Erie preferred in the proposed merger, whereas under the modified terms offered last July, they were to receive only one-half a share of the new company, or a 4 per cent. rental dividend.

A. O. Smith Corporation Net Rises.

The A. O. Smith Corporation of Milwaukee reports a net income for the twelve months ended July 31 last of $1,127,000 after interest, depreciation, Federal taxes, &c., against $1,152,014 in the previous twelve months. Profit and loss surplus at July 31 stood at $6,286,000 against $4,869,359 the previous year. Current assets were $9,019,000 and current liabilities, $5,186,000. Cash on hand was $493,000 and inventories, $3,951,000.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News, Comment and Incident, On the Stock Exchange and In the Financial Markets.

In yesterday's early trading on the New York Stock Exchange numerous scattered recoveries occurred, reaching 2 to 4 points in active shares. The recovery ceased abruptly, however, when the selling, which on Wednesday had convinced Wall Street that actual liquidation was under way, was resumed in force. Much of the selling was ascribed to impairment of speculative margins. While sentiment regarding the credit situation was reassured by the maintenance of the 4 per cent. Reserve Bank rates in Boston, the usual uncertainty was manifest regarding yesterday's decision on the New York rate. The local traction stocks displayed strength at a time when the general list was sinking. The close showed net gains in Brooklyn-Manhattan and Interborough. A few industrial and railway shares, like Atlantic Coast Line, J. I. Case, Hudson Motors, Warner Brothers A and Coca Cola, were strong and active, while wide losses were shown by such leading issues as American Smelting, Atchison, Atlantic Refining, Chesapeake & Ohio, du Pont, Erie, General Motors, North American, Postum Cereal, Pullman and United States Industrial Alcohol.

Yesterday's stock market marked the fifth consecutive day of falling prices. This fact was used by many observers to support the opinion that the market is "dragging bottom," but that view was not by any means unanimously maintained. Many experienced watchers of the market seemed to believe yesterday that the decline has not ended and that further sharp declines may be expected. The reaction, it was admitted in many quarters, is one which the market has long needed. Predictions of an early recovery, however, which were quite numerous, had opposed to them an equal number of forecasts of a "definite collapse." This is always the case in Wall Street at such junctures.

Money Rates Stiffen Again.

Indications that the market is less interested in the credit situation at present than it is in some other factors were seen yesterday in the fact that the only brief rallying power which was displayed came after the call loan rate had been advanced to 4½ per cent. While only about $10,000,000 of loans was called, there were indications that the banks considered the rates of the previous day too low, and that 4 per cent. money was hardly to be expected for any length of time at this season. Another factor in yesterday's firmness of money was the operations of the banks toward strengthening their accounts with the Federal Reserve banks, these transactions usually taking place toward the end of the week. Talk of an advance in the rediscount rate seemed to have subsided to a certain extent. One opinion expressed was that, if the next couple of weeks were passed without an advance, it was possible that no action would be taken until around the first of the new year.

The "Leaders" Decline.

The acute and sustained weakness in General Motors, lately an outstanding leader of the market, illustrated strikingly the reactionary character of yesterday's movement. This stock, which sold up to 173½ recently, was under such pressure yesterday that it fluctuated 10 points, which approached a record for the present shares. The stock was dumped upon the market in large quantities, total transactions being 388,700 shares. The selling, in the opinion of interests close to the management, was entirely unrelated to the earnings situation.

What Does the Market Reflect?

The old Wall Street adage that large movements on the stock market reflect business conditions six months in the future, one financial expert remarked yesterday, lost many of its followers after the market's recovery from the March break, and it probably will lose many more after the current decline. The market does not reflect, and has not lately reflected, business conditions either now or in 1927, in his opinion, but the speculative activities of "a few professional gamblers." It is ridiculous, he added, to forecast a depression in 1927 when present indications point to a prosperous year, although not one in which high records will be established in all lines of business activity. But it was equally ridiculous to argue that the recent upward flight of prices was a safe and conservative indication of this Autumn's actual prosperity.

Recovery of Western Roads.

It was remarked in railway circles yesterday that it is a rather encouraging sign of the return of prosperity to an important section of the country when the railroads of the Western district show an increase of nearly 20 per cent. in profits for August of this year over August of last year. A survey of the first eight months also shows that about the same percentage of increase has been maintained for the longer period. Total profits were $250,368,023, or nearly 5 per cent. on tentative valuation, compared with $208,817,621, or about 4.30 per cent., in the same period of 1925.

Utility Shares Suffer.

The "utility group" took its share of pressure yesterday. Despite affirmations by officials that there was no news development to warrant the decline, North American broke more than 3 points at one time and closed for a net loss of 2¾ points. American Water Works closed for a net loss of more than 3 points. Consolidated Gas lost 2 points at one time and closed for a net loss of more than a point. Brooklyn Union Gas was easier, but Brooklyn Edison, which broke on Tuesday, was firmer.

Strength in German Bonds.

While the strength in German bonds was not so marked yesterday as on the previous day, the high levels reached by these securities continued to attract attention in the financial district. Attention was focused on these bonds this week by the rather remarkable reception accorded to a $10,000,000 new issue of State of Hamburg bonds, which was subscribed no less than twenty times over when offered here this week. The buying of this week has affected many German municipal and industrial issues. This has been somewhat in contrast with the irregular movements in domestic bonds, which for the most part are on about the same level as at the close of the previous week.

Aid for the Cotton Belt.

Intimations made at the beginning of the week were sustained yesterday in advices from Washington and New Orleans stating that Federal financial aid would be forthcoming in substantial amounts to make it possible for cooperative associations to market this year's cotton crop in an orderly manner. The seriousness of the situation in the South appeared to be generally realized, and belief in the necessity of a large holding movement has lately been more outspokenly expressed. Meanwhile, both trading and speculative circles are centring their expectations on the Government's crop estimate, due today. Should the estimate fail to make a considerable increase over the 15,810,000-bale forecast of a fortnight ago, there will be surprise in many quarters, and, presumably, rapid recovery in cotton prices.

MONEY.

THURSDAY, OCT. 7, 1926.

Posting of renewal rate at 4¼ per cent., which some lenders considered too cheap in view of recent stiffness of market, brought withdrawals of approximately $10,000,000 and subsequent rise to 4½ per cent. for new money. No outside market prevailed under the board figure. In time money there was a fairly liberal supply but demand very much lighter. All maturities from 90 days to six months were traded in at 5 per cent., a fractional concession charge in from early week. Call loans against acceptances followed the ease in fixed periods and dropped ¼ to ⅜ per cent., lowest in a month. Commercial paper remained quiet and unchanged in discount.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Brazilian Milreis Sags—Credit Conditions and Uncertainty Over Stabilization Blamed.

A sharp break in the Brazilian milreis to 14.25 cents, an overnight loss of 9-16 cent, featured yesterday's foreign exchanges. Bankers were at a loss to offer any specific explanation for the sheer decline, although the opinion was proffered that credit conditions in Brazil had become more or less straitened as a result of the uprush in exchange during the Summer months and which culminated in a high of 15¾ cents, highest in several years. Another suggestion was that in the cabled reports of the address of President-elect Luis no mention was made of the actual point of stabilization, which led to liquidation by longs and selling by speculators.

Vigorous buying of the Italian lire in the last few minutes sent the rate up to 3.88¾ cents for checks, highest in five months. The character of the buying, which closed the day at its highest point, was traceable to a prominent banking agency. The Belgian franc was strong at 2.75½ cents, on reports of a stabilization loan abroad. The French franc was quiet and unchanged at 2.86½ cents. Sterling likewise ruled firm at $4.84 13-16. All the Scandinavians improved, but the Swiss, Holland and Spanish descriptions were weak.

Far Easterns held steady and no important changes were noted. The Canadian dollar dipped to 1-64 premium, from 1-16 on Wednesday.

ELBERT H. GARY 80 TODAY.

Steel Man Expected to Say Something on Retirement Reports.

Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, will be eighty years old today. There will be no formal celebration at the Steel Corporation, but Judge Gary will receive newspapermen at 2:15 o'clock, at which time it is expected that he may say something regarding the numerous reports of his approaching retirement.

Thus far he has given no indication of any intention to relinquish control of the corporation, which he has directed for more than twenty-five years.

Terminal Trust Adds to Board.

With the elections yesterday of D. H. McConnell, H. S. Holt and John S. Sickels the directorate of the Terminal Trust Company was increased to ten members, since the company took over the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' Cooperative Trust Company a few weeks ago. Five more directors will be elected within the next several weeks. The directors authorized a building and loan department and an advisory board.

TRAIN SAFETY CONTROL NOT DELAYED, HE SAYS

W. J. Harahan Answers Charge in Magazine Article—10,000 Miles Equipped, He Says.

W. J. Harahan, President of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, and General Chairman of the Committee on Train Control of the Association of Railway Executives, made public a letter yesterday which he has sent to George Harvey, editor of The North American Review, replying to an anonymous article appearing in that publication entitled "Murder on the Rails." The article charged the railroads with undue delay in installing automatic train control devices.

In his letter Mr. Harahan said that all but 500 miles of 7,641 ordered to be equipped by the first order of the Interstate Commerce Commission had been completed, which made it necessary to equip nearly 4,000 locomotives.

Of the 7,440 miles of track required under a second order, Mr. Harahan said a total of 2,600 miles had been completed on thirteen roads and that additional mileage was being completed each month.

"The two orders of the commission affect only about 7¼ per cent. of the total mileage of the Class I railroads," said Mr. Harahan, "and to equip all the passenger lines with train control devices, should a practical device be developed, would involve an estimated expenditure of not less than $665,000,000, which cost eventually would fall on the shoulders of the public.

"The article assumes that a practical device has been perfected. It is the opinion of the vast majority of railroad officials, including signal and operating officers, that no system of automatic train control has yet been developed to that state of physical performance which renders it feasible to warrant its application on the railroads on the scale that is necessary to equip the entire country."

Newberry Sales Nearly Doubled.

The J. J. Newberry Company reports sales of $812,361 in September, against $550,762 in Sept., 1925, an increase of 47.5 per cent. Sales in the nine months to Sept. 30 were $5,960,513 against $4,009,347 in the same period last year, an increase of 45.4 per cent.

INVESTMENT SERVICE INCREASE LAID TO WAR

Shifting financial conditions and complex post-war investment problems are encouraging the development in this country of many new types of investment service, both institutional and personal, according to Leland R. Robinson, Trustee and Vice President of the International Securities Trust of America, who was the speaker at yesterday's conference on foreign investments conducted by New York University in cooperation with the Investment Bankers Association. The meeting was held at the Stock Exchange.

Professor George Edwards, who introduced Mr. Robinson, spoke of the large volume of foreign finance in this country since the war and directed attention to the variety of resulting problems. "The flotation and distribution of foreign securities," he said, "makes it increasingly important for American bankers to survey the financial organization for the placement and assimilation of these securities and to keep open-minded in developing investment agencies which will answer new needs."

Mr. Robinson said that these new needs are the result of America's changed orientation in international finance and of the increasing variety and varying quality of investment securities offered to the growing mass of American investors.

"The result has been," he said, "that an increasing number of investment banking houses have developed within the last five years more or less adequate facilities for investment counsel to their clients. It is doubtful whether any other country has seen more striking developments in this field."

SUES TO END TICKERS OF CONSOLIDATED

CITES OLD CONTRACTS

Reviews Ottinger's Proceeding and Asserts Right to End Its Agreements.

Reviving a legal controversy that is nearly forty years old, the New York Stock Exchange, through its President, E. H. H. Simmons, began a suit in the Supreme Court in New York County yesterday to enjoin the Western Union Telegraph Company from furnishing stock ticker service to the Consolidated Stock Exchange and to restrain the Consolidated from using or selling such service. This action which, if successful, will deprive the Consolidated of quotations that are essential to its operation as a securities market, has been forecast for some days.

The New York Stock Exchange contends that the Consolidated has not lawfully acquired the right to receive the Stock Exchange quotations from the Western Union. For many years prior to 1914, the suit sets forth, the Stock Exchange furnished continuous quotations to the Western Union as the lessee of the Gold and Stock Telegraph Company under contracts which permitted the Western Union to distribute such quotations as contracted with the Western Union for them. The Consolidated obtained the quotations under one of these contracts.

The Stock Exchange, in "order to prevent the misuse of its continuous quotations by bucket shops and other persons who were using the same for fraudulent purposes," in 1914 terminated its existing contract with the Western Union and entered into a new contract dated July 1, 1914. The new contract, it is set forth, authorized the Western Union to deliver quotations to subscribers provided "each of such subscribers should sign in duplicate an application addressed to said Western Union and approved by said Stock Exchange."

New Contract Is Cited.

On March 15, 1921, the suit continues, the Stock Exchange entered into a new contract with the Western Union. The Western Union agreed in this contract, it is asserted, that it would discontinue furnishing the quotations to any person, whether a member or a non-member of the Stock Exchange, when that Exchange notified the Western Union of its disapproval of that person. The Consolidated, it is set forth, made the application required on May 29, 1915, at which time the Stock Exchange gave its approval. At that time the Consolidated was housed at Broad and Beaver Streets.

The Stock Exchange contends that a supplemental agreement was entered into at the same time, which provided that the furnishing of ticker service might be terminated by ten days' notice served "by one of the parties on each of the other parties."

Quotations were furnished to the Consolidated until Sept. 29, 1926, when the supplemental agreement was terminated by the Stock Exchange.

The suit relates the circumstances of the State Attorney General's action against the Consolidated, in which it is charged the Exchange was engaging in fraudulent practices in violation of the Martin act. The Stock Exchange alleges that the Consolidated failed to comply with a stipulation entered into with the Attorney General by which that official consented to the dismissal of the action against the Consolidated for an injunction to restrain it from doing business. The feature of the stipulation which is alleged to have been violated reads:

"Every commission house shall maintain intact a capital at all times equal to not less than 5 per cent. of the market value of all stock carried for customers, and a minimum capital of $25,000. None but commission houses shall buy or sell securities for the public as brokers or charge commissioners as brokers or receive any accounts, money or property of customers."

Thought It Intended to Quit.

The Stock Exchange asserts that because no business had been transacted on said Consolidated Exchange after the signing of the stipulattion and because its building had been sold and its assets were to be distributed the officers of the Stock Exchange, up to the date on which it was informed the Consolidated had requested the Western Union to move the said three tickers to premises in 14-16 Pearl Street, believed that said Consolidated Exchange intended to cease doing business as an exchange. The Stock Exchange, therefore, took no action to compel the discontinuance of the delivery of its quotations prior to Sept. 17, 1926, when the Stock Exchange "served a written notice upon the Consolidated Exchange, the Western Union and the Gold and Stock Telegraph Company, stating that it elected to terminate such agreement and that it designated Sept. 27, 1926, as the date for the terminattion thereof."

Correspondence between the Consolidated and Western Union, in which the former contends that the use of the Stock Exchange tickers is protected by an injunction issued many years ago, is included in the court petition. The Western Union, while doubting that "these injunctions are still in force or are now effective," felt that "it would be more orderly not to discontinue furnishing continuous quotations to the Consolidated until the question has been passed upon by the courts."

The Stock Exchange takes the position that no injunction order requiring the delivery of the ticker quotations to the Consolidated has been entered in any action in which the Stock Exchange was a party.

Exchange Adopts Plan to End Raising of Small Certificates

A plan to prevent the raising of certificates of stock for small amounts to larger amounts has been devised by the New York Stock Exchange and disclosed by E. V. D. Cox, Secretary. "In altering the certificates," he said, "the numerals originally punched out of the tens and units columns on the side of the certificates were replaced by numerals cut from other certificates, the insertions being held in place by means of sales tax stamps attached to the reverse side.

"Upon consideration of the matter by the Committee on Securities and Committee on Stock List, it has been decided that certificates for less than 100 shares shall bear a printed statement on the reverse side, directly back of the columns of tens and units, to the effect that the space must not be covered in any way.

"The Committee on Securities deems it advisable to inaugurate the practice as soon as possible and therefore requests the cooperation of companies whose stocks are listed on the Exchange to arrange to have all blank certificates for less than 100 shares at present on hand and all new certificates which may be ordered imprinted with such a statement."

ATTACKS RAIL RATE ON BITUMINOUS COAL

E. J. Berwind at I. C. C. Hearing Says Pennsylvania Fields Suffer and South Gains.

P. R. R. EXPERT FEARS LOSS

Testifies That Reduced Schedule Might Cut Freight Revenue of His Road One-fourth.

The railroad rates on bituminous coal as they stand, are fundamentally unsound, Edward J. Berwind, President of the White Coal Mining Company of Pennsylvania and the owner of coal interests in West Virginia and Kentucky, told the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday at the hearing on rates from Central Pennsylvania mines.

J. O. Carbine of Pittsburgh, coal rate expert for the Pennsylvania Railroad, testified that a reduction of 10 cents a ton in bituminous coal shipped eastward from the Western Pennsylvania and Western Maryland coal fields, would mean the loss of approximately $5,000,000 yearly to the railroads.

Mr. Carbine asserted that trouble and probable disaster would follow any reduction of the rates, and that some roads might be eliminated from the business of carrying Pennsylvania coal. According to Mr. Carbine 25 per cent. of the total freight revenue of the Pennsylvania Railroad comes from hauling bituminous coal. During 1925, the witness said, the total freight revenue of that road amounted to $471,323,865, and of that $112,160,275 came from bituminous coal traffic.

Mr. Berwind said that owing to the high cost of moving coal on Northern railroads as compared with Southern roads, and because of better facilities here for receiving water-shipped coal, the amount shipped to New York Harbor from the Pennsylvania fields had decreased, while shipments from West Virginia increased correspondingly during the last five years. In the past there were no facilities for handling water-shipped coal here, but now, he said, several large corporations had built docks for coal-carrying vessels. These facilities have decreased the cost of transporting Southern coal to New York from 50 to 60 cents a ton, he asserted.

"The Northern coal operators could stand the disproportionate mile rate before the war," he said, "but they cannot since these new facilities have been made. The docks built in New York Harbor have wiped out the old differentials. The rates as they stand are fundamentally unsound."

Mr. Berwind when cross-examined said that it was economically sound for him to move coal through Hampton Roads to New England, but not to New York. He said that Hampton Roads was the best shipping port on the Atlantic coast.

When asked by J. Van Dyke Norman, general counsel for the Southern West Virginia High Volatile Coal Fields, if the New York Edison Company and the Consolidated Gas Company should not benefit by their investment in building suitable coal docks, Mr. Berwind replied that he did not think any business sound that could not be put on the same rate basis.

The hearing will be resumed this morning.

These bonds are direct obligations of the Houston Independent School District, payable from an unlimited ad valorem tax levied against all the taxable property within the District.

The Houston Independent School District contains all of the territory embraced in the City of Houston and eighteen square miles of adjacent territory. There are 69 school buildings in the District, and eight new High Schools are now under construction.

Houston, the third largest City in Texas and county seat of Harris County, is the leading commercial, financial and railway center of the southeastern part of the State. It is served by fourteen railroads and by the Houston Ship Channel which furnishes direct access to the Gulf of Mexico for ocean-going vessels of heavy tonnage. Since the opening of the Ship Channel, Houston has become the second cotton port of the world, exporting over one million bales in the year ended July 31, 1924. Houston is one of the greatest inland cotton markets in the world, handling a large part of the crop of Texas, which produces over one-quarter of the cotton in the United States. The leading industries of Houston include oil, lumber, cattle and rice. Banking facilities are afforded by twenty-two institutions with resources of over $138,000,000.

West Virginia Water Service Company

First Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds, Series "A"

Dated August 1, 1926 Due August 1, 1951

Principal and semi-annual interest (February 1 and August 1) payable in New York City. Denominations $1,000 and $500. Interest payable without deduction for any Federal income tax not in excess of two per cent. Refund of Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Minnesota, Kansas and California taxes, not to exceed four mills, Maryland tax not to exceed four and one-half mills, Kentucky, West Virginia and District of Columbia taxes not to exceed five mills, Michigan exemption tax not to exceed five mills, Virginia tax not to exceed five and one-half mills, and Massachusetts income tax not to exceed six per cent., to resident holders upon timely and proper application. The Equitable Trust Company of New York, Trustee.

The following is summarized by Mr. A. W. Cuddeback, Vice-President of the Company, from his letter to G. L. Ohrstrom & Co., Inc.:

Business: The West Virginia Water Service Company, all the common stock of which is owned by the Federal Water Service Corporation, will supply water for domestic and industrial purposes to Charleston, Welch and Princeton, West Virginia. The total population is estimated to be in excess of 75,000. Charleston, the capital of West Virginia, is a rapidly growing city with a widely diversified industrial business including one of the largest plate glass concerns in America. It ranks second in the production of chlorine in this country and includes plants of the Union Carbide & Carbon Corporation, the du Pont Company, and other companies which have been attracted to the territory by the opportunities of excellent transportation, a sound labor supply and cheap power. Welch is the county seat of McDowell County and is the distributing center of a rich adjacent coal and agricultural district. Princeton, an important shipping point for the famous Pocahontas coal fields, is the county seat of Mercer County and is the location of the shops of the Virginian Railway.

Earnings: The earnings of the properties are reported as follows:

Gross Revenues	$443,191	$437,585
Operating Expenses, Maintenance and Taxes, other than Federal income taxes	207,527	207,156
Balance	$235,664	$230,429

Inasmuch as the principal properties have for some time been operated in conjunction with electric light properties, the above operating expenses are partially estimated. However, based upon the operating ratios of other comparable subsidiary companies of the Federal Water Service Corporation, this estimate is considered conservative.

Security: This issue of first mortgage bonds, which constitutes the only funded indebtedness of the Company, will be secured, in the opinion of counsel, by a direct first mortgage on all of the physical properties of the Company consisting of land, water mains, reservoirs, pumping stations and other equipment. The depreciated value of the Company's properties, based on average cost prices of the past ten years, is estimated to be in excess of $3,500,000. The Company operates under the rate supervision of the Public Service Commission of West Virginia.

Physical Properties: The pumping equipment is capable of delivering 30,250,000 gallons per day as compared with an average daily consumption of approximately 8,000,000 gallons. Water for the system serving Charleston is obtained from the Elk River, constituting a practically limitless source. The supply for Welch and Princeton is derived from driven wells that penetrate an underground flow of exceptionally pure character. Steady and substantial growth is evidenced by the fact that service connections now number 15,092 as compared with 11,435 in 1921.

These bonds are offered when, as and if issued and received by us and subject to the approval of counsel, Messrs. White & Case.

FINANCIAL ENCYCLOPAEDIA

"HIDDEN" ASSETS: In making appraisals, it is sometimes shown that physical assets have been really undervalued in the balance sheet. This is only one of various ways in which assets may be written down. Good will, franchises and patents or royalties are often written off entirely, or carried at a nominal valuation of $1, and tangible property such as office furniture in good condition is frequently charged off against profits.

A "hidden" asset, then, may be described as property of undoubted value which is not accounted for among the assets on the balance sheet. It sometimes happens that the quotations for the securities of such companies are lower than are really warranted and a careful search for "hidden" assets may disclose facts which justify their purchase.

NEW CONCERN TO SELL TRUST CERTIFICATES

Insuranshares Corporation to Offer Securities in Units of $50, Says Announcement.

Organization plans for the Insuranshares Corporation, which will distribute holdings of capital stock in first-class insurance companies to the public, through the sale of investment trust certificates in units of $50 each, was announced yesterday. The organization committee consists of Bennett Ellison, President of the New York Board of Fire Underwriters and member of Hoey & Ellison; Sterling Pile of John & Higgins, and Carl Ehlermann.

The corporation's announced capital will be $2,500,000, made up of 25,000 shares of $100 par preference stock, to be issued at par for cash, and 50,000 shares of no par common stock, both issues to carry voting rights. Of the issue, $500,000 is being sold by private subscription. It is expected that insurance companies will purchase 10,000 or more shares of the preference stock and the remainder will be offered to the public.

Mr. Pile said that the purpose of the corporation was to give an opportunity to small investors to invest in securities from which they have practically been barred by high price or unavailability.

Week's Balance Sheet of the Reserves Reveals $93,000,000 Drop in Discounts

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—The consolidated statement of the condition of the Federal Reserve banks on Oct. 6, made public by the Federal Reserve Board, shows reductions for the week of $93,100,000 in bill and security holdings, $37,000,000 in member bank reserve deposits and $28,100,000 in Government deposits, together with increases of $14,500,000 in Federal Reserve note circulation and $4,300,000 in cash reserves.

Holdings of discounted bills declined $93,000,000 and of acceptances purchased in open market $2,400,000, while Government security holdings increased $4,300,000.

All of the Federal Reserve banks report smaller holdings of discounted bills, with the exception of Cleveland and Minneapolis, which reported increases of $5,200,000 and $1,000,000, respectively. The principal decrease in discounts during the week were: New York, $45,800,000; Boston, $32,100,000; St. Louis, $6,600,000; Dallas, $4,400,000; San Francisco, $3,700,000; Atlanta, $3,400,000 and Richmond, $3,200,000.

Open market acceptance holdings declined $14,100,000 at the New York Bank, this decrease being largely offset, however, by increases at most of the other Reserve Banks.

The system's holdings of Treasury certificates were $8,900,000 above and of United States bonds and Treasury notes, $4,700,000 below the previous week's totals.

The principal changes in Federal Reserve note circulation during the week include declines of $3,500,000 and $2,500,000 respectively, at the Cleveland and Philadelphia banks, and increases of $4,300,000 at New York, $3,300,000 at Atlanta and $2,500,000 at Chicago.

(Closed Mortgage)

Dated September 1, 1926 — Due September 1, 1946

Interest payable March 1 and September 1 in Boston, without deduction of Federal income tax up to 2%; Massachusetts income taxes, if any, Pennsylvania and Connecticut four mill taxes will be refunded upon appropriate request. Tax exempt in Massachusetts beginning 1930. Coupon bonds in denominations of $1000 and $500 registerable as to principal. Redeemable in whole or in part on 30 days' notice on any interest date at 105 and interest until September 1, 1936, premiums decreasing thereafter 1/2% each year.

THE NATIONAL SHAWMUT BANK OF BOSTON, TRUSTEE

Mr. George Wyner, Chairman of the Trustees of Ritz-Arlington Trust, summarizes his letter regarding this issue of bonds as follows:

Property: The Trustees of Ritz-Arlington Trust will acquire the plot of land at the corner of Arlington and Newbury Streets, Boston, comprising 15,066 square feet of land, and are erecting thereon a fifteen story building which is to be called the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. The ground floor will contain several stores. The building is now about one-third completed and should be ready for occupancy prior to July 1, 1927.

Location: The location of the property is exceptional. The building, which will be the highest hotel structure in Boston, will overlook the Boston Public Garden and Common, open spaces aggregating 72 acres near the heart of the city. Boylston Street, the principal uptown shopping centre, is but one block distant, as are surface lines and the subway station, connecting with all parts of the city. Park Square, a rapidly developing business and mercantile centre, is but two blocks away. The uptown stations of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and the Boston & Albany Railroad are within easy distance. Ample garage facilities are nearby.

Security: These bonds will be secured, in the opinion of counsel, by a closed first mortgage on the land and upon the building which is in course of erection.

Cost and Appraisals: The value of the land has been appraised by Messrs. T. Dennie Boardman, Reginald & R. deB. Boardman at $900,000 and by Messrs. Street & Company at $903,780. Messrs. J. R. Worcester & Co., Engineers, have estimated the minimum cost of the building at $2,100,000, so that the total valuation of the land and building is over $3,000,000 against which these bonds will be outstanding to a maximum amount of less than 66⅔%. If the cost of the building is less than $2,100,000, the amount of bonds must be immediately proportionately reduced.

Lease: An agreement for a lease has been executed with the Ritz-Carlton Hotel Company of Boston to operate the property as a hotel of the highest grade, at a minimum net rental of $240,000 per year for the first five years and $250,000 per year for the balance of the lease, which expires (with renewal privileges) in 1948. The lessee agrees to pay taxes, insurance and maintenance charges on the property. In addition, the Trust will share in the rentals of the stores on the ground floor of the building, in excess of a stipulated amount. The net rental paid to the Ritz-Arlington Trust will, therefore, be at least twice the maximum annual interest requirements on these bonds.

Lessee: The Ritz-Carlton Hotel Company of Boston has been organized and will be controlled by the interests which operate the various Ritz hotels in the United States and Europe, including the Ritz in Paris, the Ritz and the Carlton in London, the Ritz-Carlton Hotels in New York and Atlantic City, which constitute one of the most favorably known hotel systems in the world. The managing director will be Mr. Albert Keller, manager of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in New York, and known as one of the most successful hotel managers in the United States. The Ritz-Carlton Hotel Company of Boston, will furnish and completely equip the building at its own expense.

Sinking Fund: Sinking fund payments beginning in January, 1929, are provided, which will retire approximately half the issue by maturity.

All legal matters pertaining to this issue are subject to the approval of Messrs. Ropes, Gray, Boyden & Perkins for the Bankers, and John S. Slater, Esq., for the Trust.

We offer these bonds when, as and if issued and accepted by us, and subject to the approval of counsel.

Only The Genuine Can Be Genuine

RECORDS of investment houses are like the records behind any kind of desirable merchandise—good and valuable if genuine. But in every field of both finance and industry, jewelry or rugs or records, the public should take care to select the genuine and reject the spurious.

The record of S.W. STRAUS & CO. is a real and genuine one, of 44 years of single-minded devotion to the one field of safe city mortgage investments.

The founder of this business established it in 1869, dealing in farm mortgages, but we have always counted our record as dating from 1882, when we entered the city mortgage field.

In other words, our record is a legitimate one of 44 years under identical policies, management, and control. Every officer and director of this Company is constantly active in its affairs, and has devoted practically his entire business life to its furtherance.

After all, buying bonds is like buying anything else—your best protection lies in the responsibility, the experience and the integrity of the house from which you buy them. Investors seeking sound first mortgage bonds, backed by a genuine record, yielding at present 5.75 to 6.25%, with ample marketability, should write for

New York Athletic's Issue Being Handled by Straus and Others —Investment News.

Approximately $21,000,000 of new bonds will be offered today, the largest issue consisting of $9,060,000 of the obligations of the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company. Other offerings are in the real estate, municipal and public utility groups.

The Seaboard issue is made up of first lien equipment trust 4½ per cent. gold certificates, series Z, offered by a syndicate headed by Dillon, Read & Co. and including Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. and Freeman & Co. The certificates, issued under the Philadelphia plan, are redeemable as a whole but not in part on any dividend date at 105. The issue will mature semi-annually from April 1, 1927, to Oct. 1, 1941, inclusive. S. Davies Warfield, President of the Seaboard, announced that title had been vested with the trustees to new standard equipment worth $11,336,054. The certificates being issued represent 80 per cent. of the value of the equipment.

S. W. Straus & Co. are offering, in cooperation with the national group of bond dealers, an issue of $6,250,000 first and general mortgage fee 6 per cent. sinking fund gold bonds of the New York Athletic Club, the oldest and one of the wealthiest athletic clubs in the United States. The bonds will be secured by a closed first mortgage on the land and a twenty-one story clubhouse to be erected on a full block frontage at Central Park South and Seventh Avenue; also by a closed first mortgage on Travers Island and by a general mortgage on the present New York Athletic Club building and land at Central Park South and Sixth Avenue. The entire property securing the issue is appraised at nearly $10,000,000.

G. L. Ohrstrom & Co., Inc., are offering a new issue of $2,250,000 West Virginia Water Service Company first mortgage 5 per cent. gold bonds, series A, due in 1951 and priced at 92 and interest, to yield over 5.60 per cent. This issue will constitute the only funded debt of the company, which is owned by the Federal Water Service Corporation and which will serve Charleston, Welch and Princeton, W. Va.

Hayden, Stone & Co. and Spencer Trask & Co. have sold $2,000,000 Trustees of Ritz-Carlton Trust first mortgage 6 per cent. 20-year sinking fund gold bonds, priced at 100 and interest. The bonds are secured by a Ritz-Carlton Hotel which is being constructed in Boston.

George H. Burr & Co., H. L. Allen & Co., B. J. Van Ingen & Co. and Seasongood & Mayer are distributing a new issue of $1,463,000 City of Houston, Tex., school district 5 per cent. bonds, due serially from 1931 to 1941, inclusive, and priced to yield 4.50 per cent.

Over subscription was announced of the $7,500,000 Standard Gas & Electric Company 6 per cent. debentures offered by a syndicate headed by H. M. Byllesby & Co., Inc. Rutter & Co. announced for the syndicate that the $2,400,000 of Indiana Consumers Gas & By-Products Company 5½ per cent. bonds had all been sold.

NEWSPRINT OUTPUT GAINS.

Consumption 15% Ahead of Last Year, Says A. R. Graustein.

Consumption of newsprint in the United States and Canada is running at least 15 per cent. ahead of last year, according to an announcement of A. R. Graustein, President of the International Paper Company, accompanying a call for a special meeting, Oct. 28, to authorize the issue of $25,000,000 of 6 per cent. convertible debentures.

The new plant at Three Rivers, Quebec, will be producing at full capacity of 700 tons of newsprint daily in 1927, Mr. Graustein said. The new mill on the Gatineau River near Ottawa, Ontario, should be at full capacity of 600 tons daily by July. Since October of last year the company has acquired more than 10,000,000 cords of pulpwood in the United States and Canada.

Congoleum Tax Cut Reversed.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 7.—The Supreme Court reversed today the action of the State Board of Taxes and Assessment in reducing from $4,631,650 to $2,657,638 the valuation placed for 1925 by the town of Kearny on property of the Nairn Congoleum Company. Kearny officials contended they had no opportunity to dispute the figures.

A Test of the Best In Real Estate Bonds

In the purchase of any investment, the investor should look to the reputation and background of the bond house. But—however great his confidence in the house, his scrutiny should not stop here. The bond he intends to buy should be measured by the unfailing test of safety embodied in these questions:

1. Is the mortgage for less than 60% of property valuation?
2. Is the net income at least 2½ times greatest annual interest charges?
3. Is there a bank trustee for the protection of the bond holders?
4. Are the bonds unconditionally guaranteed as to principal and interest?

Admittedly only a small proportion of real estate bonds can meet these severe requirements—those which represent the ultra conservative in real estate security! The investor seeking greatest safety will find it in the successful application of this test, which is fully explained in the booklet illustrated below. No real estate bond investor can afford to be without it. Write today for your copy of the booklet.

Why women should make wills

Only by a will plus an experienced and reliable executor and trustee can a woman be sure that her property shall be preserved for the benefit of her children and other heirs.

Here are a few of the outstanding dangers to estates which are not so protected:

1. The ceaseless activity of the intentional and shameless crook who sells worthless securities. Gullible trustees and inexperienced investors receive his entire attention.
2. The promoter and his alluring schemes which appear so plausible on paper. He makes it his business to appear when heirs, inexperienced in handling large sums of money, have cash available.
3. The good friend of the family—of good intentions but inexperienced judgment. Unwise investments quickly deplete an estate.
4. The well-meaning individual executor whose personal affairs, extensive travels, or long illness may interest the major part of his activity and result in costly neglect of the estate he oversees.
5. The insidious habit of extravagance which can slowly but surely lead heirs and beneficiaries themselves to living beyond their means until the principal itself, which was left to provide income, is completely dissipated.

Our booklet, How to Protect Your Estate and Your Family, will be mailed upon request, with our Will Memorandum, which when filled out will give your lawyer the information he needs in drawing your will.

To WOMEN—

Selecting a school for your children, protecting their health, planning their amusements, all these things have taken many hours of your time.

Will you spend just an hour in making a will to protect them for all time?

PRICE TREND HIGHER OVER THE COUNTER

Moderate Advances Registered in Industrial and Public Utility Groups.

CHAIN-STORE ISSUES STEADY

Increased Demand for Dividend-Paying Preferred Stocks at Present Levels.

Stocks on the over-the-counter market yesterday gave a good account of themselves. Moderate advances were reported in several industrial issues, and, while these were offset somewhat by a shading of prices in a few of the other groups, there was a better demand reported around current levels for dividend-paying preferred stocks. Chain-store stocks held steady, while there was slight irregularity in the bank shares and insurance group.

Armstrong cork moved up 3 points early in the session, and was followed quickly by a two-point advance in National Fuel Gas and Ziely Processes. Moderate improvement was displayed by Troy Laundry Machine, Winchester first preferred, American Manufacturing, Western Dairy Products B and Lehigh Portland Cement. Senior issues of Bliss, Knox Hat, Merck & Co., Southern Baking and National Equipment came in for a good demand.

Gains of 1 point each were recorded in the utility section by Pine Bluff preferred, United Electric Railways and Nova Scotia Tramway and Power preferred. Several other shares in this section rose fractionally on the day and a generally firm undertone prevailed.

Bankers Trust demonstrated strength early in the day and was up several points but met reaction later in the trading. Longacre was in good demand, and there was a good tone to Chelsea Exchange and American Exchange Pacific.

Insurance issues were quiet, with slight easing in National Union, Globe and Rutgers and Hanover. Several gains were registered in the bond section.

LARGE LOSS OF GOLD BY BANK OF ENGLAND

Net Withdrawal £968,000 for Week—Ratio Reserve to Deposit Above 1925.

The statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes for the week ended Oct. 6, in pounds sterling:

Gold coin and bullion	decreased	£968,000
Reserve in banking dept., gold and notes	decreased	684,000
Notes in circulation	decreased	284,000
Notes in reserve	decreased	683,000

Public deposits	decreased	5,379,000

Proportion of the bank's reserve to deposit liabilities this week is 28.03 per cent.; last week it was 28.66 per cent.; two weeks ago, 30.28 per cent. The percentage of two weeks ago was the highest of the year to date, and was also the highest since Aug. 26, 1925, when it stood at 30.75 per cent.; the lowest reached thus far in 1926 was 15.86 on Jan. 6. The highest percentage since the war was 31.67, on July 29, 1925; the lowest, 7.20, on Dec. 20, 1920.

The statement compares with the corresponding weeks one and two years ago, as follows:

	1926.	1925.	1924.
Total gold holdings	£154,865,000	£160,466,713	£128,481,074

Other securities	72,678,000	75,576,311	73,911,624
Ratio of reserve	28.03	27.28	19.00

The £164,500,152 gold holdings of the Bank of England on Aug. 5, 1925, were the largest in the history of the institution. On April 29, 1925, the week in which gold payment was resumed, they stood at £155,742,064. The lowest holdings since then were £143,711,895, on Jan. 20, last. Before the war the largest amount ever held was £43,634,723, on Jan. 28, 1914.

The bank's official discount rate remains at 5 per cent., to which it was raised from 4 per cent. on Dec. 2, 1925.

BANK OF FRANCE NOTE ISSUES UP 983,871,000

State Borrows 300,000,000 Francs During Week—Discounts Down 1,084,981,000.

The statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes for the week ended Oct. 6, in francs:

Notes in circulation	increased	983,871,000
Treasury deposits	decreased	27,419,000
General deposits	increased	1,615,000
Bills discounted	decreased	1,084,981,000
Advances	increased	141,426,000

The State borrowed 300,000,000 francs from the Bank during the week. Advances to the State now stand at 26,950,000,000 francs, against 30,350,000,000 francs a year ago and 23,100,000,000 francs two years ago. On Dec. 4, 1925, the French Parliament fixed a maximum of 39,500,000,000 francs for such borrowings. Previously the legal limit had been placed at 35,000,000,000 on Nov. 23, 1925; at 32,000,000,000 francs on June 27 and at 26,000,000,000 francs on April 15. The advances of 26,350,000,000 francs reached on July 21 of this year were the highest on record.

The principal items in the statement compare as follows with the same date one and two years ago, in thousands of francs:

	Gold.	Circulation.	Discounts, &c.
1926	5,548,190	55,904,035	7,066,491
1925	5,547,230	40,366,859	6,372,823

Of the total gold holdings above stated 1,864,321,000 francs are reported as "held abroad."

Under the vote of Dec. 4, 1925, the legal limit on note circulation is 58,500,000,000 francs. The law of July 22 this year, transferring to the Bank the foreign exchange held by the Treasury, raised the limit to the amount of the bills transferred, making it 59,431,000,000. The law of Aug. 10 provides that notes issued to purchase gold or foreign exchange shall not be counted in determining the legal limit. The circulation of 57,258,627,000 francs, reached on Aug. 5, this year, was the highest ever recorded at the Bank of France.

The French bank's official discount rate remains at 7½ per cent., to which it was raised from 6 per cent. on July 26, 1926.

GEORGIA & FLORIDA ROAD REORGANIZED

Plan Declared Operative and Bonds to Be Issued Have Been Underwritten.

J. S. WILLIAMS HEADS BOARD

Permanent Officers Are Elected—$4,200,000 Financing Done by New York Concerns.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 7.—The plan for the reorganization of the Georgia & Florida Railway has been declared operative and the securities to be issued under it have been underwritten, subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Temporary organization of the new corporation was effected by the election of John Skelton Williams, founder and receiver of the system, as Chairman of the board; S. W. Purvis, general manager under the receiver, as President, and D.C. Porteous, former director of the Division of Finance of the Railroad Administration Board and for twenty years Secretary of the Seaboard Air Line Railway.

The officers named will be made permanent, but the directors will serve only until the regular board is elected.

First mortgage 6 per cent. twenty-year bonds to the amount of $4,200,000 have been underwritten by a banking group headed by Hayden, Stone & Co. of New York and Boston and Harrison, Smith & Co., New York and Philadelphia. This underwriting has been largely oversubscribed, Mr. Williams said today.

Another group is being formed to underwrite an issue of $1,500,000 non-mortgage income 6 per cent. bonds. The new company, which already has obtained a charter from the State of Georgia, will be known as the Georgia & Florida Railroad.

Under the plan of reorganization cash to the amount of more than $6,000,000 will be raised. Of this sum $3,000,000 will be used to retire obligations of the old company and $2,000,000 set aside for the construction of a fifty-six-mile extension from Augusta, Ga., to Greenwood, S. C., leaving more than $1,000,000 for equipment and corporate purposes.

Mr. Williams already has awarded contracts for 530 freight cars costing $1,000,000. This equipment was partly financed through the sale of $750,000 5 per cent. car trusts. Acquisition of the equipment is expected to reduce materially and perhaps wipe out car hire, which has always been expensive to the Georgia & Florida Railway.

The Georgia court has passed an order directing the sale at foreclosure of all the properties of the Georgia & Florida at Augusta, Ga., on Nov. 1. The Reorganization Committee is expected to be the only bidder.

AUTO OUTPUT STAYS HIGH.

Leading Plants Report Continued Activity—Farm Demand Good.

Maintenance of a level close to the high record weeks of the year is reported by the leading automobile plants during the first week in October, although in some other plants there is a slight downward schedule, according to Automotive Industries.

"The output for October is almost certain to approximate the 400,000 mark, which will compare with 450,000 in October of last year," the periodical reports. "The industry is prepared for lower schedules. A good rate of movement for the balance of the year is expected, especially in the farming districts."

PRICES IRREGULAR IN THE CURB MARKET

Professional Operators Continue to Dominate the Trading—Many New Lows.

Professional operators continued to dominate the trading situation in the curb market yesterday and again prices were decidedly irregular. In many respects, however, stocks were not as vulnerable to attack as they have been the last three days, and although the closing was ragged the general undertone seemed steadier. New low levels were reached by many representative securities as a result of bear pressure but rallying tendencies were more pronounced and according to some commission houses "bargain" buying from public sources increased.

Bears continued to use E. I. du Pont de Nemours new stock and that stock experienced a perpendicular drop to 160 from 169¼ at the close Wednesday. Warner Bros.' Pictures fluctuated above the previous close during the session and ended with a substantial net advance. The new Central Leather common and preferred shares also advanced and several other important stocks improved their positions.

Public utilities experienced sinking spells at times, but in the late dealings the majority inclined toward higher prices. Standard Oils and leading independent shares did not join in the wide movements in other sections of the list and closed firm. The outstanding feature of the bond department was in the German obligations, all of which ruled exceptionally strong under the leadership of the Free State of Hamburg 6s and Prussian 6½s, both of which made new highs on volume dealings.

For Cotton Buying 5 Years Ahead.

The world is consuming cotton at the rate of about 2,000,000 bales per month, and the surplus of the American product this season will not be more than two or three months' consumption, even should the crop reach 17,000,000 bales, according to J. H. Cutter, of J. H. Cutter & Co. He recommends that American manufacturers follow the reported procedure of European interests in buying cotton five years ahead.

COTTON PRICES OFF; TRADE WAITS REPORT

LARGER ESTIMATE SEEN

Exchange Members Prepared for Increased Crop Forecast in Today's Government Report.

The process of evening up accounts in preparation for today's government report continued on the Cotton Exchange yesterday. As a result of active operations of this character earlier in the week, the outstanding short interest had been materially reduced and Southern selling had a more depressing effect on prices. After frequent irregular fluctuations within a range of $1 a bale, final quotations showed a loss of 9 to 17 points. Excellent weather with very little rainfall in any portion of the belt and steady, though less heavy hedging pressure than was the case a week ago, prevented any recoveries of importance.

Several lines of cotton sold at higher levels were covered in the course of the day but the market generally displayed less rallying power. After a morning recovery of 15 points which carried December to 13.35c compared with 13.50c the previous day, steady Southern selling in the shape of small hedging orders for a few hundred bales each supplied contracts in excess of demand. Closing selling in both New Orleans and New York ran the list to lowest prices of the day, with October 25 points over December and the balance of the market about $1 a bale from low levels of the week.

Two crop estimates appeared. The Memphis Commercial Appeal estimated the crop at 15,961,000 bales, and Procter & Gamble increased their estimates by 1,000,000 bales to 16,550,000 bales. The average guess of ninety-five Exchange members was 16,276,000 bales or about 1,000,000 bales in excess of two weeks ago. The Washington report due at 11 o'clock today will compare with 13,810,000 two weeks ago and 14,799,000 last year, when the crop turned out 16,100,000. Census figures on ginnings will compared with 9,851,000 bales in the last report and 7,127,000 a year ago. Ginning during the last period in 1926 amounted to 2,842,000 and in 1924 to 1,862,000.

Record port receipts for the first five days of the week aggregate 628,000 bales, compared with 468,000 last week and 325,000 last year.

WHEAT MARKET UP ON WINNIPEG NEWS

Bad Weather in the Canadian Provinces and Promise of More Rain, the Factor.

STRONG, TOO, AT LIVERPOOL

Sales of 5,000,000 Bushels of Old Grain Interest Corn Dealers, Rye Higher.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—There was materially less pressure on the wheat market today due to the independent strength shown in Winnipeg which was influenced by unfavorable weather in the three Provinces, and the forecast for showers; the finish was at the top with net gains of 1⅜ to 1¼ cents. Winnipeg was up 1⅜ to 2 cents for the day, in the face of selling credited to the Canadian pool. Liverpool was also firm and ¼ pence higher to ½ pence lower.

Spot wheat basis was unsettled with track lots unchanged to 1½ cents lower, as compared with December, while 25,000 bushels of No. 2 hard in store sold at December prices against one cent under recently, a miller being the buyer.

Primary arrivals today were 1,256,000 bushels; week ago, 1,141,000; last year, 1,522,000. Shipments were 1,056,000 bushels; week ago, 1,215,000; last year, 980,000.

Primary arrivals today were 383,000 bushels; week ago, 481,000; last year, 261,000, and shipments 359,000 bushels; week ago, 520,000; last year, 456,000.

WHEAT FUTURES STILL ONGER.

Reports of Rain Indications in Canada Bring Quick Advances.

After a slightly disappointing opening the wheat futures market on the New York Produce Exchange turned strong under the leadership of the Canadian Northwest. Cables were not encouraging and export business was less active, but with the reports of a low barometer in the Canadian Northwest and more rains indicated, there was a quick advance in both domestic and bonded wheat with active buying on the advance.

Receipts of wheat in the Canadian Northwest were fairly liberal, but the total to date is much behind last year and the quality is said to be beginning to reflect the amount of rain. Export demand remained quiet all day, but sales were estimated at 600,000 bushels. The market closed strongest at the high of the day.

EQUITY RECEIVES PROTESTS.

Objects to Committee Interference in G. L. Miller & Co. Affairs.

Lawrence Berenson, Equity Receiver for G. L. Miller & Co., Inc., realty investment bankers, protested yesterday in a written statement to Judge Julian W. Mack of the United States District Court, against the organization at this time of bondholders' committees. He said that such committees are unnecessary.

"As receiver," he said, "I welcome the existence of any responsible committee representing the interests of those bondholders of Miller & Co., mortgages where there is need for the creation of such committees and where such committees will serve the interests of bondholders.

"It appears, however, that out of 137 issues of approximately $60,000,000, my preliminary studies indicate that about 100 issues are adequately secured by properties.

"While it is too early to state with finality that all of these issues are amply secured, there has been no default in such issues, and in many of them there has been substantial amortization, and I am prepared to go so far as to say that in a majority of cases there is no need for the creation of a bondholders committee or the depositing of bonds, or the subjection of bondholders to expense or alarm. It has been my effort to reassure these bondholders as far as I properly could do so."

GOODYEAR REFINANCING OPPOSED BY TRUSTEES

Common Stock Voting Group Rejects Capital and Backs Dividend Proposals.

Special to The New York Times.

AKRON, Ohio, Oct. 7.—Plans for the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company for refinancing the capital structure and liquidating back dividends on the 7 per cent. preferred stock were opposed today by common stock voting trustees.

Following a conference with the other four trustees Frank A. Seiberling, former head of Goodyear and now President of the Seiberling Rubber Company, announced the rejection of the program. The other trustees are S. B. Manton, E. E. Mack, C. R. Erwin and C. L. Robinson.

The trustees have nothing to do with litigation now pending against Goodyear. Attacking the present financing scheme and management, Seiberling said he refused further comment on their action. Suits have been started in the Ohio Supreme Court to cancel the management stock, through which Dillon, Read & Co., and other bankers who financed the company in 1921, retain control. A motion has been filed at Akron to reopen the stockholders' suits attacking the entire 1921 refinancing system, which ended in February, 1923, with a "compromise settlement."

Attorneys representing the present complaining stockholders declared tonight they intended to push the litigation.

The new Goodyear plan provides for scrapping all voting trusts and management stock, replacing present 8 per cent. capital with lower interest bearing bonds and dividends paying preference stock and vesting control in the hands of stockholders.

It is proposed to replace the existing first mortgage bonds, maturing in 1941, the debentures maturing in 1931 and prior preference stock, all bearing 8 per cent. requirements, with $50,000,000 6½ per cent. thirty-year first mortgage bonds, and $14,000,000 7 per cent. new prior preferred stock. Back dividends on preferred stock would be paid in a new stock issue.

RUBBER FUTURES LOWER.

Selling pressure against leading crude rubber futures yesterday accounted for declines of from 10 to 30 points, with December, January, February and March involved in the maximum downward swing. July and November were down 20 points and October 10 points. Only 186 lots changed hands.

The London market was weak, closing with losses of ¼d to ⅜d. The spot price finished at 20⅝d.

Business in the street market was quiet, with a fairly good undertone.

MARKET OPTIMISM WANING.

Sentiment about the stock market has become less optimistic of late and steady distribution, which means selling orders, has been under way, according to Moody's Weekly Review of Financial Conditions, which says:

"Just at this season the Atlantic States are making their maximum payments for agricultural products brought from the interior and this turns what might be called our 'internal balance of trade' against New York for the time being. Our money market feels this burden, which perhaps accounts in part for some of the irregularity in stocks."

RAW SUGAR MARKET DULL.

Feature of Week Is Cuban Ban on Cutting of Cane Before Jan. 1.

Considering the heavy transactions of last week, the raw sugar market was relatively inactive this week, sales approximating 150,000 bags of Cubas to United States and Canadian refiners at 2⅞ cents cost and freight Cuban basis (4.65 cents duty paid). The main development of the week was a report that President Machado had declared that his prohibition of grinding operations before Jan. 1 applied also to cutting of cane before that date. This strengthened the market.

Exports from Cuba were 119,358 tons, reducing Cuban stocks to 1,063,933 tons. Receipts at Atlantic ports were 90,721 tons, meltings 94,000 tons and refiners' stocks 49,000 tons.

Refined sugar is quoted at 5.90 cents by Arbuckle and at 6 cents by all other refiners for prompt and thirty-day contracts, although all refiners are disposed to consider business at 5.90 cents. Federal remains withdrawn. Withdrawals continue so heavy that there has been no improvement in deliveries, delays still ranging from a few days to three weeks. This insures capacity operations for all of October regardless of new business.

Oil Well Supply Merger.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 7.—It is reported in financial circles here that the Continental Supply Company, a subsidiary of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, is endeavoring to bring about a merger with the Oil Well Supply Company, a local concern. Louis Brown, President of the Oil Well Supply Company, when asked about the report that control of the company was to pass to the Youngstown company, issued a denial, saying that in so far as he knew the company was to conduct its business as at present. Mr. Brown is said to control the Oil Well Supply Company.

BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday—4½ per cent. for the best names. Wednesday—4½ per cent. for the best names.

The quotations are for six months' paper.

Good Business in Furniture.

Furniture manufacturers report a volume of business larger than at any time since the period of inflation in 1921. Walnut is practically the only wood used in dining room and bedroom furniture, although a certain amount of mahogany is used in living room and occasional decorative pieces. Fancy wood overlays, such as satin, rosewood, satinwood, maple and ash, are much used in combination with walnut.

Heavyweight Underwear Sought.

Notwithstanding the weakness in raw cotton, a fair business in heavyweight underwear is being placed by jobbers, according to representative selling agents. Buyers need the merchandise now, it is pointed out, and the cool weather recently has stimulated the placing of many small orders with the mills. The cotton situation, however, has tended to upset the basis of trading in heavyweights, and there is a wide variety of quotations with no definite level. This is particularly true of the smaller mills, which have been anxious to book business. The leading mills, so far, have given no indication that they will change their present prices. The demand for lightweights is very dull.

Men's Buttonless Gloves.

Men's gloves without button or fastener will be put on the market the latter part of this month by a leading manufacturer. Although similar to the popular slip-ons, they are so designed as to fit snugly over the wrist. Priced at $5 retail, they come in the light-colored goat, deer and pig skin, which are easily washed in soap and water. In the staple lines capes are said to be stronger than for some seasons past, while gray mochas are less in demand.

Raincoats Much Called For.

Retailers' stocks of the brightly hued gossamer weight raincoats are reported as extremely low, with many manufacturers of the better-grade merchandise unable to book any orders for the remainder of the year. One factory reports that it could sell its product three or four times over, and predicts that the present condition will prevail for some time. No novelties, therefore, in these lines are at present contemplated. It is pointed out that the hand-to-mouth system of buying is especially difficult to cope with by manufacturers who make their own fabrics with the steam-heat system of drying. Makers of the cheaper, acid-dried grades who buy fabrics in the open market, it is said, are better able to meet the situation, although here, too, there is considerable difficulty in supplying the demand.

Hosiery Demand is Very Active.

The present situation in hosiery is the most generally satisfactory one in several years, according to the special news letter of the National Association of Hosiery and Underwear Manufacturers. Business is said to be better distributed than for some time and an insistent demand continues for quick deliveries. In fact, selling agents are hard pressed to make deliveries in accordance with buyers' wishes. There is every indication, the letter continues, that the call for quick shipments will continue for some time. Forward buying is still much of an unknown quantity.

Open Lines of Spring Silks.

A series of designs inspired by Kees van Dongen, Dutch painter of the modern school, features the lines of printed silks for next Spring which Cheney Brothers opened yesterday. The new silks show a symbolic treatment, with florals particularly outstanding. The "dream florals" in the line show a distinct "oil" technique in accordance with Van Dongen's method of applying one layer of color upon another, and blending them with a palette knife. The firm is also featuring "trotteur" silks designed for tailored garments. These silks show small geometric patterns in subdued gray, beige and black combinations. A new weave called chenaire combines the characteristics of sheer and flat crepes. For sports wear the firm is showing a group under the name "les sportives," in which the patterns run to plaid and check formations. Florals are also stressed in printed lingerie silks. The colors being featured by the firm are the sea blues, the grape shades, mahogany, beige, gray and Spring green.

Gray Goods Were Quiet.

With cotton lower and the Government report on the crop to be issued today at noon, there was not much animation to trading in gray goods yesterday. In the small business done were sales of 39-inch 68-72s at 7⅞ cents for spot, with 7⅞ cents ruling for November-December. Also sold were spot lots of 35½-inch 64-60s at 7 cents, with 6⅞ cents quoted for November. Sellers held 39½-inch 60-48s firm at 6 cents for spots. In sheetings there was a sale of 36-inch 5.50s at 6¼ cents for spot goods. Drills were featureless. Sellers reported some contract buying of shirtings, particularly broadcloths.

Belated Orders for Toys.

Considerable activity in last-minute orders for toys is reported by manufacturers, some of whom have been unable to accept further business for the remainder of the year. In general, the conditions in the toy market during the last nine months have been somewhat better than in 1925. Large department stores are opening their holiday toy departments on Nov. 1, at least three weeks earlier than in former years. Most in demand are "scooters" and other wheel goods, as well as constructional and other educational toys.

To Show Fabrics for Spring.

Lines of Spring fabrics for the women's wear trade will be opened on Monday by the Roubaix Mills, Inc. Featured will be high-grade sports fabrics and an extensive line of staple worsteds, with prices ranging from $2.37½ to $4.62½. Several distinctly new weaves will also be shown, according to officials of the company. The trend in the patterns of the fancies run toward neat designs rather than large and outstanding effects. The coatings to be offered will be of casimmere wool. In the plain piece-dyed worsteds the mills will follow the French trend. The weave will be of the poplin type, with silken feel and appearance.

Velvets and Velveteens.

An active demand for staples and novelties in velvets, velveteens and other pile fabrics is reported. Especially popular are the printed velveteens, much used in sport costumes, which come in a large variety of block patterns, squares, moirés, shepherd checks and Scotch plaids. Leopard skins are also much in demand. In general these novelties ranging in price from $2 to $2.50, and are considerably stronger than for some time past. Light cardinals, wine shades, jungle greens and "Valencia," or mistral blue, are the favored colors. In the staple lines black is leading, with Chanel red, jungle green and golden brown also in demand.

CENTRAL PARK FLAT IN $3,200,000 DEAL

IS JUST BEING COMPLETED

Structure Rents for $400,000 a Year—Operators Active in Manhattan.

In a transaction representing an investment of $3,200,000 the fifteen-story apartment house on the southwest corner of Central Park West and Eighty-fourth Street was sold yesterday by the 239 Central Park West Company, of which H. B. Rubin, is the President. The purchaser is Abraham Crosney, the operator. H. D. Baker and A. Robinson negotiated the sale as brokers.

The building has just been completed and was erected by the sellers. It is one of the finest structures overlooking Central Park to be completed this year and is now more than 60 per cent. rented. The site has a frontage of 100 feet on Central Park West and runs back on West Eighty-fourth Street to a depth of 164 feet.

The property is known as 235 to 239 Central Park West and 2 to 8 West Eighty-fourth Street. Before the erection of the present fifteen-story apartment the plot was improved with eight, four-story and basement residences.

The new building is laid out in suites of six, seven, eight and nine rooms each, all apartments being equipped with three and four baths, electric refrigeration, vacuum system and all other highest type of up-to-date equipment. It is estimated to yield a total rental of $400,000 a year.

H. D. Baker and A. Robinson have been active in the sale of properties on Central Park West, where they have sold many large apartment and hotel properties in the past year. They negotiated the sale of the Majestic Hotel on the block front from Seventy-second to Seventy-third Streets and were the brokers who negotiated the sale of the Peter Stuyvesant at Central Park West and Eighty-sixth Street, which deal was closed about a year ago. The same brokers also sold Hartley Hall, a large apartment house on the southwest corner of Central Park West and Ninety-second Street. This deal was made in the Spring when these brokers sold the property for Abraham Crosney, the buyer in yesterday's transaction. Mr. Crosney resold the property through the same brokerage firm, who turned it over again to Max Rosenfeld, operator, the present owner.

APPLICATIONS SWAMP THE LICENSE BUREAU

Many Last-Minute Requests for Renewals Received to Be Cleared Up By Oct. 15.

Real estate brokers and salesmen who have not yet received their licenses for the license year beginning Oct. 1 should not blame the State Tax Department for the delay, according to a State official. Early in August the department mailed applications for renewal to all licensees of record and on or before Oct. 1 had issued licenses on all applications for renewal received prior to Sept. 15; but, as usual, thousands of applications were needlessly delayed until the last minute, and, consequently, it has been impossible for the licensing authorities, with their limited force, promptly to cope with the congestion.

Renewal licenses are now being issued at the rate of a thousand a day and, by Oct. 15, practically all properly executed applications received on or before Oct. 1 will have gone through the mill. In all such cases, of course, the licenses will be dated as of Oct. 1. Many of the applications received prior to Oct. 1 are more or less deficient in statements of fact or mode of execution, and licenses will not be issued thereon until the applications are perfected and are reached in their regular order.

SHORTAGE OF WATER STILL ACUTE HERE

PUBLIC AID IS SOUGHT

City Department Sends Circulars to Schools and Apartment Owners Urging Conservation.

The water shortage in New York City's principal source of supply—the Ashokan reservoir in the Catskills—is still acute, according to information made public yesterday from the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, in the Municipal Building, although there have been two helpful rainfalls since the first of the month. On Oct. 1 there was a precipitation of .13 of an inch of rain throughout the Catskill watershed and on Oct. 5 a more generous fall of .83 of an inch did something toward replenishing the supply.

"That has helped the situation somewhat," said Timothy W. Hickey, Registrar of the department, "but the volume of water gained has been insufficient to offset the daily drain from the Ashokan reservoir and there still remains the most imperative need of a rigid economy in the use of water and a careful elimination of all waste.

"This department has taken several steps to assure public cooperation in its campaign for water conservation. We have sent letters to the Borough Presidents and to the members of the Board of Education, pointing out the necessity for checking all water waste in the public buildings and the public schools. Similar circular letters, to the number of 4,000, have been sent to hospitals, churches, clubs, large holders of real estate, proprietors of apartment houses, hotels and others.

"This department also, through the cooperation of the Department of Education, is engaged in sending out 1,500,000 printed circulars of the same import to the teachers and pupils of the public schools. These are intended to reach the parents as well. They are urged to stop all household leaks and other waste.

"As another measure of economy the department began last Tuesday revoking all city permits for the use of garden hose for the sprinkling of lawns, the cleansing of sidewalks and for all other similar purposes. This order already has resulted in the cancellation of 4,000 such permits throughout the city, and the inhibition is to remain effective until further notice."

Reports received by the engineers of the department said that at 8 o'clock A. M. last Wednesday the Ashokan reservoir, showing tree stumps and exposed patches of its bottom bed in the shallow spots here and there, contained 20,721,000,000 gallons of water, or approximately one-sixth of its capacity. It was lower in 1923, when it went to approximately 16,000,000,000 gallons, but recouped under rainfall of sufficient volume.

The Kensico reservoir at the same time Wednesday was holding 32,014,000,000 gallons of water, making it practically filled to capacity. It was, however, being held in reserve in case of an emergency. The Croton reservoir, which feeds various sections of the metropolitan district, substitutes at night for the Ashokan reservoir in districts south of Fourteenth Street.

"WS" HORNBOOK FOUND.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The discovery of what may prove to be a relic of Shakespeare, a hornbook, or child's primer, with the poet's initials scratched upon it, has been made at Anne Hathaway's cottage at Shottery.

While removing a partition in one of the bedrooms the oak mount of a hornbook was found. Carved with a penknife on the back are the owner's initials. These initials have been variously read by experts as WS and WB, with the majority in favor of the former.

PALESTINE JEWS PROTEST.

Petition Governor Not to Let Arabs Repair Rachel's Tomb.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 7 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—The Jewish Community Council today submitted a protest to the Governor of Jerusalem against the granting of a contract to Arabs to repair what is traditionally known as Rachel's tomb, about four miles from Jerusalem.

The chief rabbinate of Palestine also has protested, declaring that Rachel's tomb is one of the Jewish holy sites in Palestine, and in accordance with the provisions of the Palestine mandate the care of this site should be left to the Jewish community.

The tomb of Rachel has been an object of veneration to the Jews for more than 3,000 years. The Crusaders erected upon the tomb a building about twenty-four feet square, which was crowned by a cupola. Since then it has been repeatedly restored. Sir Moses Montefiore secured the key of the tomb in 1841 for the use of the Jews. The monument is much visited by pilgrims.

WOMEN ASK TO STAY IRISH.

Want to Retain Nationality When Married to Foreigners.

DUBLIN, Oct. 7 (AP).—The National Council of the Women of Ireland has sent to the Irish Free State delegates to the coming Imperial Conference, a memorandum claiming for women the right to retain their nationality on marriage with foreigners. Sixteen nations are said to have granted this right.

The memorandum points out the case of an Irishwoman who married an Italian and lived with him all her life in Ireland. She survived him by many years and continued to live in Ireland, but an old-age pension was refused her on the ground that her nationality was Italian.

ROOSEVELT RETURNING FOR AN OPERATION

Colonel Ends Campaign Tour in Indiana—May Enter Hospital Here.

Special to The New York Times.

GOSHEN, Ind., Oct. 7.—A carbuncle on the neck of Theodore Roosevelt has become so serious as to necessitate an operation at once.

Colonel Roosevelt, who spoke at Lagrange this afternoon, was to have delivered a speech here tonight. He canceled the engagement, however, upon his arrival by motor and was so exhausted and suffering such pain that in half an hour he was aboard a train bound for New York, where, it was said, he would enter a hospital upon his arrival.

Colonel Roosevelt filled his engagement at the Lagrange Corn Show against the advice of his physician, and when it was suggested that he merely go to the theatre here tonight and be introduced to the audience the plan was vetoed by the physician.

The carbuncle first troubled Colonel Roosevelt several days ago while he was going from Cincinnati to Evansville, Ind., to speak at a Republican meeting. He abandoned his Evansville engagement and went to Chicago for medical care, later going to Minnesota for two addresses.

At Theodore Roosevelt's office here yesterday it was said that the carbuncle from which he is suffering was not the cause of his decision to return to New York. He had planned when he left to return today. His associates and members of his family discounted the seriousness of his ailment as reported from Chicago and said they had no information as to what hospital, if any, he would go to. He is expected to arrive this afternoon.

OPEN SEASON FOR GAME COMMENCES NEXT WEEK

Shotguns, Rifles, Decoys and Clothes for the Shooting Enthusiast at Macy's, at a Big Saving of Financial Ammunition.

One week from tomorrow, the open season for duck and snipe begins in Long Island and New Jersey. The marshes will be full of marksmen, and every shot will whet an appetite. In New York State, the deer season starts a week from today, to last just a month.

Wherefore be warned. And be advised also that the warning may best be heeded at Macy's, in the Sporting Goods Shop on the fifth floor. For there are all the arms and munitions necessary to the shooting expedition—including warm waterproof boots and clothes, and even decoy ducks of almost every species. And prices will be found very low.

For the birds, the department's especial pride is the twelve-gauge Ithaca shotgun at twenty-nine dollars and seventy-five cents. The precision of this arm has been the making of many a reputation in the blinds. The hunter will find also L. C. Smith, Parker, Fox, Winchester and Remington shotguns, of many types.

The wary doe and her consort, the swift-running buck, however, cannot be stayed by mere pellets of lead. For them the powerful bullet, deadly aimed, is the thing. Here again the Sporting Goods Shop rises to the demand, and speaks of the high-powered Winchester "54" rifle, at fifty-four dollars and fifty cents, equipped with the Lyman micrometer receiver sight for windage and elevation, and pistol-grip stock. This weapon not only kills deer, but knocks them down.

Another excellent gun is the Savage .300 calibre, which costs less, though similarly equipped.

One of the newest developments of the hunting coat is one with a bellows pack sewn into the back, extending from tail to shoulder. Those celebrated socks with the red tops, so good to the huntsman of a chill morning, also may be had at Macy's.

Bellows Cases en Tour

Soon the annual Southern hegira will be well under way, and tourists who are foresighted will find Macy's Luggage Department on the fifth floor helpful in their plans. One of the best offerings is a suitcase of English russet cowhide, with double bellows integral, one on either side, so that the balance is always maintained. This may be had twenty-six, twenty-eight or thirty inches long. The minimum width is seven inches and the maximum fourteen. The frame is steel, the case is cloth-lined, there are solid brass fittings, and the price is forty-four dollars and fifty cents.

MERCHANDISE ADVERTISED HERE BY MACY'S TODAY will be on sale today and tomorrow unless otherwise specified.

Special Sale Today of Shirts, Pajamas

A SPECIAL SALE of hundreds of shirts, neckties and pajamas, on the fourth floor, at Macy's, continues today. For the benefit of men who wish to save money without deprivation.

The shirts are only a dollar and nineteen cents, though of woven and corded madras and broadcloths. The neckties are fifty-nine cents, in moir s, scrolls, stripes and figures. And for a dollar-nineteen one may sleep in warm, downy domet flannel pajamas.
